When an Assembly bill has been received by the Senate, with a message announcing that it has passed the Assembly, such bill shall be read the first time and be referred by the President to a standing committee; provided, however, that when an Assembly bill is received, the text of which is stated by a member to be identical with that of a Senate bill which has already been considered and reported by a standing committee of the Senate, such Assembly bill shall be referred to the Committee on Engrossment, Enrollment and Printing for comparison, which committee shall report without delay whether or not such bill is identical with the Senate bill. If reported identical, such Assembly bill shall be substituted for the Senate bill, shall take its place on the second-reading file and be considered as having received the same committee recommendation as the Senate bill; provided, that the fact that the bills are identical shall be entered in the Journal. Such Senate bill shall thereupon be placed upon the file of unfinished business.

Reference of Appropriation Bills.

29. All bills appropriating money from any funds shall be referred to the Committee on Finance before being read the second time. Concurrent resolutions for adjournment sine die shall in all cases, whether originating in the Senate or coming from the Assembly, be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Notice to Author of Bill.

30. The chairman or clerk of each committee of the Senate shall notify the author of any bill or resolution pending before such committee of the hour and place of hearing or acting upon such bill or proceeding.

Committee Amendments to Bills.

31. When amendments to a bill are reported by a committee, the clerk of such committee shall prepare three copies of each amendment, one to go with the bill to the Superintendent of State Printing, one to the Minute Clerk, and one to the Secretary of the Senate.

Reports of Committees.

32. All committees shall act upon bills referred to them as soon as practicable, and when acted upon each bill shall be reported back to the Senate forthwith, and the chairman of each committee is charged with the observance of this rule, provided, that the Senate may at any time, by a majority vote, recall a bill from any committee.

Order of Considering Bills—Order of Making File.

33. When bills are reported from committees they shall be placed upon the General File, to be kept by the Secretary as follows: All bills when reported to the Senate by the committee shall be placed at the foot of the second-reading file, in the order in which the reports are made, and after the second reading they shall be placed at the foot of the third-reading file, in the order of reading, and precedence shall be given in the consideration of bills in the following order: Second-reading file and third-reading file, unless otherwise ordered by unanimous consent or by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. The bills upon third reading shall be considered in the order in which they appear upon the file, unless otherwise ordered by unanimous consent or by vote of majority of the members present; such vote to be taken by roll call; provided, that if a bill is passed on file for any reason, other than absence of the author by leave of the Senate, note of the fact shall be made in the General File, and when passed on file a second time, the bill shall be ordered at the foot of the file, and notice of the fact of the bill having been passed on file prior to the order placing it at the foot of the file shall be omitted from the General File.

The General File.

34. The General File shall be the special order for each day between such hours as the Senate may determine, unless sooner disposed of; but no bill shall lose its place upon the file by expiration of the time or by adjournment of the Senate while it is under consideration.

Special Order.

35. Any subject may, by vote of a majority of those voting, be made a special order, and when the time fixed for its consideration arrives, the presiding officer shall lay it before the Senate.

Three Readings of Bills.

36. Every bill shall be read on three several days previous to its passage (unless in case of urgency, two-thirds of the membership of the Senate in which it is being considered shall by vote of the ayes and noes dispense with this provision).

Ordering Bills to Third Reading.

37. After being read the second time bills shall be ordered by the President to third reading (or, in the case of Senate bills, to engrossment and third reading). When any member makes objection to any bill thus being ordered to third reading, the final question for such bill shall be "Shall the bill be ordered to third reading?"

Bills Considered During Last Seven Days.

38. No Senate bill shall be passed by the Senate within seven days of the time set for adjournment sine die of the two houses of the Legislature unless permission to vote on such a bill be granted by a three-fourths vote of the entire membership of the Senate, voting by roll call.

Questions and Motions—Precedence of Motions During Debate.

39. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received but the following privileged questions, which shall have precedence in the following order:

1. To adjourn.
2. For a call of the Senate.
3. To lay on the table.
4. To postpone to a day certain.
5. To commit.
6. To amend.
7. To postpone indefinitely.

Provided, however, that during a call of the Senate, it may consider and transact any matter or business that the Senators then present shall unanimously decide to consider, but no call of the Senate shall be had, during a call of the Senate, on any matter so taken up or considered while the Senate is under call. When a call of the Senate is ordered, pending the completion of a roll call, the pending roll call shall become unfinished business, the consideration of which shall be continued until further proceedings under the call of the Senate are dispensed with, when it will forthwith become the order of business before the Senate.

Amendment or Division of Question.

40. An amendment may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill. When an amendment proposed to any pending measure shall be laid on the table, it shall not carry with it or prejudice such measure.

If the question in debate contains several propositions, any Senator may have the same divided; except a motion to strike out and insert shall not be divided. The rejection of a motion to strike out and insert one proposition shall not prevent a motion to strike out and insert a different proposition, nor shall it prevent a motion to simply strike out, nor shall the rejection of a motion to strike out prevent a motion to strike out and insert; but pending a motion to strike out and insert, the part to be stricken out and the part to be inserted shall each be regarded, for the purpose of amendment, as a question. Motion to amend the part to be stricken out shall have precedence.

Restrictions as to Amendments.

41. A substitute or amendment must relate to the same subject as the original bill, resolution or constitutional amendment under consideration.

Vote Required for Amendments.

42. A constitutional amendment or bill requiring a vote of two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate for final adoption or passage may be amended by a majority of those voting.

Procedure of Debate—Seconding and Announcement of Motion.

43. No motion shall be debated until the same be seconded and distinctly announced by the President; and it shall be reduced to writing if desired by the President or any Senator, and read by the Secretary, before the same shall be debated.

Regulations as to Speaking.

44. 1. When a Senator desires to address the Senate, he shall rise in his place, address the President, and when recognized he shall proceed to speak.

2. No Senator shall speak more than twice in any one debate on the same day and at the same stage of the bill, without leave; and Senators who have once spoken shall not again be entitled to the floor (except for explanation) so long as any Senator who has not spoken desires to speak.

3. No Senator shall be interrupted when speaking, and no question shall be asked him except those through the presiding officer.

4. The author of a bill, motion, or resolution shall have the privilege of closing the debate.

Securing of the Floor.

45. When two or more Senators arise at the same time to address the Senate, the presiding officer shall designate the Senator who is entitled to the floor.

Order in Debate.

46. When a Senator shall be called to order he shall sit down until the President shall have determined whether he is in order or not; and every question of order shall be decided by the President, subject to an appeal to the Senate by any Senator. If a Senator be called to order for words spoken, the objectionable language shall immediately be taken down in writing by the Secretary of the Senate.

The Previous Question.

47. The previous question shall be put in the following form: "Shall the question be now put?" It shall be admitted only when demanded by a majority of the Senators present upon division; and its effect shall be to put an end to all debate except that the author of the bill or the amendments shall have the right to close, and the question under discussion shall thereupon be immediately put to a vote. On a motion for the previous question prior to a vote being taken by the Senate, a call of the Senate shall be in order.

Executive Session.

48. When a motion is adopted to close the doors of the Senate, on the discussion of any business which may, in the opinion of the Senate, require an executive session, the President shall require all persons, except the Senators, President of the Senate, Secretary, Minute Clerk, and Sergeant-at-Arms, to withdraw, and during the discussion of said business the doors shall remain closed. Every Senator and officer present shall keep secret all matters and proceedings concerning which secrecy shall be enjoined by order of the Senate.

Voting by Senate—Calling Ayes and Noes.

49. When the ayes and noes shall be called for by three members present, every member within the bar of the Senate at the time the question was put shall declare openly, and without debate, assent or dissent to the question. In taking the ayes and noes, and upon call of the Senate, the names of the Senators shall be taken alphabetically. When the ayes and noes shall be taken upon any question in pursuance of this rule, no Senator shall be permitted, under any circumstances whatever, to vote after the announcement of the vote by the presiding officer.

Excused from Voting.

50. When a Senator declines to vote on a call of his name he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and having assigned them, the presiding officer shall submit the question to the Senate: "Shall the Senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate. And these proceedings shall be had after the roll call and before the result is announced, and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement.

Reconsideration of Vote.

51. On the day succeeding that on which a final vote on any bill, concurrent or joint resolution, or constitutional amendment has been taken, said vote may be reconsidered on motion of any Senator; provided, notice of intention to move such reconsideration shall have been given on the day on which such final vote was taken, by a Senator voting with the prevailing side; and it shall not be in order to reconsider on the day on which such final vote was taken. Said motion for reconsideration shall have precedence over every other motion, except a motion to adjourn. It shall require twenty-one votes to carry any motion to reconsider the vote by which any bill, concurrent or joint resolution, has been passed or defeated, fourteen votes to reconsider the vote by which any constitutional amendment has been passed, and twenty-seven votes to carry any motion to reconsider the vote by which any constitutional amendment has been defeated. Notice of reconsideration of the vote by which a Senate bill was passed, or a Senate joint resolution, Senate concurrent resolution or Senate constitutional amendment adopted, shall not be in order on or after the eighth day preceding the last day of the session. No notice of reconsideration shall be in order on the day preceding the last day of the session.

When Bill Is Held for Reconsideration.

52. If a Senator gives notice that he intends to move a reconsideration, the Secretary shall not transmit the bill, concurrent or joint resolution, or constitutional amendment to the Assembly till the reconsideration is disposed of, or the time for moving the same has expired, unless the bill or resolution has already been transmitted to the Assembly.

When a Bill Is Recalled for Reconsideration.

53. When a bill, resolution, amendment, order or message upon which a vote has been taken shall have gone out of the possession of the Senate and been communicated to the Assembly, a motion to reconsider shall be preceded by a motion to request the Assembly to return the same, which last-named motion shall be acted upon immediately and without debate, and if determined in the negative shall be a final disposition of the motion to reconsider.

Debate on Motion to Reconsider.

54. A Senator, after a notice to reconsider is given, as provided in Rule 53, shall, at the reconsideration thereof, present the main question in his argument thereon, and the same shall be debated by the Senate, provided that the subject matter is debatable, and the vote on reconsideration shall be on the merits of the main question.

Messengers and Other Papers—Messengers from the Governor.

55. Messengers from the Governor may be introduced at any stage of business except while a question is being put, while the ayes and noes are being called, while ballots are being counted, or while a Senator is addressing the Senate.

Messengers from the Assembly.

56. Messengers from the Assembly may be introduced at any stage of business, except while a question is being put, while the ayes and noes are being called, while ballots are being counted, or while a member is addressing the Senate.

Consideration of Assembly Messages.

57. Messages from the Assembly may be considered when indicated by the Order of Business, or at any other time, by unanimous consent, or by vote of the Senate.

Reading of Papers.

58. When the reading of a paper (except a petition) is called for, and the same is objected to by any Senator, the question shall be determined by a vote of the Senate.

Contents of Senate Journal—Proceedings to Be Printed.

59. The proceedings of the Senate, when not acting as a Committee of the Whole, shall be entered in the Journal as concisely as possible, care being taken to record a true and accurate account of the proceedings.

Titles of Bills to Be Printed.

60. The titles of all bills, joint and concurrent resolutions, and constitutional amendments introduced shall be printed in the Journal.

Statement of Petitions to Be Printed.

61. Every vote and a brief statement of the contents of each petition, memorial, or paper presented to the Senate shall be entered in the Journal.

62. Messages from the Governor (other than biennial messages and inaugural addresses), joint and concurrent resolutions and constitutional amendments, when adopted, and the titles of all bills, joint and concurrent resolutions and constitutional amendments, when acted upon by the Senate, shall be printed in the Journal in full; provided, that in case of a concurrent resolution offering the adoption of a charter or charter amendments of any kind, the text of such charter or charter amendments shall not be printed in the Journal.

Legislative Printing—Number of Bills Printed.

63. Fifteen hundred copies of all bills shall be printed; and the Sergeant-at-Arms shall be required to certify to the reception by the Senate of all printed matter, and the quantity. One copy of each bill or paper printed by order of the Senate shall be delivered to each Senator at his desk, and the balance shall be distributed according to law.

Number of Journals Printed.

64. The Superintendent of State Printing shall print one thousand copies of the Journal of each day's proceedings of the Senate, and one copy of the same shall be placed upon each Senator's desk, and a sufficient number sent to the Assembly to supply each Assemblyman with one copy; he shall also print a sufficient number of copies, properly paged, to bind in book form as the Journal of the Senate, at the end of the session, as required by law.

Number of Other Documents Printed.

65. Seven hundred fifty copies shall be printed of each document or other matter ordered, unless the Senate especially directs a different number.

Excess Printing Only on Written Order.

66. The Superintendent of State Printing shall not print for the use of the Senate any matter other than provided by law, unless upon a written order signed by the Secretary. The Secretary may, when necessity requires it, order from the State Printer such printing as he deems necessary to be printed in advance of the regular order of business, under specially prepared written order, to be known as a "Rush Order."

Form of Printing Amendments.

67. All bills amended by either house shall be immediately reprinted; in case new matter is added by the amendment, such new matter shall be printed in italics in the printed bill; and in case of matter being omitted, the matter to be omitted shall be printed in type bearing a single horizontal line through the center and commonly known as "strike-out" type. When a bill amendatory of a code section or a general law is engrossed, all figures or symbols shall be removed and the bill shall be printed in the usual roman type.

The Senate Chamber—Admission Within Bar of Senate.

68. It shall be the duty of the gatekeeper to prevent all persons, except Senators, ex-Senators, members of the Assembly, State officers, officers of the two houses, and such accredited newspaper representatives as have seats assigned to them by the President, from coming within the bar of the Senate, unless upon invitation of the President or a Senator; provided, that no visitor shall be allowed upon the floor while the Senate is in session.

No Lobbying in Senate Chamber.

69. No person engaged in presenting to the Senate or any of its committees any business, claim, or legislation, shall be permitted to engage in such business in the Senate Chamber or be permitted on the floor of the Senate at any time while the Senate is in session. Any person transgressing this rule shall be removed from the floor of the Senate and shall be debarred from the privilege of the floor during the remainder of the entire session. The President and President pro tempore are charged with the enforcement of this rule, and this rule can not be suspended except by a two-thirds vote of the entire Senate.

Smoking Within Senate Chamber.

71. No smoking shall be allowed within the Senate Chamber when objected to by the presiding officer or by any five members.

Miscellaneous Provisions—Duties of Members.

72. No Senator shall absent himself from attendance upon the Senate without leave first obtained. A less number than a quorum of the Senate is hereby authorized to send the Sergeant-at-Arms, or any other person, for any and all absent Senators at the expense of such absent Senators, respectively, unless such excuse for nonattendance as shall be made to the Senate, when a quorum is convened, shall be judged sufficient, and in that case the expense shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and this rule shall apply as well to the first convention of the Senate, at the legal time of meeting, as to each day of the session after the hour has arrived to which the Senate stood adjourned. The President or Acting President of the Senate, or less than a quorum present, shall have the power to issue process directly to the Sergeant-at-Arms, or to any other person, to compel the attendance of Senators absent without leave. Any Senator who shall refuse to obey such process unless sick or unable to attend, shall be deemed guilty of contempt of the Senate, and the Sergeant-at-Arms, or any other person, to whom such process may be directed, shall have power to use such force as may be necessary to compel the attendance of such absent Senator, and for this purpose he may command the force of the county, or of any county in the State.

Call of the Senate.

73. Upon a motion being carried for a call of the Senate the President shall immediately order the doors to be closed, and shall direct the Secretary to call the names of the absentees as disclosed by the last previous roll call. Thereupon no one shall be permitted to leave or enter the Senate except by written permission of the President or President pro tempore, or except such members as are taken into custody as herein provided. Those members who are found to be absent and for whom no excuse or insufficient excuses are made, may, by order of those present, be taken into custody, as they appear, or may be sent for and then taken into custody by the Sergeant-at-Arms wherever found, or by special messenger to be appointed for that purpose. In the absence of a quorum, a majority of the members present may order a roll call of the Senate and compel the attendance of absentees in the manner above provided. No recess can be taken during a call of the Senate.

Parliamentary Rules.

74. In all cases not provided for by these rules, or by the Joint Rules of Senate and Assembly, the authority shall be Robert's Rules of Order.

Suspension or Change of Rules.

75. No standing rules or order of the Senate shall be rescinded or changed without a vote of two-thirds of the entire Senate, and one day's notice being given of the motion therefor; but a rule or order may be suspended temporarily by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the Senate, except that portion of Rule 13, relating to the order of enrolling bills. MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The following message from the Governor was received and read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of California.

I am submitting herewith copies of my Second Biennial Message as provided in section 10, article V of the State constitution. If any member of either house desires additional copies of this message I trust that he will inform this office.

Yours very respectfully,

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

January 5, 1931.

Also:

The following message was received and ordered printed in the Journal:

FOREWORD.

In presenting this lengthy message to the Legislature, I am not so sanguine as to believe that any reader will at any one time have the patience to labor through it in its entirety. I have felt, however, that it may be of interest to picture in considerable detail the present status of California State government in all its phases.

By the aid of the table of contents and the index it will not be difficult, I hope, to learn just how far we have progressed at the present date in solving the multitude of problems which are before us. We have taken this task very seriously these past four years, and I believe can look back on many accomplishments which have been worth while.

What we have done, however, means little unless we have left our work in such condition that it can be taken up and improved upon by those who follow us. Government is a living, growing thing, and it is my sincere wish that the administration which is just beginning may achieve a governmental record better than any which has gone before.

Those of us who are today handing our work over to our successors have desired to leave behind a handbook which may aid them in their future endeavors. The preparation of this message has meant a month of very busy work, but if it may prove of any assistance either to the Legislature or to the various departments in the administration of the incoming Governor, that month will not have been spent in vain.

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

January 5, 1931.

SECOND BIENNIAL MESSAGE

OF

GOVERNOR C. C. YOUNG

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, January 5, 1931.

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of California.

In my message which I submitted to you two years ago, I called attention to the fact that the provision for a Governor's message to the Legislature is as old as is the history of California; since section 10 of article V, where this provision is made, appears not only in our present State constitution, but is copied verbatim from the same section and article in the original constitution of 1849. In that section it is required that the Governor "shall communicate, by message to the Legislature at every session, the condition of the State, and recommend such matters as he shall deem expedient."

PURPOSE OF EXECUTIVE MESSAGE.

There are two executive messages which are always submitted to a Legislature at the beginning to its regular session. One is this biennial message to which I have just referred; the other is the budget message containing recommendations as to State expenditures for the ensuing biennial period. Whenever there is a change in a State administration, this latter message is, by section 34, article IV of the constitution, committed to the incoming Governor; and properly so for the reason that all these expenditures will be made during his term of office, and he alone should therefore have the privilege and responsibility of determining the amounts to be allotted to various departments, institutions, and other governmental agencies. However, the biennial message, such as I am here submitting, has always been the task of the outgoing Governor, because he is required not only to "recommend matters" to the Legislature, but also to outline "the condition of the State," as he hands the reins of government over to his successor.

In this message I shall devote most of my attention to that portion of the constitutional requirement which directs me to report "the condition of the State," and shall show as clearly as I am able what has been accomplished during these past years by our State departments and other governmental agencies. Whatever recommendations are made will be only as dictated by past experience, and I shall present them exactly as if I were to be here in helping you carry them out. For, after all, the finest thing about the government of our American states is the recognition that it is a continuing function, where individuals mean little but where a continuous policy for the public welfare means much. For this reason I am happy to assume that your new Governor, whom you are about to inaugurate, will continue and improve upon all the constructive accomplishments which all his predecessors have woven into the fabric of our State's history.

STUDIES IN LONG-TIME PLANNING.

In my message of two years ago I stated that the present State administration recognizes that this particular period of our governmental history may well be marked by long-time planning of public policies; that if State government is to keep in step with the State's progress in other directions, it must make wise preparation for the future instead of focusing its attention merely upon the immediate needs of the present. With this in mind, a great deal of time and attention has been devoted to the making of studies and the perfecting of plans, which, through the coordinated effort of the executive and the legislative branches of government, will help insure the progressive development of our State through many years to come. A brief mention of a few accomplishments along this line will serve for illustration.

A ten-year building program has been devised to take the place of the hit-or-miss, hand-to-mouth plan of State building that has heretofore prevailed. A similar program, looking far into the future, was laid out for our State highway system. The growing tendency to construct private toll bridges was checked by the establishment of a State policy as to future bridges, with the carefully prepared plans for a publicly built, publicly operated bay bridge as the outstanding achievement of that policy. The pressing needs for water conservation in our rapidly growing State have been recognized through the work of a commission, which is just completing what will probably stand forth as the most comprehensive study ever made on such a subject. These are a few of the plans for the future along material lines which have occupied the past two years.

PROPOSED GOVERNMENTAL CHANGES.

In the field of governmental affairs, I may mention the work which a commission of fifteen members has been giving to our State constitution, with a view to making recommendations which will inspire public confidence in our first scientific attempt at constitutional revision. Another commission has been studying the subject of county government, with a view to suggesting some more rational and economical plan than the present unwieldy system which so burdens each legislative session. A third commission of eminent lawyers has been devoting many weeks to the problem of code revision, to see if there can not be devised a simpler codification of our laws, possibly somewhat in the nature of the School Code which was adopted two years ago. Still another commission has been at work on plans for stabilizing the financing of irrigation and reclamation districts, so that the bonds of these districts may be more readily marketable, and the interest charges may be reduced to more reasonable limits. All these commissions are giving freely of their time, without remuneration, to make some contribution toward a sounder and better governmental structure for California.

One of the most important studies of this kind which is now in process is directed toward the educational system of the State. We are all exceedingly proud of our public schools and are willing to contribute liberally to their support. At the same time, in view of the fact that their total cost from combined State and local sources far exceeds any other governmental expenditure, it is wise to determine whether they are fully meeting the needs of the present day, and whether any changes are possible from the standpoint of either efficiency of results or economy of operation. In order to supplement the fine work on this subject which is being continuously carried on by the teaching profession, this particular investigation has been entrusted to a lay commission. A vast amount of work has been done by the members of this commission, and the results of their labors will soon be before you.

TAX INVESTIGATION.

In addition to all these studies which are being carried on by statutory provision, there are other similar studies on the part of legislative committees created for that purpose. Inasmuch as these are your own committees, whose reports will be made directly to yourselves as members of the Legislature, a discussion of their activities naturally would not fall within the scope of this message. There is one of these committees, however, which is carrying on an investigation previously started by a statutory commission, and which is directed toward a problem so intimately connected with the administrative side of government that it manifestly calls for some discussion. I refer to the Legislative Tax Committee and the California Tax Commission, which have been occupied with California's tax problem during the past four years.

As I said above, the significant thing about all this work and these investigations, whether conducted by legislative committees or by executive commissions, is the fact that they not only are concerned with immediate governmental problems, but also are surveying the needs and opportunities for constructive governmental progress in the years to come. With this in mind, I shall at this time briefly call attention to some of these matters which during the past two years have been engaging our attention. Some of them, in the shape of reports, will later be presented to you in a more formal way. Here they can amount to little more than a mere enumeration.

TEN-YEAR BUILDING PROGRAM.

The ten-year building program for State institutions was devised some three years ago to replace the former expensive method of planning only at the demands of immediate urgency. The old haphazard way of providing for the building needs of institutions had not only favored some institutions at the expense of others where the need was really greater, but had also failed to keep pace with the constantly increasing institutional requirements.

A survey of conditions made it clear that there were four requirements in these institutional needs which must be met: 1. Provision of additional capacity to relieve present overcrowded conditions. 2. Provision of additional capacity for population properly entitled to admission, but excluded for lack of accommodations. 3. Provision of additional capacity for the normal increase in institution population from one biennium to another. 4. Provision for replacing existing structures as they become obsolete and unfit for occupancy.

It was at once obvious that to fulfill these four requirements would be more than could properly be expected of any one legislative appropriation. After considerable study it was determined to work out a comprehensive plan by which a ten-year building program for each of the teachers colleges, hospitals, prisons, correctional schools, and other institutions of the State, would result in the best possible building plant for each at the end of this ten-year period, replacing such buildings as must be abandoned by that time and providing adequate space for the estimated population which must be accommodated.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE PROGRAM.

In order to determine upon the latter, curves were plotted showing the growth of the State and of each of the institutions of the State from 1907 to 1927, when this survey was made, and projected forward from 1927 to 1947, thus showing the actual population increase for twenty years in the past and the anticipated increase for twenty years in the future. After the lapse of three years it is interesting to note the almost uncanny accuracy of these forecasts. For instance, it was predicted that the population of the State in 1930 would be 5,606,000, or within one per cent of the results shown by the census. It was predicted that the patients in our mental hospitals by 1930 would total 14,988, whereas the actual total was 14,906, or within one-half of one per cent. It was calculated that the inmates in the homes for the feeble-minded would number 2742, whereas their actual number was 2715; and so on all along the line.

On the basis of these first scientific forecasts of population, a detailed estimate of needs over a range of five biennial periods was prepared—all through the cooperation of the various directors, the heads of the institutions concerned and the Department of Public Works. This program is designed to make necessary replacements, provide for anticipated growth, and so take up the slack of present overcrowding and lack of accommodations as to put the physical plant of the institution in the best possible condition at the end of ten years, by approaching nearer and nearer to that goal at each biennium of that period.

This plan has been developed to the extent that specific buildings are recommended as a fixed program to be followed out by each Legislature until 1938 for each of some thirty State institutions. It is of course fully recognized that no future Governor or Legislature is bound by the program; yet it has been based so carefully on existing facts and painstaking forecasts that it is believed there will be no reason to overthrow it or to modify it greatly, except as new and unforeseen conditions may arise in the case of some of the institutions which will materially alter their needs. I feel that I am safe in saying that a fairly close adherence to the ten-year building program not only will produce a more symmetrical building development than could otherwise be obtained, but will also effect economies in construction amounting to millions of dollars during that period through the avoidance of needless duplication. Nevertheless, because of the scope of the program there is ample flexibility in the details whereby a considerable volume of projected building may be anticipated during such a period as your present session is facing, thus making a definite attack on the problem of unemployment.

CREATION OF NEW INSTITUTIONS.

Our survey of existing State hospitals disclosed the fact that these institutions will have reached their maximum proper capacity within the next four years. The time for building a new hospital was hastened by the fact that Norwalk, in Los Angeles County, is so situated that it can never economically become a large hospital, like Patton, for instance. It was therefore manifest that steps must be taken to secure a site for a new hospital, and that, owing to the comparatively larger hospital facilities in the northern portion of the State, this new institution should be located in the south.

The Legislature of 1929 accordingly provided for a commission partly of department heads and partly of citizens to select a site for this new hospital. In this selection many factors had to be taken into consideration, among them location, climate, topography, fertility of soil, extent of tillable land, abundance of water, and price. More than a hundred proposed sites were submitted, careful technical studies were made of many of them, and a final selection has been made near Arlington in northwestern Riverside County. This site is composed of a thousand acres of tillable land with an assured abundance of water. It is so located that it is easily accessible to all the counties of southern California. Nearly $700,000 for building purposes are left in the present appropriated fund, and work is already progressing on the plans, in order to make this institution ready for occupancy as soon as possible. By making use of plans previously used in other institutions, but adaptable to this site, actual construction can begin immediately after the State takes possession. This will furnish a very definite aid in the matter of unemployment.

Our survey also showed that our prisons have grown beyond their proper capacity. In fact, California possesses the unenviable distinction of having in San Quentin—the largest prison in the United States—a condition brought about through the fact that no new State prison has been established for fifty years. Moreover, careful studies made by the California Crime Commission and two joint committees of the Legislature indicated not only the need of a new prison, but of a new kind of prison, especially designed to care for youthful first offenders. In order to reduce to a minimum the expense of transporting prisoners, this new intermediate prison was designed for southern California, where no prison at present exists.

NEW PRISON SITES.

A commission, consisting of the head of the prison board and the directors of several State departments, was by statute given the task of selecting a site for this new prison. As in the case of the hospital, many sites—more than one hundred and fifty in all—were submitted. Practically the same considerations as to availability prevailed as to this site which were considered necessary in the hospital site. In both cases the most difficult requirement to meet was the certainty of a sufficient and never-failing water supply, and consequently no final decision was made until it was absolutely certain that this and the other requirements were adequately met. After eliminating from consideration one property after another, a final choice was made of a property near Castaic in Los Angeles County as far superior to all the others.

However, as the commission was about to consummate the purchase, the fact developed that a 150-foot strip running diagonally through the property was owned in fee simple by one of the power companies. The State was of course unwilling to complete the purchase with the land included in this strip—some 35 or 40 acres in all—under another ownership; while the power company was equally unwilling to surrender its title. Probably the only way will be to move the company's power line, at the expense of some $45,000, to one edge of the property where it will do no harm, after which the present strip can be deeded to the State. The expense of this removal may very properly be borne in substantial equal amounts by the power company and the present owner of the property. After the site is finally secured, its improvement should at once be planned. The money appropriated at last session was designed only for the purchase of the site, and a new appropriation must now be made for a commencement of the necessary building construction.

Aside from this intermediate prison, there has also been established during the past two years a women's penal institution, thus taking women offenders away from their present unsuitable quarters in a men's prison. A very wonderful site for this institution has been secured in a mountain valley near Tehachapi in Kern County, and plans are already being completed for the first unit of the buildings. Much of the direction of this new women's institution is to be committed to a special board, a majority of which shall be women, and California will soon rank high among all the states of the Union in the way she has met this specialized prison problem.

These three new State institutions, all very urgently needed in varying degrees for a long time, have all been provided within the past two years. They will undoubtedly take care of the State's prison and hospital needs for a considerable time to come, and furnish another instance of the present tendency to provide not for present needs alone but for the needs of the future.

OTHER STATE BUILDINGS

Aside from the building program of our State institutions, it is proper that I should briefly report conditions as to other State buildings and State property, particularly with reference to the office facilities for the conducting of State business. Our present State Capitol at Sacramento has been occupied for almost sixty years with little change during that period except for a somewhat extensive remodeling of the interior some twenty-three years ago and another interior remodeling and renovating during the past two or three years. This latter work has comprised an enlargement and shifting of quarters on the lower floor for Governor, Secretary of State, Controller and Treasurer, as well as a renovation of the Senate and Assembly chambers, together with improvements in the committee rooms on the fourth floor.

New elevators have been installed, illumination for the dome has been devised, and California is now able to boast of a Capitol which, while one of the oldest in the country, is at the same time one of the most satisfactory and beautiful. The total cost of this building with the improvements which have been made upon it now amounts to about $3,400,000.

During this same period our two very beautiful Capitol extension buildings have been completed and occupied. These buildings were first authorized by a bond issue ratified by the voters of the State in 1914, to be placed on a site purchased and donated by the city of Sacramento. War conditions interfered with the prompt construction of the buildings, but the plans were finally approved in 1920 and construction was commenced in 1922. Construction, however, was very slow, a new bond issue was found necessary, and the buildings were pushed to completion and occupied only during the last three or four years, the total cost approximating $5,400,000. These buildings, together with the Public Works Building which during this same period was acquired by the State on very advantageous terms, now house all the governmental activities in Sacramento which until two or three years ago were forced to occupy rented quarters in various portions of the city.

In addition to our new State buildings in Sacramento, we are also making provision for those State agencies which are of necessity located in San Francisco and Los Angeles. By a vote of the people, bond issues have been provided for buildings in both these cities, the one in San Francisco having been completed in 1923. This building, however, proved too small, and through legislative appropriation in 1929 two new wings have been provided and are now nearing completion. Meanwhile, at Los Angeles during the past year, the board of supervisors finally agreed upon the site which they should donate to the State, and work has commenced upon a very beautiful twelve-story building, situated, as was the case in San Francisco, within the Civic Center of the city. The completion of this building will be of very great importance, since the lease for its present rented quarters will soon expire, and the advanced rentals to the State would have been almost prohibitive. Thus one of the most satisfactory accomplishments of the past few years has been the housing of all State's activities in its own carefully designed State buildings.

INVENTORY OF STATE PROPERTY.

One of the most interesting pieces of work which has been completed within the past two years has provided the State with its first complete inventory of all State property, including a permanent historical record of all State buildings with the exception of those under the control of the University Regents. This record includes photographs, uniform in size, of the buildings and plants owned by the State, a descriptive and historical account of each, together with an account of all alterations and additions thereto. As new buildings are constructed or old buildings enlarged or remodeled, a record of the additions or changes is immediately placed in the loose-leaf volumes containing other records of the institution, thus enabling the State Department of Finance to maintain a continuous and continuing uniform record of all the State's property—property, by the way, in which, exclusive of such items as the university and the highway system, the State has invested more than $100,000,000, and undoubtedly has a present value of twice that sum.

The State maintains this close check, not only on its buildings but also on its building equipment. The Finance Department maintains a property auditor, whose business it is to keep an exact account of the furnishings and equipment of all buildings, to make frequent visits to all State institutions and other agencies and report on the care and use each is making of State property, and to ascertain and report on surplus equipment wherever it may be found, in order that it may be renovated and made available for other institutions where such equipment or furnishings are needed and can be economically or appropriately used. In this way, no single article of State property is discarded until it is actually worn out, and very many thousands of dollars are saved each year through the care thus exercised by this particular agency of State government.

TEN-YEAR HIGHWAY PROGRAM.

Just as we have evolved a ten-year building program for our various State institutions, so have we also worked out a ten-year program for the State's highway construction. There are at present 6590 miles in the California State highway system. Of this mileage, 4287 miles represent primary roads running the length and breadth of the State or connecting this with other states, and 2303 miles are secondary roads, more localized in character and joining the important centers of one county with those of another. The primary roads are somewhat equally divided between the northern and southern ends of the State. In the secondary roads, however, there is a wide discrepancy, 1778 miles being located in the north to 525 miles in the south. This discrepancy arose in the early stages of the creation of our highway system, when through all too careless legislation or constitutional provision new roads were incorporated into the system.

At the beginning of the last legislative session a bill was introduced for the inclusion into the secondary highway system of some six hundred miles of road in southern California. From one aspect this bill had much to commend it, since there was no doubt that a considerable secondary mileage should be added in the south to rectify the discrepancy of mileage in the original secondary system. From another aspect, however, a bill of this kind was very dangerous, since it would furnish a precedent for resuming the old method of adding to the highway system through the inclusion of so-called legislative roads—roads created by bills passed through the Legislature, frequently merely as a personal favor to the one who introduced the bill, and always without any adequate study as to the value of the road to the State system as compared with others for which a far greater need might exist.

The particular danger of any legislation seeking to add new roads to our highway system, before a study had been made of the necessity, location, and feasibility of such roads, lay in the fact that it would overthrow a principle firmly established throughout the present administration. This principle was set forth so definitely in my message of two years ago that I shall repeat it here:

At this time it will be necessary to establish some policy relative to the inclusion of roads within the State highway system. * * * No governor should be asked or expected to sign a bill providing for the extension of the State highway system, except upon recommendation of the Department of Public Works—a recommendation in its turn based upon a careful study of traffic requirements and highway use, in line with the broad general policy of long-time planning. Any other course will break down our program of highway construction, and will savor of political expediency rather than of safe and business-like procedure. Whatever policy may be adopted must be based on traffic pressure and not political pressure.

NO ADDITIONS EXCEPT AFTER STUDY.

In conformity with this recommendation, and on the positive assurance that I would veto any bill for addition to the highway system until a previous engineering study and recommendation should be made by the Public Works Department, neither this blanket bill for southern California secondary roads, nor any other road bill for any section of the State, was pressed in the 1929 Legislature, just as no bill had been pressed in 1927. I can not too strongly recommend to this and all succeeding Legislatures that this policy be strictly observed, for if the door is once opened by the admission of a single unrecommended road into the State highway system, scores of other such roads will speedily follow, and an impossible burden will be placed on the system which will inevitably break it down.

Recognizing, however, the unjust disproportion of secondary mileage as between the northern and the southern portions of the State, on March 12, 1929, I transmitted a message to the Legislature recommending that it pass a resolution directing the California Highway Commission and the Department of Public Works to make a study and survey of the problem to determine what roads should be added to the system, and also recommending that the existing discrepancy be relieved by "the addition of three or four times as much mileage in the south as in the north." A week later this requested resolution was passed by both houses, and the proposed survey and report has since been made, thus carrying out the policy and establishing the precedent upon which the administration had insisted, "that expert study by State authorities must precede, rather than follow, the inclusion of roads into the State highway system."

As a result of its survey, the Department of Public Works has recommended that at this legislative session 804 miles of road be added to our secondary highway system. Five roads, comprising 174 miles are proposed for northern California, increasing its total to 1949 miles, and seventeen roads, with 633 miles, are proposed for southern California, making its total 1158 miles. I have respectfully requested my successor to incorporate this recommendation in his forthcoming budget. If this is done and the budget is adopted, the State's secondary highways will then comprise 3107 miles, while our entire highway system will total 7394 miles.

HIGHWAY COSTS AND REVENUES.

In its year and a half of study to determine upon these new secondary roads, the Department of Public Works considered not only engineering possibilities and traffic necessities, but also went very thoroughly into the estimated cost of these proposed highways for rights of way, grading, paving, surfacing, and structural work of all kinds. For all these, the total estimate over a ten-year period for the proposed 804 miles of new highway amounted to $50,970,810. In order to forecast the possibility of meeting this necessary cost the department went still further, and made a careful estimate of the probable cost of our entire highway system over a period of ten years, as well as an estimate of anticipated revenues during this same period. Thus in highway as well as building construction, the present administration is enabled to hand on to its successor a definite suggested program.

Without presenting the department's figures in too great detail, I shall merely quote $343,565,906 as the estimate for so completing our existing highways as to give adequate service by July 1, 1941, the end of the ten-year period. Adding to this the $50,970,810 for the proposed new roads, and assuming no other roads to be added during that period, the total ten-year cost would be $394,536,716. During this same period, the anticipated available revenues, reckoned on our present laws providing for gas tax, license receipts, motor bus franchises and federal aid, with a carefully estimated percentage of increase in each of these from year to year, would total $422,015,334. Deducting from this total revenue the estimated cost of maintaining present State highways and recommending additional roads, the cost of administration, and State aid to joint highway districts, the balance available for actual construction, reconstruction and rights of way would amount to $320,352,751, thus failing to meet the necessary expenditures by over $14,000,000. This, it seems to me, should be a sufficient answer to those who desire to see our highway system completed, and would at the same time suggest the diversion of highway funds to other governmental expenditures. By retaining all our highway revenues for highway purposes, within the next ten years California should have a highway system which will surpass any other in any part of the world.

TOLL BRIDGE PROGRAM.

Although the greatest strides in California highway construction have been made during the past four years, nevertheless a period of twenty years has elapsed since the actual beginnings of our highway system. Meanwhile one necessary feature of that system remained almost totally neglected. I refer to the link across our larger rivers or arms of our bays which should normally join the ends of the highway on opposite sides of these waterways. For a long time in California, as elsewhere, this service was performed by the ferryboat, but as the number of automobiles on the highways grew greater and greater, it became more and more nearly impossible for ferries to supply this need without a too severe curtailment of travel. For example, only four years ago the motorist from Sacramento to San Francisco depended upon the ferry across Carquinez Strait; and, although he realized that his journey was often slowed up by waiting for the boat, he did not fully realize how greatly travel was restricted through the ferry handicap. Yet today the stream of cars which frequently pass over the Carquinez Bridge would have taxed a ferry far beyond the limits of its capacity.

This meant the necessity of bridges; and inasmuch as the cost of these larger bridges was too great to be borne by any one highway route, or even by the entire highway system, it also meant toll bridges. Here was presented an opportunity upon which bridge engineers, bridge fabricators, and bridge promoters were quick to seize, and in certain states the number of private toll bridges became very considerable. This was a perfectly legitimate enterprise, but it was also a very expensive enterprise as far as the traveling public was concerned. The cost of financing, building, and maintaining such a private structure was frequently from one-fourth to one-third more than a well managed public structure would cost; which meant a correspondingly longer time before it could pay for itself and be turned over for free and unrestricted public use.

FORMER TOLL BRIDGE LAWS.

In California we were further handicapped by an archaic law governing the construction of private toll bridges, which placed the authority for such construction entirely in the hands of the board of supervisors of one of the counties adjacent to the waterway to be spanned; while an ill-considered legislative act further postponed the ultimate free use of the bridges by doubling the time of their possible franchise. Accordingly the State administration at the last legislative session presented four measures, the passage of which has entirely changed the toll bridge situation in California.

The first of these measures repealed the law by which for nearly fifty years the jurisdiction over private toll bridges had been vested with boards of supervisors, while the second transferred this jurisdiction to the State Department of Public Works. The third bill provided for a "bridge authority," consisting of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Director of the Department of Public Works, Director of the Department of Finance, and Chairman of the Highway Commission; and provided that this bridge authority shall direct the Department of Public Works, as a policy of the State, to build, acquire and own all toll bridges situated upon or along any part of the highways of the State. It further provided that the Department of Public Works might pay for these bridges through revenue bonds to be retired by tolls received from their operation, "with the end in view of ultimately eliminating all toll charges thereon."

THE BAY BRIDGE.

The fourth bill specifically authorized the "bridge authority" to lay out and construct a highway crossing from the city of San Francisco to the county of Alameda, to be entirely paid for by the issuance of revenue bonds retired by tolls received for passage over such bridge, or "highway crossing." Thus began the first real solution of the problem of a transbay bridge, a problem which has been under discussion for many years. However, definite conclusions had thus far been impossible, partly because of federal antagonism on the part of the War and Navy departments, and partly because of the lack of sufficient information as to feasible routes, especially as to foundation conditions to be encountered in the bed of the bay.

In order to obviate the first of these difficulties, it seemed wise to take the federal government into our confidence, in order, if possible, to make it an ally rather than an antagonist. Fortunately President Hoover, with his clear understanding of California needs, was disposed to be very helpful; and after a conference it was agreed to name a joint Federal-State Commission, which should correlate the needs of East Bay traffic with the requirements of national defense and the interests of navigation. President Hoover named upon this commission Rear Admiral L. E. Gregory and W. H. Standley of the Navy, and Brigadier General G. B. Pillsbury and Lieutenant Colonel E. L. Daley of the Army. As State appointments I named George T. Cameron of San Francisco and Senator A. H. Breed of Oakland to represent the business interests of each side of the bay, and for their professional ability Prof. Charles D. Marx of Stanford University and C. H. Purcell, State Highway Engineer. Mr. Mark L. Requa was named as chairman by joint Federal and State appointment.

SURVEY OF PROPOSED ROUTES.

One of the first acts of this commission was to request the Department of Public Works to make a thorough engineering, economic, and traffic study of the problem, and to furnish the commission with all data for the purpose of determining the relative value of the several proposed locations. A survey of the area of the bay between San Francisco and Alameda County was accordingly made, including a large number of borings to determine the general characteristics of the foundation conditions to be encountered. At the same time a traffic study was undertaken to determine the origin and destination of both automobile and commuter traffic, characteristics of traffic flow, economic feasibility of paying for the bridge through tolls within a reasonable length of time, and a comparison of the time and distance necessary for crossing the bay by the present ferries and by a bridge at each location proposed. Funds for this work were provided by the city of San Francisco and the State.

As a result of these investigations of all five proposed routes, the commission unanimously recommended a high level bridge from Rincon Hill in San Francisco, over Goat Island, and to the Key Route Mole in Alameda County. They incorporated in their report certain restrictions as to minimum vertical and horizontal clearances, both from an engineering and economical standpoint and from the standpoint of probable Army and Navy requirements. The estimated cost is $72,000,000 and the estimated revenues are such as will permit a material reduction in present ferry tolls, and pay for the bridge so that it shall be toll-free in less than twenty years.

As chairman of the California Toll Bridge Authority, on November 6, 1930, I called a meeting of this commission. At this meeting a resolution was passed directing the Department of Public Works to make the necessary surveys and prepare the plans, specifications and estimates for such bridge to be constructed under the provisions of the legislative act. The Division of Highways is now engaged in further drilling, preparatory to filing a permit with the War Department. After this permit has been approved, the necessary steps for financing and completion of plans should be taken.

CALIFORNIA'S WATER PROBLEM.

In the semiarid State of California, with the normally abundant winter rainfall in its hills and mountains and the long dry summers in its fertile valleys, no one problem is of such transcendent importance as the proper conservation and utilization of our water resources. The complete agricultural development of the State is possible only through irrigation, either by surface water carried to the land by our rivers and irrigation canals, or by underground waters, once readily available through artesian flow or from shallow wells, but now secured only by the expensive process of pumping from a rapidly receding water table. The pumping of underground waters is becoming so expensive, due to the growing depletion of our underground supplies, that agriculturists in many sections of the State are facing a very hazardous future.

Meanwhile, during the winter and spring months, the Sacramento, San Joaquin and other large rivers of the State discharge into the bay and ocean an immense volume of water, every drop of which will be of potential value to agriculture when the ever-increasing population of California demands the augmented production which is only possible through a large expansion of our agricultural activities. Just at the present moment we should probably hesitate to extend to any great degree the area of intensive agricultural operations, but there are certain sections of the State where highly improved orchards will die unless additional water can be supplied, and in all sections the inevitable growth of California will tax our available water resources in the not distant future.

FIRST ATTEMPTS AT SOLUTION.

Faced by these conditions, for the past ten years California has been engaged in investigating its water resources and seeking to develop a plan for the conservation and maximum economic utilization of all its waters. A partial plan was presented in its engineering aspects to the Legislature of 1927, but since it was lacking in economic considerations, its further study was entrusted to a joint legislative committee appointed at that session. Meanwhile, more than four years ago it had been my privilege to discuss this problem with Mr. Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, who urged upon me that as soon as I assumed the office of Governor, I should get in touch with President Coolidge with the object in view of enlisting the interest of the federal government in California's water resources problem.

I was not in a position to follow out this advice in 1927, for the reason that the Legislative Water Committee was very seriously engaged upon its task, and I felt that it would be unwise to embarrass its operations by entering upon a course at variance with the plan it was maturing for the solution of the problem. As a result of the Legislative Water Committee's labors, a constitutional amendment calling for a bond issue of $125,000,000 was presented to the Legislature of 1929, but failed of passage. Very probably, even if it had passed the Legislature, it would have failed when presented to the people, for with the comparatively small amount of economic study given the project, it is extremely doubtful that the voters would have sanctioned a bond issue of such magnitude.

FEDERAL-STATE COMMISSION ORGANIZED.

The failure of this constitutional amendment presented the opportunity of carrying out the plan I had discussed with Mr. Hoover more than two years before he became President, and the result was a bill, chapter 561 of the Statutes of 1929, providing for a State Water Resources Commission to cooperate and confer with any such commission as might be designated by the President of the United States, and with the Legislative Water Committee, which was continued by the 1929 Legislature to further study the problem. President Hoover appointed the following federal officers to serve on this Commission, known as the Federal-State Water Resources Commission, to confer and cooperate with the California members appointed by the Governor of California: Lieut. Col. Thos. M. Robins, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, San Francisco; Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of Reclamation, Washington, D. C.; E. E. Bonner, Executive Secretary, Federal Power Commission, Washington, D. C.

After serious thought and thorough investigation of the qualifications of men best suited to make the study of this intricate and far-reaching problem, the following were selected by me to serve as members representing California on this commission:

Dr. George C. Pardee, Chairman, Oakland,

William Durbrow, Grass Valley,

B. A. Etcheverry, Berkeley,

Alfred Harrell, Bakersfield,

W. B. Mathews, Los Angeles,

Warren Olney, San Francisco,

E. E. Weymouth, Los Angeles,

Wm. J. Carr, Pasadena,

Bert B. Meek, Sacramento.

Of these members of the committee, the last two are ex officio, Senator Carr being a member of the Railroad Commission, while Mr. Meek is Director of the Department of Public Works.

The Joint Legislative Committee appointed by the 1929 Legislature for carrying on these studies has met jointly with the Federal-State Water Resources Commission in discussion of this problem, the solution of which is entrusted to the commission and this committee. The membership of the committee is:

Van Bernard, Assemblyman, Fifth District.

B. S. Crittenden, Chairman, Assemblyman, Nineteenth District.

Robert P. Easley, Assemblyman, Eighteenth District.

Frank W. Mixter, Assemblyman, Thirty-fifth District.

Edwin A. Mueller, Senator, Fortieth District.

H. C. Nelson, Senator, First District.

Will R. Sharkey, Senator, Ninth District.

Ralph E. Swing, Senator, Thirtieth District.

This was the first approach which had been made to the federal government either for financial participation in this great project, or even for consent to undertake the proposed works affecting flood control and navigation, both of which are under federal supervision.

Events have since disclosed that I was justified in this action, as it has become apparent that no plan could be a success without the cooperation of the United States, and that certainly its cooperation in the study of the problem was essential if financial participation of the federal government is to be secured.

WORK OF THE COMMISSION.

Early in January, 1930, the federal members appointed by President Hoover and the State members appointed by myself met and organized under the chairmanship of former Governor George C. Pardee. At the earlier meetings appearances were made by individuals and organizations representing various interests of the State, on which occasions the nature of the water problems and the needs of the various sections were explained. Later meetings have been given over to a discussion of the State-wide plan for conserving our water resources, their utilization, the economic aspects of the problem, the legal procedure necessary and the probable methods of financing construction.

Upon assuming membership in the commission, Colonel Robins, representing the War Department, took an active interest in the subject, and has personally directed exhaustive investigations from the flood control and navigation standpoint of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers and upper San Francisco Bay. Particularly intensive investigations have been made by the War Department relative to the proposed salt water barrier and its effect upon navigation and flood control. The value to the federal government of the great storage project proposed in the Sacramento watershed as well as navigation values on the San Joaquin River, is being studied by the War Department.

Dr. Elwood Mead, commissioner of the United States Reclamation Service, attended an early meeting of the commission, and immediately arranged for a cooperative investigation between the United States Bureau of Reclamation and the State Department of Public Works. This investigation has been carried on actively and is approaching conclusion. It is hoped that federal participation in the project on the basis of interest-free money may be justified, and the report of the United States Bureau of Reclamation will be enlightening. The by-product of hydroelectric power will be of considerable importance in the State-wide plan, and the value of this power is therefore an item of magnitude. The Federal Power Commission has undertaken a study of the probable value of hydroelectric energy that would be generated at the main units under the plan.

The Department of Public Works is now completing its engineering studies on the State-wide plan as explained in another section of this message, and these data have been put before the commission and Joint Legislative Commission as rapidly as available by the State Engineer. With the engineering, economic, legal and financial data before it, the commission has made a study of all angles of the proposed water plan to determine its true economic feasibility, and, if found feasible, will offer plans for financing and methods of execution.

METHOD OF FINANCING.

The values resulting from the execution of the State Water Plan will be so far-reaching that many interests besides the landowners should participate in the costs. Metropolitan areas, the State, and the United States will benefit from increased commerce, markets and taxable wealth. The federal government has a particular interest in navigation, flood control and reclamation. In accordance with the policies established in the Boulder Canyon Project Act, the State should seek both federal financing at a low interest rate and interest-free funds where compatible with national policies. The State could properly guarantee payment to the United States of interest and principal as due, and the works, after construction, should be owned and operated by the State.

The report of the commission, based upon the results of studies made by the federal agencies represented and the State Engineer's office of the Department of Public Works, will shortly be made available. In conjunction with the legislative committee referred to above, it is expected that the report will deal with all phases of the proposed water plan. The joint board as now composed consists of more than twenty of the best qualified engineers, legislators, lawyers, financiers and business men in the State. They are men of great experience, wide vision and sound business judgment, and with full data upon which to base their conclusions, their report will stand as a landmark for the State to follow in the all important development and conservation of its water resources.

CALIFORNIA CONSTITUTIONAL COMMISSION.

The history and evolution of the California State constitution have received much attention from students of constitutional law, both in California and elsewhere. It is generally admitted that it presents a wide departure from the ideal foundation for a republican form of government. The chief feature which makes it unsuited to such a government arises from the fact that it is primarily a very rigid limitation of the powers of the Legislature, rather than such a grant of powers as will promote simplicity and directness in legislative action.

This fundamental characteristic can be clearly understood only when the history of the original form of the present constitution is considered. It superseded a constitution designed to meet the peculiar conditions which faced the people of California in 1849. The history of our State is unique, in that it passed through no period of territorial government during which the desires of its people could properly crystallize in the form of fundamental organic law. Derived from the councils of a strangely assorted group of individuals whose background represented practically every factor in contemporary political thought, the constitution was constructed on a compromise basis to meet the special problems of the day.

The present constitution which displaced that of 1849 was framed in a period of unrest, suspicion and factional strife. It was deliberately designed to limit the powers of all the agents of representative government. Because of this restrictive design, scores of provisions which clearly belong in the field of legislative enactment have been necessarily injected into the constitution by amendment. The restriction on the Legislature was so great that in many important fields laws could not be passed without constitutional amendments specifically permitting their enactment. Under such circumstances it is not strange that very frequently the desired law as a sort of short cut was adopted directly into the constitution itself.

As a consequence our constitution is no longer an instrument of organic law, but has come to include, as the greater proportion of its matter, enactments essentially legislative rather than fundamental. Moreover, these enactments in many cases were adopted to meet local or temporary needs, but by incorporation in the constitution become permanent, inflexible, incapable of adjustment to changing conditions.

A MUCH AMENDED CONSTITUTION.

Since its adoption in 1879, the constitution, which was so detailed that even at that time it was referred to as merely "a code of law," has been amended by the incorporation of a very large number of added provisions. During the fifty-one years of its existence 173 amendments have been added, out of 292 submitted to the voters. This is in sharp contrast to the federal constitution, to which there have been added only nineteen amendments since the original Bill of Rights was adopted one hundred and forty years ago. It is almost universally agreed that all but a very few of these amendments could have been better fitted to the needs of the State if they could have been made the subjects of legislative enactment under a proper constitutional assignment of such power. If it had been desired to safeguard any of these laws from too easy change by the Legislature, this could easily have been done without making them actually a part of the constitution.

When in 1879 the people framed a constitution which so limited the Legislature in the exercise of its powers, the device of a referendum was unknown. At present if the Legislature passes a law which a sufficient number of people deem unwise, it is not difficult to prevent it from becoming operative until and unless the voters register their approval. Accordingly whatever reason there may once have been to tie the hands of the Legislature, does not prevail to anywhere nearly the same degree in these days of direct legislation. Accordingly for a long time there has been a desire to secure a new constitution, more along the lines of the federal constitution, with a broad grant of powers to the Legislature rather than a limitation and denial of powers.

The people of the State, however, have no less than three times declined to authorize a constitutional convention. We can not assume that this reflects an opinion that the present constitution is satisfactory. It seems more likely to reflect an unwillingness to launch even such a carefully chosen group as would compose a constitutional convention upon the task of general revision, without some preliminary study and advice as to the course such a revision should take.

The defeat of these proposals for a constitutional convention has heretofore prevented any concerted study of the problem. Accordingly in my message of two years ago I asked "your consideration for a measure providing for a far-sighted study of our need for constitutional revision." Your favorable response to this request made possible such a study for the first time. Through what I believe was ill-advised action, a proposal for a constitutional convention was also again submitted; but the people fortunately rejected this, giving a right of way to the necessary preliminary study.

INSTRUCTIONS TO COMMISSION.

The California Constitutional Commission thus established was authorized and directed to investigate and report upon the need for revision of the present State constitution. In its investigations, the commission was directed to examine the constitution of the State and those of other states of the Union and to make a careful study of the need for such revision. The commission was further directed to submit to the Governor for transmission to the next session of the Legislature a full and complete report of its investigations and findings (including a draft of a model constitution), and also its recommendations as to the need of a constitutional convention to effect such revision.

The act creating the commission provided for a membership of fifteen. I took great care in selecting the members of this commission, with a view to securing representation of all the interests possible in both ends of the State. The commission as finally chosen was composed of the following membership:

Newton W. Thompson, Chairman, Alhambra,

John Willis Bæverfjord, Pasadena,
E. W. Camp, Los Angeles,
George E. Cryer, Los Angeles,
George E. Farrand, Los Angeles,
Will J. French, San Francisco,
J. B. Gill, San Bernardino,
John R. Haynes, Los Angeles,

Leslie R. Hewitt, Los Angeles,
Irving Martin, Stockton,
O. K. McMurray, Berkeley,
Chester H. Rowell, Berkeley,
Robert G. Sproul, Berkeley,
Edw. F. Treadwell, San Francisco,
E. A. Walcott, San Francisco.

Since its appointment the commission has labored with great diligence, its frequent meetings occupying in the aggregate more than a month of time. Committees of the members appointed pursuant to the plan adopted at the organization meeting have given much additional time to research and investigation of the numerous problems involved. While no general public hearings have been held, contact has been established with other commissions and legislative committees investigating important questions which necessarily come within the general scope of the work of this commission. Much valuable data was secured and many helpful suggestions received from similar commissions in other states, municipal research organizations, tax associations and other fact finding bodies.

NEED FOR CONSTITUTIONAL REFORM.

The principal question presented for the consideration of the commission, as clearly appears from the text of the act, is whether there is a substantial need for revision of the present constitution, and if so, how this may best be accomplished. A study of the provisions of that document and the numerous changes incorporated therein since its adoption in 1879, as well as a comparison of these with the provisions of the constitutions of other states, particularly those which have recently been amended, discloses plainly that substantial limitations are still imposed upon the power of the Legislature to pass laws effecting even minor changes without first submitting a constitutional amendment modifying or removing some existing prohibition or limitation.

California's progress and growth in population and wealth, the development of its resources, and the very marked changes in business and financial conditions within the fifty-year period since adopting the present constitution present additional reasons for broadening the powers of its legislative body, particularly as the people through the exercise of their privileges under the provisions for direct legislation may now substantially influence and in fact largely control legislation, if they so desire. Every voter knows from sad experience the large number of proposed constitutional amendments presented at each election, and recognizes that nine-tenths of these are properly matters which a legislature should be permitted to determine.

As a result of the investigations under the direction of the commission, recommendations will be made in its final report, first, to remove many of the limitations now imposed upon the Legislature, retaining, of course, the initiative, referendum and recall; second, to eliminate much of what is really statutory law; and third, to clarify, rearrange and revise, in more simple and compact form, the provisions retained in the constitution.

POSSIBLE METHODS OF REVISION.

The work of the commission is, of course, of a preliminary nature. Its aim has been to present for future consideration and action suggestions and recommendations which may be of substantial assistance in finally solving the manifold problems presented by a proposed revision of the constitution. The commission's findings and recommendations may be brought before the people in either of two ways; first, by submitting them to a constitutional convention, if the people finally authorize such a convention to be assembled, in order that in this way they may finally reach the voters; or second, by presenting them directly to the voters through action of the Legislature. This latter proposition may seem somewhat revolutionary, but I believe that it is worth considering.

It is highly probable that groups of separate proposals for constitutional changes, if submitted by the Legislature after due consideration, would stand more chance of adoption by the people than would the compromise propositions almost certain to emerge as a result of a large constitutional convention. By such direct legislative action there can be achieved to the satisfaction of the voters most of the benefits which could result from the work of a constitutional convention. In this way may be avoided the jeopardizing of all possibility of needed constitutional changes, either through another rejection of a convention proposal, or the subsequent rejection of any new constitution such convention might propose, through dissatisfaction with certain of its provisions.

At any rate, I believe that the report of the California Constitutional Commission when finally submitted to you will really repay your study; and if as a result of this study you work out some method of presenting to the people a new and simplified constitution, either as a whole or in part, you will have rendered a noteworthy public service.

COMMISSION ON COUNTY HOME RULE.

As is indicated throughout this message, a great deal has been done in California toward modernizing and improving our inadequacy of State government. Likewise much has been done in this and other states in the way of securing better and more efficient forms of government for cities. On the other hand the county, the third political unit of government, has been singularly neglected. Its governmental framework has long been outworn and antiquated. It is the only area of government or administration without a chief executive for the coordination of its functions and activities. Such a matter, for example, as fixing the salaries of county officers and their deputies, or determining the number of deputies a county office shall have, is entrusted to the State Legislature, the one body which knows nothing whatever about it, but which most gravely goes through the motions of making laws for the internal administration of each of California's fifty-eight counties.

Some twenty years ago a constitutional provision was adopted by which counties might provide charters for their own self-government just as is the almost universal custom in the case of cities. Unfortunately, however, the proper form of charter seems never to have been devised, and only some half dozen counties have availed themselves of the opportunity. Meanwhile, though many earnest and able men have been serving as officials and supervisors in our various counties, they have been so hampered by the archaic form of county government as to render them unable to produce results commensurate with their endeavors.

In order that a thorough study of this problem might be made, on the recommendation contained in my message of two years ago, the California Commission on County Home Rule was created by an act of the Legislature of 1929 for an "investigation of the general subject of local government by counties, and particularly of examining into any and all matters pertaining to the subject of home rule and local autonomy in county government, including a study of county government and county charters in this and other states." The commission was asked especially to study the relation of the Legislature to the fixing of salaries for county officers and the creating of deputies in the various offices. The report of the commission will be presented in January, and is earnestly commended to your attention.

PERSONNEL OF COMMISSION.

The commission consists of Jonathan S. Dodge, Pasadena, formerly supervisor of Los Angeles County, chairman; R. W. Blackburn, Thermal, president of the California Farm Bureau; Thomas M. Carlson, Richmond, formerly member of the State Legislature; Edwin A. Cottrell, executive head of the Department of Political Science, Stanford University; John N. Edy, city manager of Berkeley (formerly chairman until his resignation in June); William C. Jerome, Santa Ana, auditor of Orange County; William J. Locke, Alameda, executive secretary of the League of California Municipalities; Samuel C. May, Berkeley, Department of Political Science, University of California; Frank J. McCoy, Santa Maria, Board of Education and Planning Commission, Santa Barbara County. Fred B. Wood, Legislative Counsel, acted as secretary.

Meetings of the commission have been held at Sacramento, Berkeley, Chico, Riverside, Yosemite National Park with the State Association of Supervisors' Annual Convention, Long Beach, Santa Barbara, Monterey, Stanford University, and San Francisco. These meetings were planned to allow a sufficient representation of county officials and citizens from typical counties in California. All counties having home rule charters were visited. Notices were sent to all county officers of the time and place of the meetings and an invitation extended to appear and present their ideas on county government. A questionnaire was sent to all county officers for their opinions on certain fundamental questions of organization and policy in county government. The commission received many excellent suggestions in written and verbal form from county officials, members of the Legislature, and citizens.

The commission has recognized that the whole subject could not be studied satisfactorily in the short time at its disposal. It has attempted to examine all major problems in county government but found it necessary to leave many of the minor technical details of functional operation to future investigation. Its proposals, if adopted, will tend to pave the way to a more comprehensive self-examination of the internal functions of each county. They will reallocate the powers of the local government in its administration of State laws and policies. They will, it is hoped, enlarge the scope of local self-government by bringing the functions of government, in a more scientific and responsive manner, directly to the benefit of the people of each local area. A few changes in the constitution and statutes will enable this increasingly important unit of county government more fully to meet the demands of those whom it is designed to serve.

FEATURES OF REPORT.

The report of the commission will contain a history of the development of the areas, functions, and powers of the counties of the United States and California; the constitutional and statutory powers of counties throughout the country; positions and salaries in county government; discussion of home rule charters for counties; internal administration of county functions; special districts created within counties; county-city consolidation or separation; charts and discussion of the organization of the present county and proposals for its reorganization; charts of the salaries paid all county officers from 1901 to 1929; charts of the costs of State, county, and municipal governments of California from 1920 to 1929; and suggestions for changes in the constitution and in statutes to allow for a wider use of local autonomy in the organization and powers of county government.

Governmental processes are a matter of slow growth. Much time will be necessary to make all the improvements which should be undertaken. A few may come immediately by the exercise of the good sense of the Legislature; some will come through the adoption of home rule charters free from obsolete restrictions; others will be demanded by the people when the pressure of excessive expense and inefficiency becomes more evident, and the traditional resistance to change in governmental procedure is overcome. It is hoped that in the report which the commission will present to you it will be able to point out the essential weaknesses of the past and present, suggest a few modifications for immediate consideration, and, after further study by the Legislature and by the people, stimulate a demand for more substantial changes in the county governments of the State.

CALIFORNIA CODE COMMISSION.

The California Code Commission was created by an act of the Legislature of 1929 under which it was to enter upon a revision of the laws of the State, the work of revision to comprehend:

1. The preparation of a statutory record showing the status and disposition of all acts and parts of acts heretofore adopted;
2. The codification, consolidation, compilation or revision of all statutes in force;
3. The express repeal of all statutes heretofore repealed by implication, held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of this State, or which will be rendered obsolete by the proposed revision if adopted;
4. Whenever necessary, the correction of errors in form or substance, including such restatement as will best serve clearly and correctly to express the existing provisions of law;
5. The preparation of a report embodying therein, among other things, such legislative measures proposed by it as may be calculated to affect the adoption or enactment of such revision.

By the provisions of the act, the chief of the Legislative Counsel Bureau was designated as secretary of the commission, and the commission was to be composed of nine members. In the selection of the members of this commission and by reason of the work to be undertaken, I naturally turned to the leaders of the legal profession, and accordingly selected the retiring president of The State Bar of California, the president of the San Francisco Bar Association, the president of the Los Angeles Bar Association, and a professor from the Law School of the State University, making up the balance of the membership with leading lawyers from different sections of the State. In making the appointments, I chose four from the north, four from the south and one from the central portion of the State, as he names here listed and the places of residence indicate:

Clark Clement, Lemoore,	Guy R. Crump, Los Angeles,
Perry Evans, San Francisco,	Gerald H. Hagar, Oakland,
A. M. Kidd, Berkeley,	Maurice E. Harrison, San Francisco,
C. L. McFarland, Riverside,	Thomas C. Ridgway, Los Angeles,
Leonard B. Slosson, Los Angeles.

The commission organized January 2, 1930, with Thomas C. Ridgway as chairman and Maurice E. Harrison and Guy R. Crump, as vice chairmen.

NECESSITY OF CODE REVISION.

The statutory law has long since been recognized to be in a deplorable condition. It consists of four codes and about 21,000 additional laws contained in 50 large volumes of statutes. The actual living law in force is mixed up in these volumes with special, local, private, obsolete, superfluous, unconstitutional, and impliedly repealed statutes. The purpose of compilation, revision and codification has been long under consideration by the Legislative Counsel Bureau. Pursuant to the direction of the Legislature of 1927 a report was made to the 1929 Legislature of the program of statutory revision in California and in other states. This report was published in the Assembly Daily Journal for January 18, 1929. The Legislature, realizing the necessity for such a revision, passed the act creating the Code Commission and the same received my approval.

The commission early decided that nothing short of a page to page examination of every statute from the beginning would accomplish the purpose. This purpose in general terms was to recommend the repeal of all obsolete, inconsistent, unconstitutional and superfluous laws; separate the local, private and special laws; and then present the laws of general scope, now in force, in a compendious and convenient form, properly classified, adequately indexed and cross-referenced.

To compile and revise the four codes and 21,000 statutes, representing the entire statutory output of 80 years of California's existence, is a task of considerable magnitude. The first step to be taken, before entering upon a revision and compilation, was a preparation of a statutory or historical index, in order to ascertain the status and disposition of all acts and parts of acts heretofore adopted. This work has been done by the staff of the Legislative Counsel Bureau under the direction of the Code Commission. The results are represented in over 60,000 cards on file in the office of the bureau, and a tabulation has been prepared from which it can now be ascertained what statutes are still in force and effect.

The commission enlisted the assistance of a committee of 100 members of the Los Angeles Bar Association, to read the volumes of the Appellate Reports, so as to prepare a list of all statutes which have been declared to be unconstitutional. A like committee of 100 members of the Alameda County and San Francisco Bar associations was enlisted to make a like examination of the Appellate Reports, so as to prepare a list of all statutes declared by the Supreme and Appellate courts to be repealed by implication. The commission, through the State Bar of California and through the local bar associations, presented its problems to the entire bar and asked for suggestions in connection with the work of revision and compilation, and such request met with a ready response from the bar of the State.

SUGGESTIONS BY COMMISSION.

The commission has decided that the laws should be classified according to subject matter. Accordingly, a tentative list of titles, under which all of the laws can be classified, has been prepared. Among these titles there will be retained a Civil Code, a Code of Civil Procedure, and a Penal Code. As an example of what may be done in the classification of laws according to subject matter, the commission has prepared a Probate Code, in which the laws relating to wills and the administration of estates have been gathered together under the title of Probate. A preliminary draft, prepared by Mr. Perry Evans of the commission, was submitted to judges and lawyers, from whom numerous suggestions were received. The same was revised and finally approved by the commission and will be submitted to the Legislature for adoption.

Many advantages are expected to flow from a compilation and revision of all the laws in the manner outlined by the commission. It is anticipated that there will be a great reduction in bulk, and that the classification according to titles with proper indexing and cross-references, should facilitate reference to the existing laws and save much time and labor to laymen, lawyers and to the Legislature. With all the laws in comparatively simple form, legislation can be directed systematically; new legislation can readily be fitted into the general plan; defects can be more readily perceived; and a revision that may be necessary to improve and modernize some branches of the law can be carried out intelligently. The powers of the commission were limited to a restatement of the existing law. When this has been completed, the work will never have to be done again, and succeeding code commissions can start with the laws as restated, and devote themselves to the broader and never-ending task of modernizing the law to adjust it to the varied and ever-changing social conditions.

The commission recommends that the work initiated be carried to completion by a Code Commission, that an appropriation be made for such purpose, and that a committee of the Legislature be appointed with which the commission may advise from time to time, as problems arise between sessions of the Legislature, so that the work of such a commission may reflect legislative thought and policy.

IRRIGATION AND RECLAMATION FINANCING.

Agricultural district formation reached its peak in 1920 during a period of general optimism as to the future, and, under the abnormal conditions then existing, communities turned to organized agricultural district development as the only practical method of financing. It is not surprising, therefore, that the organization of new districts increased rapidly, nor was it other than natural that some of them were unable to withstand the stress of the deflation period which followed. The confidence of the investing public in these securities is shaken and the ability of even sound districts to finance through the sale of bonds under existing conditions is seriously impaired.

With this situation in mind the last Legislature passed the act which I requested creating this commission, the personnel of which is as follows: Will C. Wood, chairman; Edward Hyatt, secretary; Charles L. Childers, W. P. Jeffries, Fred W. Kiesel, Charles E. MacLean, U. S. Webb, and Harmon S. Bonte, consultant to board. The commission was authorized to report upon the entire subject of financing and refinancing irrigation, reclamation and other public improvement districts in agricultural regions, together with the history and present status of such districts, and to make recommendations for amendments or improvements in the law and methods of handling their financing and refinancing.

In seeking to appraise existing legislation in relation to the various districts under consideration, it was necessary not only to analyze the plight of the landowner and the security holder, but also to examine the pertinent facts in order to determine the basic causes leading to the situation warranting this investigation. In order that the commission might benefit by suggestions and criticisms from those familiar with existing conditions, hearings were held at various points throughout the State. Basic data upon each irrigation and reclamation district were obtained and causes leading to default and methods of refinancing were carefully analyzed. From this testimony and study it became evident that the State should assume an active and direct interest in the solution of irrigation and reclamation district problems.

IMPORTANCE OF THIS WORK.

The State is vitally interested in the credit standing of its subdivisions and its districts. It is also interested in the continued improvement of lands within these districts by individual owners. Capital for such improvement naturally will be advanced only when titles to real estate in the district are unassailable and unimpeachable, and not subject to varied and conflicting liens consequent upon default in the payment of bond principal and interest. The State can not without loss to itself stand by and see the morale of communities broken, settlers dispossessed of their lands, and creditors suffer severe losses, largely because there is lacking the machinery necessary to bring about an adjustment of the status of debtors and creditors.

Whereas irrigation, reclamation and other agricultural district laws are generally sound, some changes and amendments are necessary. The commission proposes the establishing of a State agency with broad and varied powers to assist in the conduct of the affairs of these districts. Among other duties this agency should assume the functions of the present Irrigation Certification Commission, and should be empowered to require annual physical, financial and economic reports from districts and to aid in handling defaults and refunding programs that may avoid default. The commission is also recommending that this agency, when established, shall be given a reasonable State appropriation in order that it may perform its functions. Legislative attention will be recommended to the existing statutes where district operations have exposed weaknesses. I am transmitting to the Legislature the commission's report, and trust that the necessary legislation may be forthcoming.

It is hoped by this suggested legislation that the following general aims will be accomplished:

- (1) Stem the steady depreciation in the credit standing of this type of security;
- (2) Reinststate the individual borrowing power of the landowners within these districts; and
- (3) Restore the confidence of the investing public in these securities.

STUDY OF EDUCATIONAL PROBLEMS.

The California Commission for the Study of Educational Problems was created by an act of the Legislature of 1929 "to investigate the educational, geographical, financial and organizational problems of the public schools" and to report its findings and recommendations to the Governor for transmittal to this Legislature of 1931. Accordingly, inasmuch as this report will soon be placed before you in detail, I shall here touch upon it only in its broader outlines.

By the provisions of the act authorizing the commission, it was to be composed of nine laymen. In its selection, care was taken to choose men and women of different occupations and interests who come from different sections of the State, eight counties being represented in the nine appointments, as the names here listed and the places of residence indicate:

Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, Chairman, Los Angeles.
Arthur J. Brown, San Bernardino,	Mrs. Maynard Force Thayer, Pasadena,
Marshall DeMotte, Corning,	Mrs. Frederick C. Turner, Berkeley,
Samuel Leask, Santa Cruz,	Julius Wangenheim, San Diego,
James W. Mullen, San Francisco,	Mrs. Julian C. Whitman, San Mateo.

WORK OF THE COMMISSION.

In the course of its investigations the commission has held more than fifty full-day sessions in Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles, besides numerous meetings of smaller groups of the members, who have generously assumed special assignments. The commission's work has been conducted through written inquiries addressed to great numbers of persons in all portions of the State; also through many interviews and conferences with lay citizens on the one hand, such as county supervisors, business men and women, labor leaders and labor employers, agriculturists and the like; and, on the other hand, with educators, such as university professors, county and city superintendents, school teachers, and officials of teacher organizations.

In order to discover what, in the judgment of our lay citizens, constitute the most serious problems of the public schools, the commission sent many thousands of inquiries to men and women broadly interested in civic, social and economic problems; to city, county and State officials; and to many citizens chosen at random from the general voters' list. These inquiries were not of a nature to suggest their own answer, but instead simply asked each citizen to name the three problems of the public school which he deemed most important. The commission informs me that the many hundreds of representative opinions thus gathered have been almost universally characterized by thoughtfulness, common sense, and an earnest desire to aid in perfecting our educational system.

Having thus learned what school problems are uppermost in the minds of our people, the commission has sought to gather complete information as to each of the difficulties involved, to summarize conflicting viewpoints in an impartial manner, and to set forth constructive recommendations for the consideration of the Legislature, school officials and the lay public. An earnest endeavor has been made to make the best interests of the school's ultimate consumer—the child—the keynote of its report.

FIVE GROUPS OF PROBLEMS.

The problems discussed in the commission's forthcoming report are to be ranged in five major groups:

1. Problems of general interest to the layman, which relate more immediately to the student. Topics dealt with under this general heading will include school product; character training; mental hygiene; health examinations; school interruptions; the selection of high school textbooks; vocational guidance; part-time education; accrediting students to the universities; the kindergarten; junior colleges; adult education; regulation of correspondence schools.

2. Problems as to school teachers; an appraisal of present teachers; teacher training; teacher certification; teacher tenure; teacher retirement.

3. Problems as to school organization; reorganization of the State Department of Education; county school superintendents; the larger unit; school attendance.

4. Problems as to school revenues and costs; thirty years of California school costs; school building costs, standards and architecture; bonding versus taxes; sources of school funds; a State Equalization Fund; control of school funds.

5. Problems of a miscellaneous nature; revision of the School Code; insurance of school districts.

The appendix will contain much data in the form of tables, charts, excerpts from the school laws of our own and other states, and special data on various school problems compiled by the commission.

EDUCATIONAL RESULTS AND COSTS.

Finding a much greater public interest in some school problems than in others, the commission has endeavored to accord them particular attention.

The first two chapters of the report deal with two such related problems and are entitled "An Appraisal of the School Product," and "Character Training in the Schools." They summarize current criticisms as to how well the schools have educated our high school graduates, both as to ability and as to character, and suggest remedies for the shortcomings noted. Are our public schools wisely and efficiently training for character development and for the duties of citizenship? Are they failing to meet the practical and cultural needs of their graduates? If the commission can throw light on these questions, even in a small degree, it will have abundantly justified its existence.

As one of its assignments included a mandate "to investigate the financial problems of the public schools," the commission has prepared from the original records at Sacramento an accurate and complete historical presentation of California's school costs for the first thirty years of the present century. The data thus secured is to be printed in the form of tables and graphs so as to be of the greatest assistance to future students of our school problems.

The commission also employed a special staff at Sacramento over a period of two months to compute, tabulate and compile the greater information needed for a second financial survey of even greater scope. This was a study of California's more than three thousand individual elementary school districts, which was made in order to learn how far these school districts vary as to the amount of assessable wealth for each child in the elementary schools, and to ascertain whether in any such districts or groups of districts there exists a financial condition that denies to each child an adequate education.

MISCELLANEOUS SCHOOL PROBLEMS.

The commission hopes to suggest certain basic principles which will be of material aid in formulating a plan for equalizing to some extent support and educational opportunities in the elementary schools. This long standing problem is intricate in itself, and appears to present new complications with every change in method of taxation and apportionment of school funds. Along this line, an attempt will be made to give a fair presentation of the existing status and future possibilities of the much debated subject of a larger unit of school administration, and of its allied subject, the transportation of pupils.

Responses from an inquiry as to public opinion on school matters indicated so much interest in vocational guidance for high school students that this has likewise been treated in a separate chapter. Much criticism has been voiced as to the workings of the Compulsory Part-Time School Law. The commission has devoted particular attention to this problem and prepared a full report on it.

Few school problems are of greater current interest than that regarding the junior colleges. What is their place in the school organization? What should be their future numbers and their scope? How should the cost of their maintenance be divided between the local areas and the State? These and similar questions are discussed at some length.

Much controversy has arisen regarding the present Teacher Tenure Law. The commission has carefully analyzed the conflicting contentions upon the subject and worked out recommendations based upon its analysis of the problem.

A REPORT FROM LAYMEN.

As a group of laymen, the commission has made a special effort to prepare a report so clear, concise and readable, that other laymen, as well as professional educators, may through it come to take a more active and informed interest in the problems of our public schools. Technical language has been avoided, colorful excerpts from significant comments are quoted verbatim; intricate tables, charts and similar matter have been placed in a separate appendix; and brevity has been made the first rule throughout.

As a result of the year's work, the commission has formulated nearly one hundred separate recommendations on public school problems. These are of four types:

1. Those suggesting definite enactments or amendments by the Legislature.
2. Those suggesting definite action by the State Board or Department of Education.
3. Those suggesting definite action by local boards of education and school trustees.

4. Those suggesting general policies on various school matters for all persons interested in the welfare of the schools.

A noteworthy feature of the work of this commission is the fact that as a result of rigid economy it has to date expended less than twenty-five thousand dollars of the fifty thousand dollar fund which the Legislature appropriated for its use.

The advantages of having a careful appraisal made of the work on the public schools by a body of laymen who are independent of the schools for their livelihood, and who, therefore, come to their task with a fresh viewpoint, are so apparent that the Legislature might well consider the advisability of periodically authorizing similar surveys by representatives of the lay public.

CALIFORNIA'S TAX SYSTEM.

Although the study on tax revision during the past two years has been conducted by a legislative committee, nevertheless it is undoubtedly true that much of this study is based upon the very exhaustive report of the California Tax Commission, which actively began its investigations early in 1928 and presented its completed report in March 1929. It is probably true that a more comprehensive and thoroughgoing tax report has never been made in any state; and its tabulated findings as to existing tax burdens must largely form the basis for any modification of our present tax system.

The endeavor to devise a more equitable system of taxation is by no means confined to California. It was my privilege six months ago to attend a Governors' Conference, composed of governors from a majority of the states; and there I found that the matter of chief concern in all these states, as well as all the other states of the Union, was revision of existing tax systems which would more fairly distribute tax burdens. Our own recognition of this problem led to the creation of a Tax Commission, concerning which I spoke of as follows in my message of two years ago:

The California Tax Commission was created in recognition of the fact that the people of the State were demanding a very careful study of our tax problems. It was not because we needed new sources of revenue to provide more money, for we had so cut down expenditures that our existing tax system would apparently supply sufficient revenues for some time to come, with an occasional increase in the gross profits rates of public service corporations. It was rather because certain of these corporations were manifestly being heavily overtaxed, while other larger and more prosperous corporations of the same class were escaping with a clearly insufficient tax burden. It was because real estate, especially in certain counties, was obviously paying more than its fair share of our taxes. It was because we had begun to doubt whether our tax system was, after all, the best and most equitable one.

UNIQUE FEATURE OF SYSTEM.

California's present tax system differs in certain respects from that which prevails in any other state. The main difference consists in the fact that the major portion of our general fund revenues is derived from such public utility corporations as steam railroads, gas and electric companies, telephone and telegraph companies, electric and street railways, and the like. These public utilities pay to the general expenses of State government a certain percentage of their gross receipts. In other words for every dollar of railroad company receipts, 7 cents goes to the support of the State; for every dollar taken in by gas and electric companies, 7½ cents is the State tax; for every dollar collected by telephone or telegraph companies, 5½ cents is exacted; while for street and electric railways, for each dollar in fares 5½ cents was the rate until last November's election, when the voters reduced it to 4½ cents; and so on for the other public utility corporations.

This tax system presupposes that these amounts paid by the public utilities shall, in comparison with the value of their respective properties, produce a tax rate equivalent to that which the ordinary citizen pays on his own property. The Legislature is supposed to revise these rates from year to year for each class of public utilities in such a way as will maintain a uniform tax rate, not only as between the public utilities and the citizen taxpayer, but also as between the various classes of public utilities themselves. Although until 1921 such a revision was made at nearly every legislative session, no change at all has been made since that time. At present it appears clear that to maintain the uniformity desired, one of the most important classes of public utilities should have its rate increased nearly 50 per cent, while a second important class should be increased about 30 per cent. The other classes, it would appear, are paying about the proper rate. Pending the adoption of a new tax system, to make these adjustments would seem to be a primary duty of the Legislature.

It must be borne in mind that in consideration of paying this State tax on their gross receipts, the public utility corporations pay no direct local county or city taxes whatever on their operative property. On the other hand, because the general taxpayer must pay a larger local tax to make up for the lack of local taxes from public utility companies, he in return is relieved from paying any direct State taxes—a situation which prevails in almost no other state. But if State revenues do not come directly from the taxpayer, from what sources are they derived? An answer to this question should probably form a part of any tax discussion.

TWO CLASSES OF STATE REVENUES.

In California our State revenues naturally fall into two entirely distinct classes of funds. One of these consists of the so-called general fund, out of which come all legislative appropriations for public schools, teachers colleges and university; for the maintenance of our State institutions and prisons; for social welfare, including aid to orphans, the aged and the blind; and for all the numerous other activities supported by State government which are not maintained by special revenues. The total amount of general fund revenues for this biennium is approximately $132,300,000, and comes from the following sources:

Receipts from public utilities and insurance companies	--- $82,200,000 00
Receipts from inheritance taxes	----- 23,900,000 00
Receipts from bank and corporation taxes	----- 14,400,000 00
Interest on bank deposits and bonds	----- 4,500,000 00
County support of inmates in State institutions	----- 1,900,000 00
Fees from office of Secretary of State	----- 900,000 00
State land royalties and sales	----- 800,000 00
Miscellaneous general sources	----- 3,700,000 00

Total Revenues for General Fund-----$132,300,000 00

The other kind of State revenues consists of special funds, some thirty in all, each raised in some special way for a specific purpose and expended for no other purpose. Moreover, there is never any attempt to accumulate these special funds into a surplus. Each is expended for its own purpose as soon as raised; and the more economical the expenditure, the lower may be the automobile tax, license fee, harbor toll, or other means by which the various revenues are secured.

During the present biennium, or two-year period extending from July 1, 1929, to July 1, 1931, the total of these various special fund revenues has amounted in round numbers to $115,300,000, secured as follows:

Gasoline taxes for highways, including county roads	--- $68,400,000 00
Various automobile license fees for same general purpose	----- 22,400,000 00
Highway federal aid from U. S. Government	----- 6,900,000 00
Harbor tolls for development of State harbors	----- 6,600,000 00
Fish and game licenses for aid to fish and game	----- 2,900,000 00
Special educational revenues from U. S. Government, etc.	----- 2,200,000 00
Fees for investment regulation, banking, corporations, etc.	----- 2,100,000 00
Agricultural fees for agricultural regulation	----- 1,300,000 00
Miscellaneous, from examining boards, etc.	----- 2,500,000 00

Total Revenues for Special Fund-----$115,300,000 00

Total Revenues for General Fund-----132,300,000 00

Approximate Total Revenues for Biennium-----$247,600,000 00

BANK AND CORPORATION TAXES.

Under a law passed in 1910, all banks in California, both State and national, were taxed by the State at a certain flat rate on the shares of their capital stock. This method of bank taxation proved very satisfactory, and no one desired to change it in any respect. However, in March, 1927, two decisions were handed down by the United States Supreme Court which made it evident that this method of bank taxation was in direct conflict with a certain federal law restricting the manner in which national banks might be taxed. It at once became evident that unless a change were made, not a dollar of bank taxes could be collected, and it was also evident that the banks might recover from the State many millions of dollars paid under this illegal system.

After careful study the California Tax Commission determined that there was only one lawful method by which national banks could be taxed in conformity with federal law. What applied to national banks also applied to State banks, since it was evident that special taxation privileges to national banks would of necessity force our State banks to become national. The one possible taxation system which would meet the requirements of both federal and State law consisted in levying a tax upon banks according to their net income—a tax corresponding to the franchise tax on corporations.

This same federal law also imposed another restriction on bank taxes—namely that their rate should be no higher than the rate of taxes on the net income of financial, mercantile, manufacturing, or business corporations. This added restriction of necessity tied bank taxes and corporation franchise taxes together, and necessitated the same law and the same tax rate for both banks and general corporations. After a great deal of study this rate was finally fixed at 4 per cent as a fair figure, although it is lower than the rate in other states having the same system, such as New York with $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, Massachusetts with $5\frac{1}{8}$ per cent, or Wisconsin with 6 per cent. Although the banks might very properly have paid more than a 4 per cent rate, the law forbids them to pay more than other corporations, and it was determined that 4 per cent was as high as many of the smaller corporations could afford.

This 4 per cent rate would have produced as much revenue from banks and corporations as was produced from the former method of taxing these, had it not been for two features of the law which I shall briefly discuss. The first of these has to do with the basic date from which to measure the gains or losses of corporations and the second concerns the so-called real estate offset.

DEPRECIATION AND DEPLETION.

In order to insure the constitutionality of the act, a certain date had to be fixed on which a "fair market value" of all capital assets included in corporate property should be established as a base for computing depreciation and depletion, as well as for computing the profit or loss when such property is sold. The federal income tax law fixed as such a date March 1, 1913, shortly before the federal law took effect. Our State law fixed its date as January 1, 1928, the beginning of the first year for which income was measured by the new law. In the first few years following 1913 certain corporations were able to subtract from their net earnings a sufficient showing of depreciation from the 1913 valuation to virtually wipe out the federal income tax for the first year, and in a lesser degree for the succeeding few years, until all these possible claims for depreciation were exhausted and a tax on the entire income is now paid.

In the case of our State tax we are now passing through exactly the same stage that prevailed as to federal income taxes just subsequent to 1913. The valuation of 1928 is naturally very much higher than that of 1913, and the depreciation from this higher value in certain instances practically wiped out the net profits during the first year of the law's operation. This explains why the same corporation with perfect propriety might have paid a large federal income tax in 1929, and almost no State income tax during the same year. This deduction for depreciation, however, will in most instances be wiped out very rapidly, just as previously occurred in the case of the federal income tax. Meanwhile I think it must be admitted that since, to insure the constitutionality of the law, a date for this revaluation was necessary, the date of January 1, 1928, was a reasonable one. Moreover, this feature of the law, though the cause of a material reduction for the first year, and decreasingly for the next few years, is not in the long run of serious consequence since these reductions will soon be absorbed.

REAL ESTATE OFFSET.

The second feature of the law, or real estate offset, however, is worthy of very careful consideration. We are not legally permitted to tax national banks on their personal property. In order to deal fairly and avoid overtaxation of mercantile corporations and others paying a large local personal property tax, the law permitted this tax to be deducted as a credit or offset against a portion of the State franchise tax. This offset was very carefully worked out by the Tax Commission in order to establish an equitable and uniform tax burden. But when the new law was submitted to the Legislature a sudden demand arose in certain quarters that a similar real estate offset should also be allowed. The Tax Commission and administration earnestly resisted this demand, as giving an inequitable advantage to banks and certain classes of corporations, as being out of harmony with the general tax plan formulated by the commission, and as causing too great a reduction in our revenues.

Nevertheless, in spite of all objections it soon became evident that the Legislature desired to incorporate the real estate offset provision, at least for a two years' trial. Accordingly, rather than imperil the bill as a whole, the administration reluctantly agreed to the amendment, even though it would in certain instances almost wipe out the tax on banks and other corporations. It is estimated that the use of 10 per cent of the real estate taxes as an offset, as finally agreed upon, has reduced our revenues about $1,500,000 a biennium. The depreciation loss discussed in a former paragraph will soon be automatically wiped out. The real estate offset loss, however, if continued, will increase as time goes on. Whether it shall continue is for the Legislature to determine.

FUTURE OF TAX PROBLEM.

On the whole, this new bank and corporation tax has worked out surprisingly well. It has produced a revenue for the first biennium more than a million dollars greater than was anticipated when the bill was passed, and within a very few years, or as soon as the period of deductions for depreciation is past, it will produce a revenue substantially greater than the former law. Except for the two features I have discussed, it has equalized the burden of corporation taxes, treating large and small corporations alike by exacting a tax on their net incomes, or ability to pay. It has necessarily unfortunately reduced bank taxes too greatly, but until the existing federal law is changed it is the only method of obtaining any bank taxes at all. Moreover its passage has resulted in the dismissal of bank suits for taxes illegally paid, which would have cost the State certainly $10,000,000, and possibly twice that sum. It has been vigorously criticized in recent campaign propaganda; but as far as I can see it is the only law legally possible, and I can not help wondering what its opponents propose to put in its place. This, however, is only one minor portion of our entire tax problem.

Your legislative committee has been vigorously attacking this tax problem, and I should like to hope that, as a result of its study, a solution may be in sight. The California Tax Commission in 1928 made certain recommendations along this line, and certain of them, such as a reduction of the inheritance tax, were carried out. I trust that the Legislature will sternly repel all attempts further to reduce the inheritance tax, for the reduction of two years ago has made it very just and fair as compared with other states. I was, however, unable fully to concur with the commission in its proposal that public utility corporations should again pay local taxes and that the general taxpayer should again pay an ad valorem tax for State purposes. Possibly this change may sometime be made, but before it is made I should like to be convinced that the net result would be a reduction rather than an increase of the taxes paid by the average citizen.

SUGGESTED NEW FORMS OF TAXATION.

Meanwhile, as I have already said, either permanent or temporary commissions in practically every state in the Union are wrestling with the tax problem. What new sources of taxation can be found which shall in themselves entail no oppressive burden, but which will provide additional revenues in sufficient amount to lighten what is now only too frequently an oppressive tax burden? Shall the new source be a personal income tax, such as many states have already adopted? Shall it be a general sales tax? Shall it be a tax on luxuries? I trust, at least, it will not be a diversion to general purposes of such special funds as are produced by the gasoline tax, which was devised for the specific purpose of highway construction and maintenance, and is carrying out that purpose most admirably.

Whatever plan may be devised by your Tax Committee, or worked out from the thoroughgoing and valuable report of the Tax Commission, I would respectfully suggest that you be very sure of your ground before you act. Tax systems are not built up in a day, and whatever plan is finally adopted must be so well founded that its permanence may be fairly sure. Nothing could be worse than a change merely for the sake of change. And, finally, whether an income tax or sales tax or whatever else may be the final solution, the people of the State should be thoroughly educated as to just what it means before it is submitted to the voters for their acceptance or rejection. The best possible plan once definitely rejected can scarcely win its way again within the same generation.

THE SURPLUS AND THE BUDGET.

At some time or other a major change in the tax system will undoubtedly take place, and when this occurs there will undoubtedly be a temporary falling off in State revenues, just as there has been during the first years of our present bank and corporation tax. It is with this in mind that we have carefully built up our general fund surplus from less than $23,000,000 at the beginning of my term of office to the more than $30,500,000 which it will be at the close of this fiscal year—an increase of $7,500,000 during these four years. At the necessary rate of present State expenditures, this present surplus is only sufficient to carry on the government for a comparatively few months if no revenues were forthcoming during those months, and to preserve such a surplus is only prudent business procedure just as it would be in a private business. Meanwhile it furnishes a splendid reservoir to be drawn upon in unforeseen contingencies, or to supply necessary additional revenues when current revenues are temporarily reduced during the adjustment period of a new tax system.

I can not help feeling that too great a reduction in this surplus may only be inviting future trouble.

This surplus will be set forth at the beginning of the Governor's budget, and is practically the only figure of that budget, so far as future revenues or expenditures are concerned, for which the outgoing administration is responsible. As I said at the beginning of this message, the recommendation as to State expenditures is properly the privilege of the incoming Governor, since it is during his administration that the expenditures will be made. The figures of the budget, therefore, are not mine, but are those of my successor.

The form of the budget, however, is one which our present administration devised some months ago and which the new administration has consented to accept. This form, I think, is an improvement upon either of our last two budgets, and is probably the best that can be found in any state. It presents the figures for the various departments in a clearer and more detailed fashion than has previously been the case. By the use of italics for the figures of special funds, both as to revenues and as to expenditures, it carefully differentiates the special and the general funds. It will probably show separately the expenditures for general purposes, for education, and for highways, just as was done in the previous budget, thus setting forth clearly the extent of our educational and highway costs. Finally, it follows the procedure of the last four years in presenting a complete budget, showing every dollar of expenditure, instead of a camouflaged budget showing only a little over half the actual expenditure, as was the procedure prior to four years ago.

STATE UNEMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE.

California, in common with nearly every other part of the world, has during the past year been suffering from an industrial depression which, although far less severe than in many parts of the country, is nevertheless a matter for very serious attention. To the extent that the depression is caused by previous overproduction, industry is necessarily slowed up, and men are thrown out of employment. This, together with rapidly increasing use of machinery to replace hand labor, and the general tendency to retrenchment in a time like the present, has produced unemployment conditions more grave than have before been experienced within recent years.

TWO PROBLEMS PRESENTED.

Such a situation presents two problems: First, to deal with the existing situation, furnishing all the employment possible through an expansion of public works activity and otherwise; and second, to make a thorough study of the whole subject, with the thought of adopting some policy which may render such conditions less acute at any similar future time. The fact that men who are willing to work to maintain themselves and their families should be unable to do so, presents a problem which in a country like ours must certainly be capable of solution.

In the report of the Department of Industrial Relations presented to the Governor's Council last October, the problem of unemployment in our State was discussed. Reference was made to the prolonged depression, its world-wide aspects, and the severe strains on human society that follow from lack of work. As a result, our Department of Public Works not only submitted to contractors a larger volume of work than had been originally contemplated, but a sum of no less than a million dollars was set aside to be expended for hand labor both in the building and in the maintenance of highways. In this way it is estimated that work can be given to nearly 3500 men through all the winter months.

DEPARTMENTAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

The following recommendations were offered by the Department of Industrial Relations as a basis for discussion:

(a) That the Governor of California appoint a State Unemployment Committee.

(b) That the State Unemployment Committee cooperate with each city in California willing to appoint joint committees.

(c) That plans for coping with unemployment now in existence in Wisconsin, Ohio, New York, and other states, as well as in the different cities paying especial attention to the problem, be studied for their respective values.

(d) That the main purpose of alleviating present distress dominate the organizations outlined above, so that effective measures may be taken at the earliest possible moment.

(e) That an intensive study of unemployment insurance be undertaken with a view to submitting to the 1931 California Legislature a plan, or plans, for consideration by the people.

(f) That attention be directed to stabilizing and regularizing employment, to the alternating of lay-offs, to the dismissal wage, and to the importance of new industries in providing work.

(g) That the free state employment agencies be developed for a fuller service, and that the seasonal offices be increased in number, so that all kinds of labor can be furnished without charge to either employers or employees, and that transportation facilities be given to those who are without means.

(h) That federal resources be utilized to the best advantage when pending legislation is passed by Congress.

(i) That State, county and city work be planned with a view to providing the maximum of employment.

(j) That the five-day week be studied as well as other plans for combatting unemployment.

(k) That pension plans, group insurance, compensation insurance, age discriminations in industry, and other like problems that are related to the unemployment question be investigated.

(l) That the Universities of California be invited to have their Departments of Economics assist in every way possible.

(m) That censuses of the unemployed be taken at intervals, so that reliable information will be at hand.

(n) That expert help be obtained by the State to direct the studies and research into the technical questions that will present themselves.

(o) That the California Legislature be asked to appropriate the sum of $100,000 or such part of that sum as may be needed, to meet the expenses herein outlined, all expenditures to be approved by the Governor, the Director of the Department of Finance and the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEE IN TWO GROUPS.

In accordance with propositions (a) and (b) of the department's recommendations, a State Unemployment Committee was appointed. It was my decision that two groups, one for the north and the other for the south, would overcome the objections of time lost in travel. Accordingly I appointed Will J. French, Director of the Department of Industrial Relations, as general chairman, so that the department could serve as a connecting link between the two groups and also give all its facilities to the work. I am exceedingly pleased with the splendid personnel of the committee members who so generously agreed to aid in these endeavors.

AIMS AND PURPOSES OF COMMITTEE.

The principal aims and purposes of the State Unemployment Committee are (1) to devise ways and means of dealing with the present unemployment situation; (2) to study the problem of preventing similar industrial depressions; and (3) to study and suggest methods of dealing with possible similar unemployment emergencies.

The subcommittees appointed by the State Unemployment Committee are at work on the following undertakings: (1) to influence employers of labor to give work to as many workers as possible and to "stagger" employment instead of further reducing their working forces; (2) to secure facts regarding the measures which the State or the communities within the State can undertake immediately to cope with present unemployment; (3) to secure further reliable information on the present unemployment situation; (4) to coordinate the efforts of various communities in dealing with their unemployment problems; and (5) to study the feasibility of regularizing employment in various California industries.

The members of the State Unemployment Committee serve without compensation, but the State Department of Finance has appropriated money out of the emergency fund to cover the cost of its expert and clerical work up to the expiration of my term of office.

COOPERATIVE EFFORT.

It has been a pleasure for me to learn that the State Unemployment Committee is working in close cooperation with similar committees appointed in other states, and also with "The President's Emergency Committee for Employment." Likewise, the response from California's counties and cities has been most gratifying. Local authorities have been asked to have the State Unemployment Committee serve as a clearing house for information and guidance, and plans for the best possible organization for relief are now in the possession of officials all over the State.

Possibly the best service that can be given the people of the State will come from the committee's recommendations dealing with the future. Preparation is advisable for the dark days that may come again. The problems of manufacturing, distribution and consumption must not be overlooked. We can well learn from other and older countries. Some form of employment insurance may prove worth while. Our free State employment agencies, in conjunction with federal agencies, should give more help. Legislation, carefully prepared, should forestall plans that lack due consideration. In a word, California should immediately make so thorough a study of this problem as to prepare us in the future for whatever emergency may arise.

THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT.

The service which any Governor can render to his State is largely determined by the legislative sessions during his term of office. Perhaps no Governor has ever had greater reason than I to appreciate the cooperation of the Legislature. Your record of the past two sessions has been a very splendid one, and has undoubtedly furnished more in the way of constructive legislation than has marked any like period of time within the last dozen years. Indeed, for its equal in worth while accomplishment, I can compare it only with the memorable sessions of 1911 and 1913. This record is one which I am proud to share; and I wish at this time to render you my sincere thanks for your constant and generous cooperation.

NOTABLE LEGISLATIVE ACHIEVEMENTS.

I feel justified in directing attention to some of the more important steps in the interest of our State and its government which have been taken during these four years. I believe that all who have examined these achievements will agree that they are of a fundamental and lasting character. Though I am naturally pleased that they have come within our present administration, nevertheless they are not the accomplishments of an administration alone, but are rather the joint endeavor of both the legislative and executive branches of our government.

An experience of eighteen years in legislative work, with fourteen years of that time spent as presiding officer of one or the other of your two houses, has possibly enabled me to understand your problems better and to appreciate your work more keenly than I could have done had this privilege not been mine. 59. Aid in disaster provided through State Emergency Council.
60. Establishment of much-desired State Nautical School.

A considerable number of these measures are discussed with more or less detail in other portions of this message. Because of this, and because many of you as legislators became familiar with them when they were before you, I feel that there is little need to enlarge upon them here. Practically all those I have named were sponsored by the present administration and many were initiated as major administration policies; but, as I have already said, they would never have come to fruition, had it not been for the generous cooperation of both houses of the Legislature.

THREE IMPORTANT MEASURES.

Aside from the legislation which has been fully treated elsewhere in these pages, I might mention just a few of the achievements of the last two years in which I take especial pride, owing to the fact that they were accomplished in the face of vigorous opposition. An instance of this is the ship-side refrigeration terminal, which a season's use has demonstrated to be almost ideal in every respect. It was insisted by many that no such cold storage plant should be established except upon one certain piece of property for which the owners were asking an excessive price, and which would have required millions of dollars for development. Instead of plunging the taxpayers into this extravagance, we built a plant in a substantial concrete building already belonging to the State, which has proved so well located and so satisfactory that at times last season it was filled to capacity, and which can be doubled in size for next season at a comparatively small expense.

I might also mention the establishment of a traffic patrol, which at my insistence was placed under civil service, so that the traffic officers are assured of continuous employment during good behavior. I believe that every motorist on our highways during the past year has been impressed with the work these men are doing. It was urged upon them from the very first that they had been placed upon the highways to be of service to the comfort and safety of the traveling public; that 98 per cent of those who use our roads are fine, upstanding citizens, careful, competent, and respectful of the rights of others; that all danger lies in the remaining 2 per cent; and that traffic officers who are constantly on the alert can materially lessen this danger, and at the same time find opportunity for courtesy and helpfulness to the vast majority who are careful to observe the "rules of the road."

There is one more new governmental activity to which I should like to call attention. I refer to the supervision of dams on the part of the State, which is designed to prevent any such disaster as the failure of the St. Francis Dam, which destroyed a vast amount of property and took a toll of more than four hundred lives some two or three years ago. This new activity of the Department of Public Works had scarcely commenced to function before it was called upon to examine the San Gabriel Dam, in which Los Angeles County had already spent several millions of dollars, but which was at once shown to be on so insecure a foundation that public safety demanded a discontinuance of the work. It is a great tribute to those in charge of this supervision that neither in the case of the San Gabriel Dam nor in any other of the many examined, has there been the slightest tendency to disagree with the verdict of our engineers in this important matter.

PROSPECTIVE LEGISLATION.

It is, of course, furthest from my thoughts to attempt any interference in a legislative session in which I shall have no part. Nevertheless, interesting as the last two sessions have been, I can not help thinking that the Legislature of 1931 may find more opportunity for constructive achievement than has come to any Legislature in recent years. I believe that any one who reads this message will find on almost every page suggestions of possible accomplishment along both material and humanitarian lines, finer and better than often falls to the lot of a legislative body. I realize only too well that in many respects we have only plowed the ground, and that the harvest is ready for those who care to enter upon it. My best wishes are yours for an interesting and splendidly successful session.

Among other things, I might call to your attention the many earnest studies of the past two years, on the part of both legislative committees and statutory commissions. The former will undoubtedly call forth new laws, sponsored by those who have taken part in this committee work. As for our commissions, I wish to impress upon you that they have worked long and faithfully and very intelligently, and that whatever they may recommend in changes of educational policy, a better and more efficient local self-government, a scientific codification of our vast masses of undigested laws, or a possibility of securing for California a constitution of which she need not be ashamed, is all very distinctly worthy of your attention. Added to this are the problems of taxation and water conservation and better financing of irrigation districts, and a hundred other matters which may easily make this session a very important one.

THE REAPPORTIONMENT PROBLEM.

As one who took part twenty years ago in the reapportionment of California's legislative and congressional districts, may I respectfully suggest that you do not postpone this important task until too late in your session. This is a mistake which we made at that time, with the result that we were called back into an extra session of several weeks' duration in order to complete our work. California this year has challenged the attention of the entire nation by a larger increase in congressional representation than has ever before come to any state at any one time. The constitution is clear that these must be allotted in proportion to population; so your solution of this problem should not be difficult either as to congressional or legislative reapportionment. No work of a legislative session is more interesting than this, and I congratulate you on the opportunity that is yours.

In closing this portion of my message, may I as a former fellow legislator urge you once more to consider the possibility of preparing your proposed legislation in advance of the actual session. I have not felt privileged to follow up the matter this year as I did last session, when with the ever-willing assistance of the Legislative Counsel Bureau, over 650 bills were prepared in advance, and many of them preprinted. As you will remember, an act was passed providing for this preprinting at any time between sessions, thus permitting each legislator to introduce his bills in carefully prepared and printed form. Until this becomes the general rule rather than the exception, legislation will always be hurried and unsatisfactory, and I respectfully commend the advance preparation of bills to you as a matter worthy of your most serious attention.

THE JUDICIAL BRANCH OF THE GOVERNMENT.

In my message of two years ago, in discussing the Judicial Department of the State, I outlined in detail the different branches of the judiciary—Supreme Court, District Courts of Appeal, superior courts, municipal courts, and such inferior courts as the Legislature may establish. I shall not repeat that discussion here, but shall confine my attention to two specific matters of more than passing interest relating to the administration of justice in California. I refer to the creation of the State Bar of California and to the work of the Judicial Council.

THE STATE BAR ACT.

By the State Bar Act, approved by me on March 31, 1927, all persons then entitled to practice law in this State were constituted members of a public corporation, which body is given general powers "to aid in the advance of the science of jurisprudence and in the improvement of justice," and the power, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court, "to formulate and enforce rules of professional conduct for all the members of the bar in the State." The board of governors of the State Bar, chosen by its members, and also subject to the approval of the Supreme Court, may prescribe the conditions for admission to practice law in this State, and shall investigate all charges of unprofessional conduct preferred against practicing lawyers, and shall recommend to the Supreme Court that those found guilty of unprofessional conduct be disciplined by reproof or by disbarment or suspension from practice.

The act was vigorously attacked as being an unconstitutional attempt on the part of the Legislature to delegate its control over the practice of the law in this State, and as being an invasion of the inherent power of the courts to control the conduct of attorneys practicing before them. When the law was finally brought before the Supreme Court, however, the constitutionality of the Legislature's action in passing the statute was promptly sustained.

Were I to judge from my own observation alone, I would say that the result of the passage of the State Bar Act has been highly beneficial. The standards for admission to practice law have been raised, the ethics of professional conduct of members of the bar have been given new meaning, and the practice of law in California has been placed upon a higher plane. But I do not have to rely upon my observation, for my conclusion about the whole matter finds increasingly generous support in the judgment of our citizens, and in the whole-hearted acquiescence of the great majority of the legal profession. California's progress in this regard is being very carefully studied in a number of other states, some of which have adopted practically all of the provisions of our State Bar Act.

THE JUDICIAL COUNCIL.

The Judicial Council, created as a part of the Judicial Department of the State by an amendment of the constitution adopted November 2, 1926, consists of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, one Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, three justices of the District Courts of Appeal, four justices of superior courts, one judge of a police or municipal court, and one judge of an inferior court, all assigned by the Chief Justice to sit thereon for terms of two years. It thus provides a body of trained experts drawn from all the courts of the State, with plenary authority to survey the business in the several courts and to submit such suggestions to the several courts as may seem in the interest of uniformity and the expedition of judicial business.

As provided by the constitution, the Judicial Council of California is composed wholly of justices and judges of the courts. The members of the council have considered this fact a weakness in that members of the legal profession have no official part in the consideration of the matters in which it plays such an important part. This defect, in so far as it can be remedied without submitting another constitutional amendment to the people, has been cured by the cordial cooperation of the State Bar and the Judicial Council, through the appointment by the State Bar of a committee of five members which meets regularly with the council and participates unreservedly in the consideration of all matters acted upon by that body.

WORK OF THE COUNCIL.

The report of the council made to the Governor and the Legislature at its session in 1927, was devoted largely to a survey of the conditions of business in the various courts, and but few measures were submitted for legislative action. Those few, however, were approved and became laws. Several important amendments to the constitution, relating particularly to the courts and their jurisdiction, were suggested by the council at that session, and were adopted by the people at the November election in 1928. Some fifty carefully considered bills were presented by the council to the Legislature at the session in 1929. After careful scrutiny of these proposed measures by the judiciary committees of both houses, the greater number of these bills became laws. They relate to the jurisdiction of the courts and to matters of procedure, and tend to simplify and expedite the trial of causes in court. Experience in the various courts since the passage of the measures has demonstrated the benefit of their passage.

In my opinion, the outstanding feature of the work of the Judicial Council has been the unification of the judicial system of the State. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, as chairman of the council, is, by the constitution, made the chief executive, or administrator, of the judicial department. In order to "expedite judicial business and to equalize the work of the judges, he shall provide for the assignment of any judge to another court of a like or higher jurisdiction to assist a court or judge whose calendar is congested, or to act for a judge who is disqualified or unable to act, or to sit and hold court where a vacancy in the office of judge has occurred." The late Chief Justice Taft of the Supreme Court of the United States hailed this feature of the California Judicial Council as its most notable provision.

This power of the chairman of the council to so mobilize the judicial man-power of the State as to relieve the congestion in the courts in the different counties of the State and in different cities in the same county has resulted in practically removing the unhappy situation existing because of the crowded condition of our courts four years ago. The one exception has been the courts in Los Angeles County, where the increase in population has been so rapid that it has been impossible to keep pace with the litigation which seems inevitably to follow such a growth. Even in that county, however, much has been accomplished, and the condition has been improved at least 50 per cent. The time between setting a cause for trial and actual trial has been reduced one-half. At one time within the past four years the showing was even better.

RESULTS OF COUNCIL'S EFFORTS.

Under assignment by the chairman of the Judicial Council, during the period July 1, 1928, to July 1, 1930, judges of the superior and municipal courts served in other courts than their own a total of 655 months—the equivalent of the continuous service of 27 judges for the two-year period.

One result of the progress which has been made in clearing the dockets of the trial courts has had an opposite effect upon the situation in the District Courts of Appeal and the Supreme Court. In December, 1926, there were pending and uncalendared in these two courts 2130 causes. In the three succeeding years (January 1, 1930), 5486 appeals were filed. There were, on June 30th of this year, 2242 causes uncalendared and awaiting disposition in the Supreme Court and the District Courts of Appeal. In other words, due to the greatly increased number of appeals, these courts are just about where they were four years ago, in so far as relates to the number of undecided cases. However, the time from the perfecting of appeals to final disposition has been materially lessened.

Remedying these conditions, which so materially affect the administration of justice in this State, in the face of our rapidly mounting population and a corresponding increase in litigation, is one of the problems that will tax the ability of the Legislature, the courts and the Judicial Council. Antiquated forms of procedure in our courts should be replaced by methods which tend to expedition and simplicity of action. It is no answer to the problem to say, as may quite possibly be said, that the conditions in this State are no worse than they are in other states. They are being bettered in many other jurisdictions. They must be made better here.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT.

As distinguished from the legislative and the judicial branches of government, the administrative branch is that to which is committed the details of carrying out various governmental functions. That part of the administrative branch subject to direction of the Governor's office I have already named under the head of our various State departments, each of which I shall further discuss in detail later in this message. Aside from these, however, are four elective offices, whose duties are largely independent of the executive, but which none the less play an important part in the machinery of State government.

These four offices are those of the Secretary of State, the State Controller, the State Treasurer, and the Attorney General. Under modern theories of government where the so-called "short ballot" is advocated, these offices are considered of such a nature that they might well be filled by appointment rather than by election. However, in California this is only an academic question, since the voters are so well satisfied with the manner in which they are being conducted that they appear more than willing to give the present incumbents a life tenure. These four officials have served for terms ranging from eight to twenty-eight years, and have been elected and reelected to their present positions from three to eight times each.

In such State publications as the last edition of the California Blue Book, the powers and duties of these public officials are so fully described that I need not enlarge upon them here. Three of them, the Secretary of State, the Controller and the Treasurer, have their offices adjacent to that of the Governor on the first floor of the Capitol, while the Sacramento office of the Attorney General is located in the Capitol annex, known as the Library and Courts Building. Up to two years ago the Surveyor General was also an elective office, but this is now operating as a division in the Department of Finance.

These four officials, together with the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Superintendent of Public Instruction and the State Board of Equalization, constitute California's nonjudicial elective officers, all of them coming before the voters at the time of the regular gubernatorial election. I am happy this year, just as I was two years ago, to acknowledge the many courtesies and favors the Governor's office is constantly receiving from these elective fellow officials. In all their contacts they have manifested their willingness to be cooperative, and it is this fine spirit of friendliness and good will which serves to make our work at the State Capitol so satisfying and enjoyable.

CALIFORNIA'S DEPARTMENTALIZED GOVERNMENT.

Of all our accomplishments of the past two years, as well as the two years which preceded, I feel certain that the one of the most permanent value is the reorganization plan by which all the various governmental activities of the State have been committed to certain definite departments. I first called attention to this matter in my inaugural address four years ago, at which time I spoke as follows:

The government of California, like that of most other states, has gradually taken on a large number of functions, social, regulatory, and developmental—functions which some governmental agency must perform, and which for many reasons naturally devolve upon the State. This has given rise to numerous boards and commissions, now operating independently of each other, but of such nature that they readily fall into groups, each group containing agencies with interrelated and sometimes overlapping functions.

California, eight years ago, made a preliminary study of this problem to determine whether it would not be in the interest of economy, and more especially in the interest of efficiency, to organize these groups into departments of the State government. At that time, only a beginning of the work was accomplished. I accordingly invite the attention of the Legislature to this problem, and suggest that the work of departmentalizing the State's activities be at this time continued.

Two years ago our reorganization plan had demonstrated its worth, as was set forth in the following paragraph from my first biennial message:

In 1927, at the beginning of the present administration, the matter of the reorganization of State government was taken up in earnest, for it was felt that the securing of businesslike efficiency in the State's affairs must be largely dependent upon a businesslike set-up of our various governmental agencies.

The Legislature responded heartily to suggestions toward this end, with the result that nine strong departments have thus far been organized, and have been functioning since the laws creating or reorganizing them went into effect a year and a half ago. * * * Only those in close touch with State affairs can fully realize how much hitherto wasted and duplicated effort has been saved, and how much added efficiency has been gained, through this new governmental plan.

After an additional two years since the foregoing was written, the California plan of government through departments has unquestionably so commended itself to our citizens that there is little probability that it will ever be abandoned. At the legislative session of 1929, four more departments were added to the nine which were provided at the previous session, thus making thirteen now functioning. Among the recommendations I shall make for this session is the establishment of a fourteenth department which will more adequately care for several State activities now included in existing departments. In my judgment, these fourteen departments will very fully complete the possibilities of California's State governmental reorganization.

GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION FOUND WANTING.

In order more fully to understand the importance of this departmentalizing of State government, it may be well to trace briefly how it all came about. When states were small in population and had comparatively few governmental functions, it was possible for a governor to keep in fairly close touch with all the work of the various State agencies. This is perhaps still the case in some of our smaller states, though the multiplication of governmental agencies has made it difficult, even in the smallest of them. In even these, and in all the larger states, succeeding legislatures at every session have enormously added to the scope of the states' activities; and as each new responsibility was added, in most every case it was put into the hands of some board or commission for its administration.

Nearly thirty years ago writers on problems of state government were calling attention to the rapidly increasing number of boards and commissions. One of these writers in 1901 classifies these as investigational, semijudicial and executive, and points out that nearly one hundred at that time existed in New York, while in such other populous states as Massachusetts and Pennsylvania there was likewise a large number. From 1901 until 1917, when Illinois under Governor Lowden first moved toward a departmentalized state government, the number of boards and commissions in almost every state more than doubled. In California during that period the number which had been created since the beginning increased from 58 to 135.

Practically all these commissions and boards were appointed by the Governor, and hence were theoretically responsible to him. However they rapidly became so many in number, so diverse in kind, and frequently so technical in operation that their contact with the Governor's office was of necessity very slight. They were consequently left to function by themselves without anything in the way of adequate supervision. In cases where a commission was composed of members who for personal reasons were especially interested in their particular work, the results were, of course, good. When, on the other hand, the appointments were made for political reasons or simply to do honor to individuals, the results were correspondingly poor. The important point, however, was the fact that the Governor, who of right ought to be the manager of the business of State government, did not and could not have any accurate knowledge of the business under his charge. At best it was a hit-or-miss, haphazard kind of government, and became so more and more in direct ratio to the increasing number of governmental functions created by legislative act and entrusted to constantly added and unsupervised commissions, each independent of all the others.

DEPARTMENTAL SYSTEM FIRST RECOMMENDED.

The first definite recommendation for a change in these conditions in California was voiced by Governor Pardee in his second biennial message, issued just twenty-four years ago today. In his message the Governor expressed himself as follows:

State and institutional boards are neither very efficient nor economical, and can not be, because the responsibilities of their members are so divided. Division of responsibility never makes for efficiency in the conduct of either public or private affairs, and I am strongly of the opinion that if most of our State boards and commissions were abolished and departments substituted, each being under a responsible head, holding office at the pleasure of the chief executive, with the executive strictly responsible to the people, a marked degree of improvement in efficiency and economy in the dispatch of public business would result.

These words of Governor Pardee, and similar messages at about the same time by governors of other states, very accurately express the thought underlying departmentalized state government. Yet it was ten years before the first such government was established under Governor Lowden of Illinois; twelve years before the creation of our own State Department of Agriculture as a sort of preliminary experiment; and twenty years before the beginning of the present administration, when California adopted a departmental form of government in fact as well as in name. Meanwhile the number of boards and commissions of which Governor Pardee complained had considerably more than doubled, making the solution of the problem both more necessary and more difficult.

FREEDOM FROM POLITICAL INFLUENCES.

The experience of California during the past four years, and that of the dozen or more other states which have departmentalized their government, has abundantly proved that this is the most efficient and businesslike way in which a state government can be conducted. Moreover, I am very certain that those states have been most successful which, like California during these years, have entirely safeguarded their departments from political influences of any kind. To illustrate what I mean, I may perhaps be pardoned for stating our own procedure and experiences during the past four years.

The directors of our thirteen State departments were all appointed on account of their special knowledge of, interest in, or preparation for, the special work under their charge. Not one of the appointments could in any sense be classed as political. Each director from the first was fully assured that he was given a free hand in conducting his department without any dictation or interference whatever from the Governor; that he was to have entire freedom as to appointments within his own department, and would not be asked to make a single appointment or perform a single act for political reasons; that he would be backed up by the Governor as against unjust criticism of any kind; that the only thing asked of him was to produce results through his own hard work and that of his department employees.

The result has been a group of directors comparable to the board of directors or officials of any big private corporation. Only two have resigned during the four years, in each case to accept better openings elsewhere at salaries which the State could not meet. Every director has come to have a real pride in his work and to feel that as far as his particular activity is concerned, he himself is virtually a "governor" in his own particular department. In this way and only in this way, I am satisfied, can our best and most able citizens be made interested in public service; and it is with the greatest satisfaction that I have seen each of these directors of his own right win a place for himself and his department in public attention and esteem.

Inasmuch as the directors form a sort of Governor's cabinet, in almost every instance they hold office at his pleasure. They are essentially the agents for the execution of his policies. Their responsibility to him is in exact accord with modern ideals of government. But although this relation of the chief executive to his department heads makes it proper that they should be removable at his pleasure, this should by no means apply to all appointees. In a word, there should be no relaxing of the determination that officials charged with technical, educational, or judicial duties must be free to perform those duties during fixed terms of office beyond the influence of any "spoils system," or the danger of political removal.

SUGGESTION FOR FOURTEENTH DEPARTMENT.

As I have said, thirteen of these departments have thus far been organized; and I feel quite certain that the time is approaching when the list should be completed by a fourteenth, which may take over certain activities that would bear a closer relation to such new department than to the departments in which they are now included. This new department might be called the "Department of State Development and Commerce," or some more appropriate name. It would probably best function under about four divisions, such as a Division of Commerce, a Division of Exhibits, a Division of Standards and a Division of Construction and Planning.

The Division of Commerce would take over the work of the Bureau of Commerce, now in the Department of Finance, and possibly all or some of the activities now conducted by the Division of Markets under the Department of Agriculture. Its principal function should be the finding of outlets for California products of all kinds, whether in the foreign or domestic field. This, of course, does not extend to the actual sale of products, since that is a matter for private enterprise; but rather in the collection of basic information as to economic conditions, sales methods and trade practices in foreign and domestic markets, and as to market possibilities for specific products and the character of competition which will render such products unprofitable. It would also take over the Fish Exchange, which since its creation has for some unexplained reason been included in the Department of Agriculture.

The Division of Exhibits is now rather inappropriately included in the Department of Finance, and comprises the State Agricultural Society which has charge of the State Fair, together with the district agricultural associations which have charge of the various district fairs, but whose directors are State appointees. Among these is the Sixth District Association which has in the heart of Los Angeles city a beautiful agricultural park with its permanent buildings and exhibits, and worth many millions of dollars. The holding of these fairs clearly stimulates the agricultural, industrial, and commercial development of the State, and would hence be very appropriately in the control of the proposed new department.

The Division of Standards would take over from the Department of Agriculture its Division of Weights and Measures, as well as its Mattress Inspection Service, its Upholstered Furniture Service and similar activities which seem clearly out of place in the Agricultural Department. The securing of honest weights and measures, and honest materials in these manufactured articles, would appear to be a proper function of a department such as here outlined.

The Division of Construction and Planning would especially apply to the development side of the department, and would render service in providing and enforcing State building codes and related regulations, in stabilizing building construction, both public and private, in compiling information which will lead to the promotion of home ownership, in regional planning and zoning, and in doing such other things as will serve to aid the State's development along these lines.

Possibly other functions not here mentioned may properly be included in such a department; or, on the other hand, possibly some of the activities here suggested may seem inappropriate. I believe, however, that California's rapid growth will soon justify a State department of this nature. Its director should probably be the chief of its most important division, thus avoiding the expense of a separate director's salary. Finally, I am certain that with the addition of this department every possible State function will have been cared for, and the departmentalizing of our State government will be complete.

THE GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL.

It is unquestionably true that, among the dozen or more states which have attempted governmental reorganization similar to ours, California's preeminence is very largely due to the creation of a Governor's Council, composed of the directors of all the thirteen State departments. Following is the language of the statute providing for this council and directing where and how often its meetings must be held:

A council to be known as the Governor's Council is hereby created, to consist of the Director of Finance, Director of Education, Director of Public Works, Director of Public Health, Director of Institutions, Director of Agriculture, Director of Industrial Relations, Director of Social Welfare, Director of Natural Resources, Director of Investment, Director of Professional and Vocational Standards, Director of Military and Veterans' Affairs and Director of Penology. At least once each month the council shall meet in Sacramento at such time and place as may be designated by the Governor. It shall be the duty of each of the members of the council to report to the Governor at the time of such monthly meeting, and at such other times as the Governor may desire, the facts regarding the administration of the functions of his department, and to perform such other duties, as a member of the council, as may be required of him by the Governor.

This Governor's Council was first created by the Legislature of 1927, to comprise the directors of the nine departments organized at that session. The statute of 1929 merely amends the original act by adding the four new directors to the council's membership, thus making a total of thirteen in all. So far, since its inception, forty-one meetings of the council have been held at the State Capitol, aside from three additional meetings in Los Angeles. It has become the custom of the present administration to make the January and July council meetings at Sacramento general in character, and to have the regular directors' reports for those two months presented at a Los Angeles meeting, thus permitting the citizens of southern California to get more closely in touch with the details of State government.

REGULAR COUNCIL MEETINGS.

The regular days for meetings of the council are the last Wednesday of each month, and the Tuesday afternoon preceding. The council convenes at two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, and generally finds time for five directors' reports before adjournment. Tuesday evening is occupied by an informal dinner meeting, attended only by the council, the Governor and his two secretaries. The council reconvenes at nine o'clock Wednesday morning and usually finishes its work by five o'clock in the afternoon.

The regular meetings are held in the council chamber adjoining the Governor's office in the State Capitol, and are open to the press and to the public. A semicircular table is provided, around which the sessions take place, with accommodations for fifteen—the Governor, the thirteen members of the council, and for an additional member in case a new State department should be created. Similar provisions are being made in the auditorium of the new State building in Los Angeles. In both these places adequate seating is provided for those who may desire to keep in touch with the progress of our varied governmental activities.

The council meetings are particularly designed to enable each of the directors to make a comprehensive report as to the work of his department during the month, and to enable the Governor and other directors to make suggestions and inquire, and to discuss the activities of each department in its relation to other departments and to our State government as a whole. In every council meeting questions arise where opportunity is provided to reconcile conflicting interests of various departments, or to discover where overlapping functions of different departments are resulting in duplicated effort, and prevent the needless expense and waste which this entails. Sometimes matters of this kind are settled at the council meeting; sometimes a committee of directors is appointed for a special investigation of the question at issue, for report at the next council meeting.

THE COUNCIL IN ACTION.

It may not be out of place to give a short description of the manner in which the council conducts its meetings. Each of the State departments carries on the various branches of its work in divisions, ranging from four to seven in number and each in charge of a division chief. Each department director, in addition to his constant personal supervision, calls his division chiefs together once or more each month, thus obtaining an accurate picture of all pending departmental activities. This picture is presented to the council meeting in the form of a mimeographed report, with copies for the Governor and the other council members, for the press and spectators, and for such public organizations as may desire them. I am preserving sets of all these reports for each of the past four years as a history of California's governmental activities during that period, and am transmitting similar sets of reports to my successor; and each department director has been instructed to do the same for the one who succeeds to his department.

The directors present their reports in the order in which they are seated at the council table, which is the alphabetical order of their department titles. The one whose report comes first one month is placed last the succeeding month, thus providing a constant rotation. The director partly reads his report and partly delivers it orally as suggested by his marginal notes. He occupies from half an hour to an hour or more, according to the amount of discussion the report calls forth. In order to save time, no one takes part in this discussion except the directors and the Governor. If the director is absent through illness or absence from the State, he sends his report to be read to the council by the Governor. This rule has been strictly adhered to, in order that directors might not form the habit of being represented at council meetings by subordinates in their departments.

VALUE OF COUNCIL MEETINGS.

The value of these regular monthly council meetings may perhaps best be shown by contrasting them with former statutory provisions for reports to the Governor. In almost all the laws creating new functions of government, it was provided that the particular board or commission to which any one of these functions was intrusted should make a report to the Governor once every two years, just preceding the legislative session. These reports were dutifully made, duly presented to the Governor, and tucked away in pigeonholes without being read by him or by anybody else—which was probably just as well, since there is little value in reports concerning events two years old.

Meanwhile, the only way the Governor could keep in touch with the work of these agencies was by calling them into his office for consultation. A Governor, however, is a very busy individual in merely attending to the hundreds of pressing matters which make up his daily routine. Consequently he found no time for consultations with these boards and commissions, nor could he find opportunity for consultation with separate department heads except at an enormous waste of time and energy. As a matter of fact, such consultations would ordinarily be very rare.

The regular monthly council meeting, however, furnishes the Governor with just the touch that he needs. It assembles together at one time and place all those in charge of the details of his administration. It furnishes both orally and in writing a definite report of progress along all governmental lines. It enables him as Governor to preside at this meeting of his associates with exactly the same proper dignity of position which a President assumes at meetings of his Cabinet. Finally it enables him with the least possible expenditure of his time to keep constantly informed as to what each and every department is doing, and thus substitutes a live monthly report for the dead two-year-old reports of former days.

FOUR CHIEF PURPOSES.

Thus, to sum up what I have already said, the creation of a Governor's Council has served at least four purposes, each of them so important as to make it almost indispensable in any departmentalized form of government: First, it brings together those in charge of various governmental activities, and furnishes opportunity for unifying those activities such as would never be possible when boards, commissions, or even departments have no contact, one with the other. Second, it keeps the Governor continuously informed as to the progress of the State's government from month to month, with only a fraction of the time and effort which would be required in a constant endeavor to learn about each department separately. Third, it gives to the Governor a body much like a President's cabinet, consisting of council members, each especially concerned with the work of his own department, but all acquiring a general knowledge of all departments, and consequently always available to the Governor for counsel and advice. And fourth, by the very necessity of these monthly reports to the Governor in the presence of his fellow directors, each director is stimulated to his best efforts to keep closely in touch with the activities of each division in his department.

A FORTUNATE ELECTION RESULT.

At the last general election a constitutional amendment was submitted to the voters by which the Legislature might be empowered to provide for representation in the Governor's Council of any governmental agency, where such representation does not conflict with the constitutional provisions under which it was created. The chief purpose of this amendment was to cover agencies such as the Osteopathic and Chiropractic boards, which were willing to be represented in the council, but were doubtful as to their right to representation owing to the fact that they were organized under initiative acts, and as such were not subject to acts passed by the Legislature.

It developed, however, on a subsequent study of the proposed amendment, that it was inadvertently so worded as expressly to bar from the council all elective officials, and would thus possibly have shut out the very important Department of Education, whose director was the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Accordingly, the passage of the amendment would obviously have done more harm than good, and no effort was made in its behalf. Its rejection at the polls may therefore be considered very fortunate, since it leaves the present status of the council unimpaired.

REPORT ON STATE ACTIVITIES.

Thus far I have outlined our present State program of long-time planning, and detailed the careful studies which have been under way during the past year, both for the development of the State along material lines and for lasting improvements in our governmental machinery. I have also sketched the departmental plan according to which California's government has been organized, and the importance of the regular meetings at which those departments have found expression.

As in the case of my previous message, I shall now proceed to do the thing for which such a message is primarily intended—namely, present a picture of the various administrative agencies of the State and show their accomplishments during the past biennium, as well as the work in which each is now engaged. I shall treat these under the heads of the various departments into which these agencies are organized. In the case of the university, the Railroad Commission, and the State Harbor, which are virtually the only ones not departmentalized, I shall discuss each immediately after the State department to which it bears the closest relation.

In this way I trust that I may cover more or less thoroughly all the activities with which California's government is administratively concerned. I wish to acknowledge my appreciation to the directors of our various departments for the data which they have furnished me, and to thank them for permitting me to incorporate those data, frequently verbatim, into this message. I have been interested to observe that the material which they have sent me in outlining the activities of their respective departments is nearly twice as rich in detail as the similar material furnished two years ago; for I regard this as a very accurate index of the constantly increasing interest which these department heads are taking in their work.

For purposes of ready reference, I have followed the plan of my former message by which a definite topic may be found at the beginning of each paragraph. I shall discuss these departments in alphabetical order, beginning with the Department of Agriculture.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

DIRECTOR, GEORGE H. HECKE.

California has experienced the extremes of agricultural conditions during the past two years. Just as 1929 was a year of short crops and high prices, 1930 has been a year of bountiful production and a sluggish market. The State's farming industry, however, has withstood these conditions arising from a worldwide depression remarkably well and has fared better than agriculture in most other states. This is due in large measure to the wide diversity of our production and the fine reputation for sustained quality which our agricultural industry enjoys. While limited buying power felt in every country during the past few months could not fail to be reflected profoundly in California, the widespread confidence in California fruits, vegetables and field crops, which has been built up under our own agricultural policies, has demonstrated emphatically that we are building our State agricultural administration on a secure foundation.

State Leads in Many Lines of Production.

The bulk of our immense farm wealth must be sent to distant markets where much of it competes with commodities originating but a short distance from the chief marketing centers of the United States. It is necessary for the California grower to produce a better product if he is to sell in areas which otherwise might fill their requirements for the same commodity locally. In order to absorb transportation and refrigeration and other costs incident to long shipment, the California grower must produce in large quantities. It is essential that all branches of agriculture cooperate for their common good if we are to continue the trade supremacy which has been created in the past decade. The Department of Agriculture has had a definite influence toward this end, and with continuation of the present policy of intimate cooperation between the department and industry, this happy condition should continue.

VARIOUS AIDS TO AGRICULTURE.

Agriculture Requires Careful Legislative Consideration.

During the past four years legislative and administrative branches of the State have given agriculture the earnest consideration due an industry upon which a large part of our California population is dependent for a livelihood. The value of our farm output is nearly $800,000,000 annually. An industry so basically important should receive all possible aid from government in the solution of problems affecting its welfare. Our farming industry has grown tremendously since the World War. Necessarily the Department of Agriculture has kept pace with the growth of the industry it serves. If it had lagged, farming and all other interests would have suffered. Much of the burden of cost of this increased service has been assumed by the farming industry. I know of no finer endorsement for the principles and practices of the Department of Agriculture than this voluntary assumption by the farmers of a major portion of the cost of their own regulation.

State Board of Equalization Is Stabilizing Agency.

The 1929 Legislature created the State Board of Agriculture at the request of my administration and of a majority of farm interests. This board, designed to create confidence in the integrity and continuity of department policies, is directed, by the act creating it, to advise with the Governor and the Director of Agriculture regarding agricultural problems. The act provides that, after appointment of the initial membership, a majority of the board's members can not be named during any one administration. Further provision is made that no two members shall be from any one county or congressional district, nor represent the same branch of agricultural industry. The law requires that members of the board shall be active in the industry they represent. Accomplishments of this board during its first year are the best evidence that a real need was met by its organization. It was composed of men who are really representative of California agriculture and who are actuated by a desire to serve the farming industry. If policies which the board has formulated are given the full support of farming interests, the service rendered farmers by the Department of Agriculture should continue to meet the needs and desires of the industry.

Cooperation with Federal Government.

Much of the strength and stability of the department is based upon the strong cooperative agreements with the United States Department of Agriculture which have been made during recent years. Certainly this coordination of federal and State forces has made for greater efficiency and economy. By means of this union of governmental strength and effort our quarantine, standardization, shipping point inspection, dairy control and various phases of marketing activities are furthering the direct mandate, not only of the California people but of the federal government as well. This cooperative program, moreover, has the important effect of eliminating duplication of effort by enabling the same forces and equipment to handle both State and federal duties.

PROTECTION AGAINST PESTS AND DISEASES.

Mediterranean Fruit Fly Danger Abated.

California growers who feared that the Mediterranean fruit fly would find its way into the State will find reassurance in results of federal operations in Florida during the past year. While a heavy and widespread infestation by this most damaging of fruit pests was reported in 1929, intensive inspection resumed by federal authorities last June indicate that the fruit fly is well under control in Florida, if not actually eradicated. California has benefited directly from precautions taken against spread of the fly to this State. State-wide surveys conducted by the Department of Agriculture in 1929 and again this year indicate that, should a major pest of fruits or vegetables succeed in eluding the vigilance of border inspection, it is unlikely to remain undetected for a sufficient time to permit it to become established here.

Border Inspection Proven Value.

This past danger of Mediterranean fly infestation of our State proves the value of our border inspection service, which the State has maintained in connection with its quarantine policies for many years. As a final precaution against possible economic loss should the fly ever find its way into the State, the department, in cooperation with federal and county authorities and of the farming industry, has conducted experiments to establish means of processing deciduous and citrus fruits and fruit-like vegetables. Thus if the State is invaded by the fruit fly, it is confidently expected that by means of these treatments our extensive commerce in these products can be continued without disastrous interruption while eradication is taking place.

Pest Control a Necessary Function.

The wide range of climatic conditions and the large number of crops produced offer a possible environment for pests from many other countries; and these probably would find a foothold here were it not for enforcement of plant quarantine regulations, particularly at our ports and border stations. Increasing commerce by water and rail, together with the large number of automobiles from other states, is increasing our responsibility in this regard. During the past two years, agricultural inspection and motor vehicle stations have been combined at our points of highway entrance as a means of decreasing delay to which tourists must be subjected, and of giving them as favorable a reception to California as possible. Recently a new inspection station which is intended to serve as a model for stations constructed in the future was opened at Yuma.

Protective Position Strongest in History.

The fundamental soundness of the department's agricultural protective policies has never been more apparent than at this time. While border and port inspection has maintained a barrier against intrusion of many pests and diseases inimicable to the farming industry, surveys and systematic intrastate inspections have given further assurance that the State is not likely to be caught unaware by damaging infestations and infections. The campaign against citrus white fly, which several years ago appeared as a formidable pest, has so progressed that areas which must be sprayed this season represent but a small fraction of the territory formerly infested. Results of a recently completed survey indicate that the dietyospermum scale, which it had been feared was of great potential damage to the important and growing avocado industry of southern California, is not to be considered as a major avocado pest at this time.

Cotton Growers Reassured.

The pink bollworm, one of the most destructive of cotton pests, appeared in Arizona last year. There was imminent danger of its spread, by means of both natural flight and transportation, into California. Federal authorities have conducted an effective campaign against the pink bollworm in Arizona, but until it has been eradicated there California must be on the alert against its introduction. Federal-State cooperation affords means to reassure cotton growers of the State that the pest is not present. Supplementing rigid border inspection maintained against the pink bollworm, four new and remarkably efficient mechanical detectors were secured by the department from federal authorities for use in California cotton gins. These machines did not detect a single specimen of the pest in gin trash during the ginning season just ended.

LIVE STOCK AND DAIRYING.

Foot and Mouth Disease Eradicated.

An outbreak of foot and mouth disease, the most serious epidemic known to the cattle industry, demonstrated the efficiency of California's system of protection against animal diseases. While a former outbreak in California of this disease was not eradicated until it had swept through many sections of the State and had caused heavy economic losses, the experience then gained contributed to such an extent that the 1929 occurrence of this disease was of brief duration. Actual eradication was accomplished in 60 days at a total cost to the State of $122,000 as compared to approximately $3,000,000 spent in stamping out this disease during 1924-26.

Indemnification Authority Given Legislature.

Authority for the Legislature to provide funds for indemnifying owners of live stock which is slaughtered as a means toward eradicating or controlling communicable animal diseases was voted at the recent election. While this constitutional amendment affords effective means of procedure in state-wide crises, such as arose during the foot and mouth outbreak of 1924, it can and undoubtedly will be used to hasten eradication of bovine tuberculosis. Tuberculosis has a tremendous bearing on our health problem because of the universal use of milk as food, and has long been a cause of heavy economic loss to the dairy and other live stock industries.

Even if the Legislature sees fit to provide funds for this work in compliance with the implied wish of a majority of the State's voters, because of the magnitude of the task involved it can not be assumed that bovine tuberculosis will be eradicated except by means of a stiff, uphill fight, over a period of years.

State's Dairy Control Has High Rating.

Dairy control administration, as practiced in California, not only has resulted in giving the State the highest quality of milk and milk products, but has caused our dairy regulations to be accepted by federal and many other authorities as a model organization. By means of cooperation with State and county health departments more than 96 per cent of the State's population now is assured a wholesome market milk supply. Similarly, more than 80 per cent of all manufacturing milk and cream is graded under State supervision for quality on a definite scientific basis. The State's milk score card averaged 94.86 for the year 1929 when there was every indication for an increase in 1930 of this rating, determined by the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Study of Poultry Diseases Begun.

Acting at the request of the poultry industry, which deserves rating as among the important agricultural enterprises of the State, the department, cooperating with the University of California, has begun study of diseases which have seriously affected the poultry interests, particularly of the north bay counties. The department is administering a trust fund which will meet the costs of this research.

AIDS IN MARKETING.

Enforcement Acts Need Strengthening.

The Produce Dealers Act and the Deciduous Fruit Dealers Act, enacted in 1927 and 1929, respectively, to protect growers and sellers in their marketing relations have been vigorously enforced during the past two years in spite of difficulties due to weakness in both statutes. Much fraudulent practice on the part of unscrupulous buyers has been stopped with resultant saving to growers. The Deciduous Fruit Dealers Act recently was declared unconstitutional by a superior court, and its revision into workable law is urged.

Market News Service Assists Growers.

Growers of many of our 180 principal crops have benefited from the market news service inaugurated two years ago. Utilizing reports from all parts of the nation and principal marketing centers of other countries as furnished daily by federal leased wires, the Division of Markets is informing growers of a large number of commodities about price and other market news by means of a short wave telegraphic system. Eight radio sending and receiving stations, so located as to give the greatest possible service to growers, are in daily use, and this number may be increased as industry demands and conditions warrant. The right of California agriculture to continued use of five short radio waves which the Federal Radio Commission had allocated for agricultural use recently was reaffirmed following a hearing held in Los Angeles. At this hearing all agricultural interests of the State joined in defense of their rights to use of air channels.

Standardization Aids Marketing.

One of the most important aids in marketing California's fresh fruit and vegetable crops is the Fruit, Nut and Vegetable Standardization Act. This act was passed in 1927 and amended in 1929, and now furnishes the minimum requirements for quality and pack of approximately thirty commodities. Valuable to growers and shippers as this law has proved to be, there is urgent need for its general revision at this session of the Legislature. One very tangible benefit of the Standardization Act shared by consumers and growers is the seasonal system of highway inspections by means of which all truck loads of fruits and vegetables en route to our principal metropolitan areas are inspected. Twelve of these stations have been maintained during the past season, and as a result of their scrutiny quality standards of produce for local consumption have been raised materially in the larger urban areas. No changes are planned in the California Canned Fruit Standardization Act, enacted in 1925, which provides for inspection of canned peaches, apricots, cherries and pears. This law is being enforced satisfactorily and has the approval of growers, canners and the California Cannerymen's League.

Shipping-Point Inspection Guarantees Quality.

Just as standardization has measurably increased California's market horizon by providing known standards of quality for agricultural produce, shipping-point inspection has strengthened the State's marketing possibilities by certifying the quality of produce at the time of shipment. This joint Federal-State service is being more universally used each year as growers appreciate the value of shipping-point inspection certificates in marketing their produce.

Field Crops Follow Standardization Trend.

Continued growth in popularity of grain and hay inspection has developed some points in the law which may call for remedy if the trend toward standardization of these products is to keep pace with the general movement to standardize most agricultural produce. A beginning made in shipping-point inspection of alfalfa hay has been welcomed by growers and the trade alike. Bonded warehouse service offered by the State is meeting a demand for improved collateral provided by bonded warehouse receipts. Clarification and extension of the Seed Testing Law will be needed if farmers are to be afforded the protection against infertile or otherwise faulty seed which the statute originally sought to provide.

LAND SETTLEMENT.

Land Settlement Affairs.

One of the duties given my administration by the last session of the Legislature was that of proceeding as rapidly as possible to wind up the affairs of the two land settlement colonies of the State at Durham and Delhi. This has been a very difficult problem due to the different conditions prevailing at these two colonies. The Durham colony as originally established gave some promise of success to those who entered upon it, and has suffered largely because of the changed conditions brought about by the introduction of irrigating water and the consequent change of the water plane underground. Delhi, owing to the poor quality of a considerable part of its soil, never had much chance of succeeding. Both colonies have suffered through the general agricultural depression. The matter of bringing to a termination these two enterprises was placed in the hands of the Land Settlement Board, consisting of the directors of the departments of Finance, Public Works, and Agriculture. It is not my purpose to enter upon any discussion of the wisdom of such enterprises in general, nor of these in particular, but merely to say that the affairs of these two colonies are being wound up as rapidly as possible, and that complete success is ahead in so far as the State retiring from such an enterprise is concerned.

State Definitely En Route to Retirement from Colony Proprietorship.

Retirement of the State as proprietor of the land settlement projects at Delhi and Durham was definitely determined upon after full investigation, and in the light of unsuccessful efforts to remedy financial conditions which had grown steadily worse almost since inception of the State's colonization policy more than a decade ago. The policy of retirement is being carried out along lines of a program which considers the best interest of the settlers in these colonies and of the State as a whole. Its consummation will relieve the State of continued obligatory land settlement administration for the next 15 or 20 years.

Retirement Authorized by Legislature.

The 1929 Legislature legalized such retirement and provided authority therefor. Saving of $23,000 was made by applying an emergency appropriation of $185,000 as settlement in full of contract of purchase for lands from Stanford University on which $208,000 was owing. An additional appropriation of $150,000 was made to meet expenses of operation to the time of consummation of the readjustment program. Legislative enactment also legalized formation of an improvement district to take over the colony irrigation system at Delhi. This district has been organized and the irrigation system has been transferred thereto. The Durham Mutual Water Company, Ltd., has been incorporated to take over the colony irrigation system at Durham.

Retirement Widely Approved.

Physical appraisal by qualified appraisers of every unit of property in both colonies was made the foundation step of readjustment procedure. Detailed plans for adjustment of settlers' contracts with the State and for State withdrawal were then worked out and approved by the State Land Settlement Board. The terms of adjustment were approved by a very large majority of settlers in both colonies. This readjustment program involves nearly 400 colonists and approximately 14,000 acres of land in Durham and Delhi, with all the conflicting factors to be found in colonization projects and with additional problems peculiar to State land settlement.

Order Brought from Chaos.

Since the Department of Agriculture took over land settlement administration August 1, 1927, it has been transformed from a chaotic condition of dissension, controversy, litigation and threatened litigation between the settlers and the State, to a condition of orderly process of readjustment of settlers' obligations with retirement of the State as proprietor of the colonies in immediate prospect. Under the program of readjustment now believed to be nearing its conclusion, the State's unrecoverable cost in connection with its two land settlement ventures will approximate $2,300,000 exclusive of interest.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Just Measurement Laws Enforced.

Public benefits of strict enforcement of statutes regulating measurements and weights in agricultural and commercial dealings is increasingly apparent. From a small beginning this service has grown until its direct and indirect benefits are measured by annual savings of many thousands of dollars to consumers of food-stuffs, stock feeds, fuel and, in fact, practically every commodity sold in the State.

More positive jurisdiction given the Division of Weights and Measures by the last Legislature has resulted in marked improvement of conditions surrounding sale of motor vehicle fuel and oil, both as to just measure and substitution of inferior products.

Honest Weight Protects Public.

Every morsel of food and many articles needed for our daily life must pass over scales which, if they are not accurate, will cause great loss to the growers, buyers or consumers. Benefits resulting from thorough and systematic check made of public weighmasters' scales by the department have gone far toward assuring equitable and honest dealings. This accuracy of weighing equipment means much to the producer of agricultural commodities, as his returns and likewise the freight charges for moving his products are directly affected.

Furniture and Mattress Supervision.

Continued protection against use of insanitary material in mattresses and furniture has resulted in more uniform compliance with laws governing manufacture of these articles under the division's enforcement policy.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

DIRECTOR, VIERLING KERSEY.

Emphasis upon the functions of the State Department of Education as a service organization led, during the past biennium, to considerable expansion of the activities of the department for the purpose of rendering specific aid to the public schools throughout the State. Reallocation of responsibilities to the several staff members, and closer coordination between divisions within the department and between the department and educational and lay agencies in the field, have resulted from the reorganization of the department and the new stress on its service activity.

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Functions of Board.

The School Code of California, enacted by the Legislature of 1929, gives to the State Board of Education the governing and policy-determining functions of the State Department of Education. In the exercise of these functions, the State Board of Education enacts rules and regulations for the government of the public schools of the State. The public schools include kindergartens, elementary schools, secondary schools (junior high schools, high schools and junior colleges), and teachers colleges.

High School Graduation Requirements.

In order to meet the needs of the large numbers of nonacademic students enrolled in the high schools of the State, the State board has modified its rules and regulations to provide more liberally for these students. Thus it has authorized general science, industrial science and home-making science to be accepted in lieu of laboratory science previously required of all high school students for graduation. In addition, vocational subjects were authorized to be accepted as high school majors, thus enabling students to graduate from high school with a well organized program of vocational study.

Policy Concerning Administrative Units.

As a result of petitions presented to the State Board of Education asking approval for the withdrawal of certain elementary school districts from high school districts as provided by law, the State board has adopted a policy as expressed in a resolution in favor of larger rather than smaller units of school administration, and in opposition to withdrawal of elementary school districts from high school districts to form new high school districts.

California Historical Association.

In 1927 the Legislature made the State Board of Education trustees for the California State Historical Association. This body has as its purpose the promotion of interest in and the dissemination of knowledge of the history of California. It publishes a magazine, The California History Nugget, eight times yearly, and occasional papers relative to California history.

FUNCTIONS OF DEPARTMENT.

Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The executive and administrative functions of the State Department of Education are exercised by the Superintendent of Public Instruction. The superintendent is elected by the people and serves ex officio as Director of the State Department of Education. The present Superintendent of Public Instruction, Vierling Kersey, succeeded William John Cooper upon the resignation of the latter to accept appointment as United States Commissioner of Education.

Enlarged Services of the Department.

During the biennium the Department of Education engaged in many new activities for the purpose of rendering greater service to local school communities. These activities were largely in the nature of conferences and surveys for the solution of local problems.

Expanded Technical Service.

An expanded technical service was inaugurated through the employment of Mr. Alfred E. Lentz, J.D., as associate chief of the Division of Research and Statistics. Mr. Lentz was primarily responsible for the drafting of the present School Code of California and serves the department as a research specialist in school law.

Statistical Studies.

Numerous special statistical studies have been completed by the Division of Research and Statistics upon requests received from local school officials as an aid in solution of pressing local problems.

Publications.

One of the major additional services undertaken has involved an expanded program of publication. A monthly publication of the department, California Schools, has been issued since January, 1930, as a vehicle for conveying to school officers official communications concerning legal interpretations, current professional announcements, and significant facts concerning the public schools. In addition, nearly sixty publications bearing on specialized problems have been issued.

Departmental Policies and Program.

The establishment of State-wide policies relative to specific phases of public education and the development of a unified State program of education has occupied much of the time of departmental staff members throughout the biennium. This activity has been conducted by means of numerous conferences of school officials held throughout the State, with the result that generally accepted policies have been determined relative to the purposes and functions of junior colleges; the place of the junior high school; the financial needs of the public schools; and the necessity for larger units of school administration.

LEGISLATION.

Enactments of 1929.

Legislation enacted in 1929 resulted in the following major changes in the State laws governing the public schools:

1. All existing legislation affecting the schools was brought together and reenacted as the School Code of California.
2. A commission of nine members was provided for, to be appointed by the Governor, to study the educational, geographical, financial, and organizational problems of public education. An appropriation of $50,000 was made for the conduct of this survey.
3. The funds available for supervision of instruction in rural schools were increased.
4. Additional funds were made available to supplement the inadequate State Junior College Fund, and standards for formation of junior college districts were materially increased in order to prevent too rapid development of these institutions.

Legislative Recommendations.

Careful study of the effect of existing legislation concerning the public schools, together with advice developed in regional conferences, points to the necessity for legislative action clarifying existing provisions of the School Code and providing remedy for undesirable conditions. The major items of legislative need, as seen by the Department of Education, include the following:

1. Clarification of the School Code to eliminate contradictory sections, remove ambiguities and repeal inoperative sections. It is not the intent of this recommendation to suggest a redrafting of the existing School Code. Rather it is the intention to make effective the intent of the legislation which has been incorporated in this School Code.
2. Revision of teacher tenure legislation to eliminate the many injustices to teachers and children resulting from the operation of those sections of the School Code commonly designated as the Teachers' Tenure Act.
3. Equalization of educational opportunities and burdens of district and county taxes for schools by providing a State Equalization School Fund; State aid for kindergartens; and classification of all grades of the junior high school as high school grades, to receive State and county aid as high schools.
4. Liberalization of present provisions relative to pupil transportation, and possible participation by the State in the costs thereof.

SPECIAL ASPECTS OF EDUCATION.

Education of Handicapped Children.

In addition to the educational facilities available at the California Schools for the Deaf and the Blind, provision has been made for the education of many handicapped children as a result of legislation of 1927 providing special State and county aid therefor. During the biennium, approximately $425,000 was made available for this work, one-half of the amount being given by the State and one-half by the counties. Approximately one thousand children suffering physical handicaps were given instruction as a result of the funds thus provided.

Adult Education.

The extremely rapid growth of the adult classes in elementary and high schools is indicated by the fact that since 1927 these classes have increased 50 per cent in enrollment, the enrollment during 1929-30 being very nearly 300,000. The purpose of the adult education program as originally established was the Americanization of foreign-born adults. The modern adult classes strive to give to the adults enrolled that aid in personal development which they individually need. The program at present has been extended to embrace all types of discussion groups; a rapidly growing group of classes for aiding parents in the study of their own children; and all types of classes serving local community needs. The classes in parent education alone enrolled during the biennium nearly 1000 fathers and approximately 15,000 mothers in 349 separate classes.

Immigrant Education.

The education of the foreign-born immigrant has not been discontinued. In 1929-30 there were nearly 54,000 illiterate adults enrolled in the special classes organized for these people in high schools.

City Secondary Schools.

The most significant activity of the Division of City Secondary Schools during the past biennium is found in the cooperative attack developed on local problems in regional conferences. These conferences were employed to develop evaluations of local programs of education; to train special groups in conference leadership; to adapt the conference procedure to curriculum making; and to develop specialized materials in the nature of handbooks for continuation education and for school counselors.

Business Education.

A Bureau of Business Education was established in the State Department of Education in July, 1928, to conduct a continuous survey of business education and employment opportunities, and to develop courses in business education to meet employment needs. During the biennium, the bureau has developed numerous courses and has instigated special surveys of business education. In February, 1930, a survey showed a total of approximately 151,000 course enrollments in business subjects in high schools and junior high schools. In high schools, the commercial subjects most frequently taken were typewriting, bookkeeping, shorthand, junior business training, business law, economic geography, business mathematics, salesmanship, office practice, and business English. In the junior high schools, the commercial subjects most frequently taken were typewriting, junior business training, and penmanship.

Vocational Rehabilitation.

The State Department of Education administers a program of vocational rehabilitation of persons injured in industry or otherwise. This program, during the past six years, has given vocational training to 1554 individuals who otherwise might not have been capable of self-support. Of this number 1275 have actually been rehabilitated in vocational employment. The total number of individuals rehabilitated through this joint federal and State aided program was 1776 at the close of the biennium. Some 3000 others were given assistance in vocational readjustments. During the past biennium—a period of rather unusual economic depression—501 disabled persons were rehabilitated and placed in industry. The average wage earned by rehabilitated persons is over 2 per cent greater than the wage earned by the same individuals before injury.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

Vocational Fields.

The California program of vocational education is limited to the secondary school field, and is almost entirely organized under the provisions of the federal Smith-Hughes Act, and is therefore supported by the State and national governments, in addition to the amounts made available by local taxation. The Smith-Hughes vocational program embraces three major fields: Vocational agriculture, trade and industrial education, and home-making education.

Agricultural Education.

The agricultural education program is administered as part of the work of the Division of Rural Education, and is the only portion of the vocational program which is developed in elementary schools as well as secondary schools. The most outstanding achievement in agricultural education has been the organization of the Future Farmers of America, which includes all boys and girls enrolled in agricultural courses in the high schools of the State. This organization is now a national organization. In California it has developed a very extensive program including annual exhibits at the State Fair and at all county and regional fairs. The sale of live stock at two fat stock shows in 1929-30 netted members of the organization over $19,000. The agricultural education program involves farm projects yielding over $300,000 each year to the high school boys and girls; instruction in urban secondary schools to give appreciation for and understanding of such problems as quarantine laws, water conservation, rural economics, and other farm problems; a program of nature study and elementary appreciation of agriculture for elementary schools; and an extensive program of teacher training.

Industrial Training.

The trade and industrial education program involves five major activities. These include classes for full-time students majoring in trade and industrial subjects; trade preparatory classes; trade extension classes; evening school classes; and cooperative continuation classes. Over 23,000 students were enrolled in these various types of trade and industrial classes in 1929-30, the largest number 10,712, being enrolled in evening high school classes. In addition, the program involved the training of 187 vocational teachers during the year.

Home-Making.

The home-making educational work involves a program of teacher training and an extensive program of instruction in home-making subjects in the secondary schools. The instructional program includes classes for full-time day students, special afternoon and evening classes for women, and all-day programs involving supervised home projects for specially selected groups of girls over 14 years of age. The most remarkable part of this program is that which is devoted to adults in afternoon and evening classes. These classes enrolled in 1929-30 more than 12,000 women, of whom less than 1000 were of foreign birth. Over 10,000 were married women of established residence in the community.

DEPARTMENTAL ACTIVITIES.

Research and Statistics.

During the past biennium, considerably expanded service has been rendered by the State Department of Education to school officials throughout the State in the form of special studies bearing upon local school problems. Comparative studies of groups of cities and school districts have been completed and numerous publications issued for the purpose of extending this type of service.

Special Studies.

Some of the studies completed and issued in printed form include the biennial statistics of the several counties of the State; statistics of city school districts; directories of secondary schools; and numerous special studies published in the State Department of Education bulletin, California Schools. Among the problems studied upon special request were included numerous studies of public school finance; special comparative data for selected school districts; analyses of legal provisions relative to school finance and special educational facilities; studies of practices in secondary schools; and a complete analysis of public school finance in California.

Rural Education.

The progress of education in rural communities is slow and unnecessarily impeded by the large number of one-, two-, and three-teacher schools, which might readily be eliminated by consolidation or unionization procedures. Low assessed valuations in hundreds of tiny school districts render adequate local aid for schools impossible; while inadequate provision for State and county aid prevents the development of the rural schools on a par with those maintained in urban communities. The problems of rural education can not be solved until larger units of school administration are accomplished, increased proportionate State aid is secured, and the many unnecessary small schools are eliminated.

Demonstration Schools.

Improvement of actual instruction in rural schools is being brought about as a result of increased State and county aid made available for rural school supervision. A system of State demonstration rural schools under the direction of the State Department of Education is making available methods and techniques of instruction adapted to secure the best results in rural schools. Twenty such demonstration schools were operated during 1929-30 in eleven different counties.

Aid for Migratory Children.

In connection with the Division of Rural Education, the Bureau of Attendance and Migratory Schools exercises supervision over special schools for the children of migratory laborers engaged in agricultural occupations. Special State and county aid, amounting to approximately $11,000 per year, assists the local communities in providing for the educational needs of these children.

TWO IMPORTANT DIVISIONS.

Health and Physical Education.

California's State laws require the teaching of health and physical education in all public schools of the State. This requirement is an outgrowth of the condition of physical disability discovered among the young men called in military service during the World War. The present program of the State Department of Education contemplates unification of the athletic activities of the high schools and all other health and physical education activities and instruction. A first step has been taken in this direction by raising the requirements for teachers' credentials in this field so that persons trained only in competitive athletics no longer qualify to serve in this field.

Curriculum Established.

During the past year, the Division of Health and Physical Education developed and published a bulletin setting up the content of a five-year curriculum for teachers of physical education. In addition, a manual was published setting forth the health and physical education program for elementary schools in California.

Schoolhouse Planning.

The specialized service rendered by the Division of Schoolhouse Planning has resulted, during the past biennium, in the checking of 188 schoolhouse plans, involving expenditure of approximately $5,000,000. This service has been rendered to elementary and high school districts in almost every county in the State. The demand for the service is so great that it is impossible for the division to keep abreast of its work. Surveys made by the division indicate that there is a vast field which has hardly been touched, and in which possibilities exist for tremendous savings to the people of the State. Moreover, the value of the service in terms of improved educational practice is immeasurable. The division has developed numerous standards for various types of schoolhouse facilities. In the work of this division it has become very apparent that present methods of financing schools make it almost impossible to provide adequate educational facilities in the large number of small districts of which the assessed valuation is extremely limited.

Teachers College Plans.

A part of the service of this division has been given in the development of building and site plans for the State Teachers Colleges. This work has gone forward in cooperation with the Department of Public Works, and has resulted in very considerable economic and educational improvement. A tentative ten-year building program has been developed for the purpose of providing adequate facilities for the seven State Teachers Colleges and the State schools at Berkeley and San Luis Obispo.

TEACHER TRAINING.

High Standards for Credentials.

One of the most important functions exercised by the State Department of Education is the conduct of a unified program of teacher training. This program is carried on through seven State Teachers Colleges, the State University, and a group of nine privately endowed colleges and universities and seven specialized private schools. The maintenance of high standards of teacher training, the development of standard requirements for State teachers' credentials, and the placement of the responsibility for recommendation of individuals for credentials upon the teacher training institution, are the major phases of the activity of the Division of Teacher Training and Certification during the past biennium.

State Teachers Colleges.

The seven State Teachers Colleges of California have as their object the education of teachers for the public schools of the State. The Superintendent of Public Instruction is the chief administrative officer in charge of the State Teachers Colleges, while policies relative to teacher training and the State Teachers Colleges are established by the State Board of Education.

Four-year Teacher Training Curriculum.

The teachers colleges are located at Arcata, Chico, Fresno, San Diego, San Francisco, San Jose, and Santa Barbara. Originally these institutions were established as State Normal Schools, and provided a two-year curriculum for the training of elementary school teachers. The work of the institutions has been expanded by introducing specialized phases of training, including kindergarten-primary training, elementary and junior high school curricula, and special secondary curricula in such fields as art, music, home-making, industrial arts, and physical education.

During the past biennium, the period of training for elementary school teachers has been increased from two to three years, and is now being advanced to a full four-year course culminating with the Bachelor's Degree.

Expansion of Teacher Training Curricula.

Special services have been introduced in order to provide supervisory and administrative training for teachers of experience. Moreover, the lower division work has been broadened to cover the full lower division work of the liberal arts college. As a result, careful guidance and direction have resulted in a higher type of selection of candidates for the teaching credentials. This activity has resulted also in the direction of numerous students away from the teacher training field into allied fields such as librarianship training. This development in the teachers colleges has resulted in considerable increase in lower division enrollments, since the lower division has thus become virtually a liberal arts junior college, drawing many students who heretofore have not been attracted into teacher training.

LIBRARY AND SPECIAL SCHOOLS.

The State Library.

The Legislature of 1927 made the State Library a division of the State Department of Education, the State Librarian becoming chief of the Division of Libraries. The State Library has continued its activities during the biennium, those activities being expanded and enhanced in value as a result of the occupation of the new State Library and Courts Building. Outstanding among the activities of the State Library is the service which is rendered to the people of the State through California's unique county library system, which embraces 46 of the 58 counties of the State. A second unique service rendered by the State Library is that performed by the Books for the Blind Department, which makes available to blind readers manuscripts and books in Braille. A third very important service is that which is provided by the Law and Legislative Reference Department to members of the Legislature and to other State officials.

State Special Schools.

Entrusted to the administration of the State Department of Education, a group of four State special schools offers educational services for specialized groups of students. These include the California State Nautical School at San Francisco, which is at present in process of organization; the California School for the Blind and the California School for the Deaf, at Berkeley; and the California Polytechnic School, a technical and agricultural institution of secondary grade, at San Luis Obispo. The State Nautical School was created by legislation enacted in 1929 and will provide training for prospective officers for the American Merchant Marine. A school ship will be available to provide all types of maritime training. The California Schools for the Blind and for the Deaf at Berkeley enroll only those blind or deaf children, or those with extreme defects of vision or hearing, who are sufficiently normal in mentality to profit by instruction. The California Polytechnic School provides high school and junior college training in agriculture, aeroplane construction, mechanics and engineering.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA.

Every year the University of California comes into contact with an increasingly large number of individuals. The total number of full-time students this year at Berkeley, Los Angeles, and other university units, will be close to 19,000. This does not count the more than 9000 students in the summer sessions on the northern and southern campuses, nor the approximately 40,000 adults registered in the University Extension Division. Added to this there is a still vastly larger number of farmers and farmers' wives who are served through the Division of Agricultural Extension.

Number of Graduates.

Degrees conferred during the biennium totaled 2983 in 1929 and 3282 in 1930, an increase of 462 over the previous two years. Added to this were about 300 certificates of teacher training and other curricula. As I said in my previous message, this increasingly large number of graduates indicates the constant progress in the university's chief function—the higher education of the young men and women of the State.

Continuous Progress in Los Angeles.

In September, 1929, the University of California at Los Angeles transferred its portable properties and activities from the old campus on Vermont avenue to its new campus near Beverly Hills. The original Vermont avenue campus was sold for the sum of $2,000,000 to the school board of Los Angeles, and is being used by the city as a junior college. Payments are being made in five equal installments, and the Legislature has authorized that the money as received shall be expended for improvements on the new campus. In order to provide a building for the Teachers College, the Legislature at last session advanced to the University Regents the sum of $520,000, to be repaid to the State treasury from future sales of the fifteen-acre annex to the Vermont avenue campus. The new campus was formally dedicated late in March, 1930, in the presence of the representatives of some 200 other colleges and universities and of many leading citizens and delegates from various organizations.

UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS COMPLETED.

New Buildings In Berkeley.

Both from generous gifts and from the university bond issue of 1926, there has been great building activity on all the campuses, especially at Berkeley. Among the new buildings may be mentioned (1) the new Life Sciences building, planned to house at least a dozen departments, such as botany, zoology, etc., completed and occupied during the first half of 1930; (2) Giannini Hall, gift of the Bancitaly Corporation to house the activities of the Giannini Foundation of Agricultural Economics, also completed in 1930; (3) the new infirmary, known as the Ernest V. Cowell Memorial Hospital, placed in service in July of last year, and bringing relief from the serious fire risks of the past two decades; (4) Bowles Hall, the first campus dormitory, the gift of Mrs. Philip E. Bowles in memory of her husband, a former University Regent; and (5) the International House, generously provided by Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at a cost of $1,800,000 as a place of residence of more than 400 students, American and foreign, with the thought that their commingling will help to promote better understanding among their respective nations.

Buildings at Los Angeles.

(1) Royce Hall, embracing an especially beautiful auditorium, together with many administrative offices and lecture rooms, was finished in 1929; (2) the Library, Physics, and Chemistry buildings, each designed as an incomplete structure to be finished as needs demand and funds permit, were all made ready for occupation in 1929; (3) a splendid building to meet the needs of the Teachers College was completed early in 1930; and (4) a large building to house mechanic arts and campus administration was erected during the same year.

New Buildings at Davis.

A new major building on the campus of the Davis Branch of the College of Agriculture, to house the principal teaching and research services in animal husbandry, was completed in 1929.

BUILDINGS UNDER CONSTRUCTION; GIFTS.

At Berkeley.

A building for the new central heating system has been in process of erection through the year 1930. Two much-needed buildings for the College of Engineering are now being erected at a cost of nearly $700,000, the unexpended remainder of the Berkeley portion of the university bond issue. The Eshleman Memorial Building, to provide a home for all student publications, is now under construction. Its cost will be $250,000, half of which was appropriated at the last legislative session, and half contributed by the Associated Students in Berkeley.

At Los Angeles.

Kerckhoff Hall, the gift of Mrs. Wm. G. Kerckhoff to the amount of $750,000 which is now approaching completion, will be the social headquarters for faculty and students, as well as the administrative headquarters for all student activities. The Mira Hershey Hall, a residence hall for women students, as provided in the will of Miss Hershey, recently deceased, is also under construction.

Elsewhere.

The new central heating plant, for the service of the Medical School, College of Dentistry, College of Pharmacy, and the Hooper Foundation in San Francisco is under process of construction. A new laboratory building at La Jolla, to meet the needs of the Scripps Institution, is being built, one-half the cost having been appropriated by the last Legislature, and the other half having been given by "A Friend."

A Generous Public.

Aside from the buildings enumerated above, a truly remarkable stream of gifts and bequests continues to pour in upon the university. The published list of these gifts, described in very abbreviated form, as given out on Charter Day, has each year filled a printed pamphlet of generous size. The items include financial foundations for professorships, a surprisingly large number of scholarships and fellowships, provisions for the support of research in many fields of knowledge, valuable additions to the museums, books for the university's libraries, scientific instruments, and the like. Special mention should be made of gifts in support of researches looking toward the prevention and cure of such dread ailments as cancer and spinal meningitis.

SOME RESEARCH RESULTS.

Much Research Activity.

The members of the various university faculties devote to a search for new knowledge in their respective fields not only much of their vacation period, but throughout the year such of their time and energies as remain after their teaching services have been rendered. There have been noteworthy research accomplishments in essentially all parts of the university during the last biennium, and an adequate description of them might well be termed a romance of achievement. Only a small fraction of these results can be mentioned here.

Work in Agriculture.

The College of Agriculture, in proportion to its generous support from the State, has made many contributions to the science of agriculture in the interests of the farm industry. It is not possible to do justice to the list of such accomplishments in the small space here available, and those interested are respectfully referred to the annual reports of the Dean of the College of Agriculture, as contained in the reports of the president of the university for the academic years 1928-29 and 1929-30, and as printed separately. Just a few of the many investigations might be mentioned; as, for instance, methods and equipment for the most efficient and economical handling of grain; precooling of fruit; rural sanitation and sewage disposal; barns and equipment for California live stock; rural home designs for the farm interior valleys in California.

Public Health Research.

The School of Medicine through its Division of Anatomy, its Division of Biochemistry and its Division of Physiology has made many experiments which will undoubtedly be of basic value in bringing new light to bear upon various problems of medical science. Particularly has the Hooper Foundation for Medical Research made noteworthy contributions to the understanding and solution of problems growing out of leprosy, cerebrospinal meningitis, undulant fever, mussel poisoning, and the botulism which has so frequently in the past caused concern respecting improperly prepared canned fruits, vegetables and fishes.

Some Practical Achievements.

The Department of Zoology has devoted much time to the study of termites (sometimes called white ants), which have been causing extensive destruction of the wood in house foundations, telephone poles, etc., in California and elsewhere; thus gaining a better knowledge of the habits and qualities of the termites as a preliminary to the devising of effective means of fighting these expensive pests. The testing laboratory in the School of Engineering has continued to extend its researches into the properties of various materials of construction—particularly of concrete—with results of far reaching importance. In the Department of Physics there have been developed improved methods of observing absorption of sound by the walls upon which the waves of sound fall, with results very useful in the designing and equipping of large rooms with good acoustic qualities.

Child Study.

The Institute of Child Welfare has been studying the development of some 1200 infants, preschool children, and school children in communities adjacent to Berkeley, with reference to psychology, child hygiene, social science, public health, nursery school training, nutrition, and early education, with results which will ultimately be of great interest, especially to the women of the State.

Publications.

A noteworthy list of publications by members of the various university departments deserves a word of mention. Among these is a five-volume history concerning the expeditions from Mexico to found San Francisco; a book written by a member of the Department of Philosophy, which is regarded as an outstanding contribution in that field; a critical study of the works of Cervantes from the Department of Commerce; valuable studies by the School of Education of school taxes and school funds in each of the 48 states; and a systematic study by the Department of Anthropology on the Indians of California, which has resulted in possibly a more exact knowledge of the Indians of this State than in any other part of the American continent.

Other Scientific Studies.

The list of achievements in scientific research and the additions to the sum of human knowledge which the university has contributed during the past two years is too great, and in many instances too technical for recital here. Aside from what has already been mentioned, discoveries have been made in chemistry, in physics, in zoology, in botany, in biology, in geology, and in astronomy which in many instances are very remarkable in those various sciences. In a word, the university, while evermindful that its primary purpose is the higher education of young men and women, is at the same time making great positive contributions to our State and its people through the constant research endeavors continuously carried on by the members of its faculties.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE.

DIRECTOR, LYMAN M. KING.

The Department of Finance has within its organization six major divisions: Division of Budgets and Accounts, Division of Service and Supply, Division of State Lands, Division of Personnel and Organization, Division of Exhibits, and Division of Reclamation Finance. The Department of Finance sustains a relationship to other State agencies which is not shared by any other department, that of a service bureau for all other units of the State government.

DIVISION OF BUDGETS AND ACCOUNTS.

Service Rendered.

This division supplies advisers to other departments, boards, commissions and institutions, in matters relating to proper methods of accounting procedure and handling of finances, and has succeeded to the powers of the former Department of Public Accounting.

First Modern Harbor Accounting System.

One of the first systems of accounting installed by the Department of Public Accounting, after its creation in 1911, was in the offices of the Board of State Harbor Commissioners in San Francisco. Approximately twenty years ago this system was adequate for existing conditions. A survey of the system last year revealed that the rapid development of activities and increased business at the harbor during the past two decades had left that agency with an antiquated and wholly inadequate accounting system. Accounting matters and office organization were in a chaotic condition. With little available data with which to begin, steps were taken by the Division of Budgets and Accounts to devise a modern and adequate system of harbor accounting. This was successfully accomplished. The division has built up the most modern and scientific system of port accounting to be found anywhere in the world. The results are being published in manual form as an aid to other port managements.

Revision of Farm Accounting.

A revision of the farm accounting system in use at State institutions has been completed during the past year. This revised system provides for a complete accounting of farm crops from the time they are produced in the various farm units, such as dairy, poultry ranch, hog ranch, etc., until they are consumed at the institution or otherwise disposed of. Quarterly reports are provided which will show the profit or loss for each unit of the farming operations as well as for the total. This will also show unit costs of production. State institutions should be able in the future to know thoroughly the advantages and disadvantages of their individual farming operations, from the standpoint of money costs. No such information has been available heretofore.

A New Inventory Procedure.

There has long been a need for a uniform system of governmental property accounting whereby a closer check could be kept of inventory values and property accountability. The Division of Budgets and Accounts was here confronted with the same condition as in working out the problems of a harbor accounting system, in that very little data were found to exist which dealt with the subject of governmental inventories. It was necessary for the division to work out an entirely new procedure and a departure from anything which has as yet been promulgated. The preliminary drafts of the proposed system were forwarded to governmental authorities in various parts of the United States and met with very enthusiastic approval. The system which has been put in complete operation has made possible more efficient reports and detailed information, and will bring about a better accounting control than ever before of the State's property and inventories.

Profits Made from Bond Sales.

Through the practice of selling, as well as buying, bonds for various funds held in trust in the State treasury, the Department of Finance, has, during the past two years, made a profit of over $33,500, which was added to the funds for which the bonds were purchased and sold. This profit was made on a turnover of securities selling for $1,604,218.45. During the last two years the department has purchased approximately $4,703,000 worth of bonds for funds held in trust.

DIVISION OF SERVICE AND SUPPLY; BUREAU OF PURCHASES.

As its name implies, this division performs the function in general of meeting the requirements of all State agencies for physical facilities—purchase of supplies and equipment, printing, provision and maintenance of office space, and supervision of property and equipment inventories. It comprises the Bureau of Purchases, Buildings and Grounds, Printing, and Commerce. The property auditor is also attached to this division. The chief of this division is one of three members of the State Board of Control.

A Growing Function.

The volume of business transacted by the Bureau of Purchases has steadily increased, due to the growth of population in State institutions and to the increased amount of construction work and highway maintenance by the Department of Public Works. The task of supplying more than 27,000 inmates of State institutions with food, clothing, and other items of maintenance, is handled by this bureau, as well as the purchase of all supplies and equipment for State agencies. The purchases for the biennium ending June 30, 1930, amounted to $24,377,683.72, showing an increase of $6,350,048.30 over the previous biennium. The cost of operation of the purchasing function for the biennium ending June 30, 1928, was 0.67 of one per cent of the value of purchases. The figures for the biennium closing June 30, 1930, show a cost of 0.57 of one per cent.

Passing of W. G. McMillan.

In 1929 the State lost one of its most valuable employees when W. G. McMillan, State Purchasing Agent, passed away. The position of purchasing agent was created by the Legislature of 1915, and Mr. McMillan was the first man to fill that position, which he occupied until his death. During his fourteen years of service he supervised purchases for the State of California to a value of over $100,000,000. It may be said with assurance that the efficiency of the office of purchasing agent under his direction resulted in a saving of tens of millions of dollars to the people of the State during this period of fourteen years. This immense task was performed with a reputation for integrity never surpassed in either public or private service.

BUREAU OF BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS.

Governor's Council Room Provided.

To provide ample room for the general public, who in increasing numbers have attended the monthly meetings of the Governor's Council, a special room for the use of the council was prepared adjacent to the Governor's offices. This room also furnishes a meeting place for many important conferences.

Modern Vault in State Treasury.

For many years there has been need for modern vault facilities in the State treasury. The original vault was built with the erection of the Capitol in 1869, and had long been inadequate for the protection of the securities held by the State Treasurer. One of the best types of modern vaults has just been completed for the treasury. It is fully protected from burglary by the latest electrical devices and alarms.

Indian Exhibit.

In April of 1929 an opportunity was presented to the State to secure a very rare exhibit of Indian relics. In the remodeling of the State Capitol a special exhibit room was arranged on the fourth floor of the Capitol as a permanent location for the display. The exhibit, containing over 100,000 artifacts, was opened to the public on January 31, 1930. The display has reached large proportions and bids fair to become one of the finest anywhere. It is particularly valuable as showing the early life of California Indians. No attempt is made to reach out and secure relics of Indians of other states.

Fort Sutter.

Much progress has been made during the past two years in increasing and making available to the public the interesting exhibits at Fort Sutter. The collection of relics of pioneer days of California is growing rapidly. Recently an old-time resident in the Truckee region found one of the Donner party wagons which was abandoned by that ill-fated expedition in 1846. It was three miles from any road, deep in the heart of the mountains. It was packed out to the highway on mule backs and shipped to Sacramento and housed in Fort Sutter, where the survivors of the Donner party were brought when rescued. Another recent gift to the museum at the fort is a lumber scale used by John Marshall, the discoverer of gold in California, with Marshall's name engraved upon it. All displays have now been catalogued and the visitor can inform himself thoroughly in regard to anything he sees.

San Francisco State Building.

Two new wings authorized by the Legislature of 1929 as an addition to the State Building in San Francisco have about reached completion. These wings will provide housing for many of the State agencies now leasing outside quarters, and, in addition, will provide expansion room for the many agencies within the building which are now badly crowded.

Los Angeles State Building.

The county of Los Angeles has furnished the State with deeds to the several parcels of real estate upon which the new State Building is to rise on First street between Spring and Broadway. Construction has already begun on the building, which will be twelve stories in height and of semiclassical architectural design to harmonize with the existing buildings of the Los Angeles Civil Center. One of the ends sought in proceeding rapidly with the State Building in Los Angeles is to relieve unemployment conditions as much as possible. The building will provide ample room to house all of the State agencies and judicial offices now having branches in Los Angeles. The issue of $1,250,000 bonds voted by the people to defray the cost of erection of the State Building in Los Angeles was sold at a premium of $52.296. The premium in addition to the principal will be available for necessary construction and furnishing costs.

THE PROPERTY AUDITOR.
Historical Records.

Through the property auditor the Department of Finance has compiled a historical record of all State-owned buildings and other structures. Its purpose is to have available for immediate reference at the Capitol descriptive data relating to all State buildings. These data have been compiled in volumes and carry a special form of written description together with photos of buildings and grounds. With the data are included the original cost of the building, date of completion, cost of additions and alterations, and other useful items of information.

Care of Surplus Property.

Many savings have been made throughout the last two years in the salvaging and restoration of old and discarded furniture and equipment. One sample will suffice. The building of the new Library and Courts Building and the State Office Building in Sacramento made necessary the installation of considerable new furniture. As the offices moved to their new locations a large quantity of worn-out and broken furniture, carpets, etc., was practically discarded. This property was all gathered together and, under the direction of the property auditor, was either repaired for use in public offices in Sacramento or was transferred to other institutions or activities of the State where it could be made available. The State hospitals took several truck loads of rugs, carpets, and badly damaged furniture. Inmate labor has restored it to new and serviceable condition. The original cost of this transferred property was over $63,000. For purposes of valuation, junk men were from time to time asked to bid upon it, and they offered from 5 to 10 per cent of the original cost. Through transfer to other State activities a saving of more than 80 per cent was effected. That is to say, this quantity of worn-out furniture was restored to 80 per cent of its original value. Careful estimates have placed the savings effected by this salvaging and restoration as high as $90,000 a year.

BUREAU OF PRINTING.
Increase in State Printing.

The past two years show a marked increase in gross sales of the State Printing Office. In the eightieth fiscal year, a legislative year, gross sales amounted to $979,945.79, a gain of approximately $200,000 over the corresponding seventy-eighth fiscal, or legislative year. The eighty-first fiscal year's sales amount to $806,125.36, an increase of approximately $200,000 over the preceding off legislative year.

Textbooks Modernized.

Cooperating with the State Department of Education in its policy of thoroughly modernizing the State series of textbooks, numerous improvements have been made in the quality of textbook workmanship. By a more extensive use of colored inks on both covers and illustrations, together with a more varied selection of the latest colors and patterns in cover cloth, and the supplanting of the old, hard-finished, yellow tinted textbook paper with a white, velvet finished paper, the editions have been made more attractive in appearance.

Savings Effected by State Printing.

These changes have not only increased the durability and lengthened the life of the books, but have, through the introduction of labor saving machinery, resulted in decreased costs. Statements of textbook production for the past three years show a saving over publishers' wholesale prices, f.o.b. San Francisco, for the identical books of 42 per cent, 36 per cent, and 47 per cent, respectively, or an average annual saving of approximately $300,000. Comparison of prices for commercial printing likewise shows that the State, by entering into the business for itself, has during the past three years saved 25 per cent to 40 per cent on the entire volume of work done.

Plant Equipment Now Thoroughly Modern.

Never before in the history of the State Printing Office were the machinery and equipment in better condition. During the past three years, approximately $90,000 have been expended in replacements. For the first time in the fifty years of life of this institution, its machinery and equipment have been thoroughly modernized and the plant put in first-class working condition without calling upon the Legislature for a single appropriation, the cost of these improvements being financed entirely from the reserve fund accumulated by a 5 per cent surcharge on gross sales.

BUREAU OF COMMERCE.
Of Proved Usefulness.

The Bureau of Commerce was created by the 1929 Legislature for the purpose of assisting California producers and shippers in finding markets for their products. To carry out this objective, headquarters were established at Sacramento and the work of this office was organized along commodity lines. Realizing next the need for collecting information concerning domestic and foreign markets, the Washington, D. C., office of the bureau was established in July, 1930, in recognition of the fact that the nation's capital is the source of a wealth of information regarding domestic and world markets and specialized phases of distribution. In the interest of producers and shippers who wished to extend their European markets, a representative of the bureau was detailed in July, 1930, for market promotion work in Europe. The work of the bureau's European trade commissioner has been very productive of results.

New Outlets Found.

The bureau, which has been operating for only a little over a year, has accomplished much of a constructive nature. It has detected outlets for pears in the United Kingdom; for hay in the drought regions; for horse meat on the Continent; for lettuce and Thompson seedless grapes in Germany and the United Kingdom. It is investigating the markets for bees in China, and honey in Europe. In addition, at the request of commercial and industrial organizations, it has made numerous studies and issued reports on subjects relating to a number of technical phases of distribution, and collected statistics showing the movement of California commodities to specific markets.

Usefulness of Bureau Demonstrated.

The Bureau of Commerce has demonstrated its usefulness to producers and shippers in assisting them: (1) to find markets for their products; (2) to increase the demand for their commodities; (3) to collect and to disseminate pertinent and timely facts regarding markets and controlling distribution factors.

An Additional Department Suggested.

The importance of the work being done by the Bureau of Commerce, and the possibility of expanding it to the very great advantage of the State, prompts me to suggest that the thought of enlarging the scope of the Bureau of Commerce into a department be given consideration. This has been more fully discussed in another portion of this message.

DIVISION OF EXHIBITS.

California State Fair.

The outstanding fair of all California history was the Seventy-fifth Diamond Jubilee and Western States Exposition held at the State Fair Grounds in Sacramento in 1929, when over 431,000 persons entered the gates of the fair grounds. Fifty-four counties of the fifty-eight in the State of California exhibited at this State Fair. The Western States Building included exhibits of the states of Nevada, Oregon, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, and the Republic of Mexico. The fair of 1930, while not as large as the Seventy-fifth Diamond Jubilee Fair, surpassed anything, with the exception of that one year. To Robert A. Condee, president of the State Agricultural Society, whose untimely death in October of this year lost to the State of California one of its most useful and unselfish citizens, must go much credit for the success of these two great State fairs. No man in the official life of California ever rendered a more faithful and unselfish public service than did Robert A. Condee. Quietly and modestly, but very earnestly, he labored in and out of season to make the fair a real educational asset to the State, and in this he achieved a notable success.

New Live Stock Building.

During the past year the second largest live stock building in the United States was erected at the State Fair Grounds. This building is 337 feet in length and 237 feet in width and was built at an approximate cost of $160,000.

Exposition Building, Los Angeles.

Over 750,000 persons annually visit the State Exposition Building in Exposition Park, Los Angeles. An opportunity is given every industry of the State of California to place exhibits within the building without any cost or expense whatever to the exhibitor, thus providing one of the greatest opportunities ever presented in the State for showing goods and wares to interested visitors and prospective purchasers. An information bureau is maintained which is completely equipped for furnishing information regarding resources and industries, scenic attractions, transportation, etc., which will aid the tourist in securing unbiased information regarding California. Motion pictures are shown every afternoon, including scenic and industrial reels furnished by the various counties and commercial organizations throughout the State.

DIVISION OF PERSONNEL AND ORGANIZATION.

Conception of Civil Service Systems.

The traditional conception of civil service systems in the public service is that an impartial agency really outside of the administration is created to prevent the introduction of spoils practices into the public personnel system. California's conception has been wider than that. From the time of its establishment in 1913, the attitude of the State Civil Service Commission has been that of helpfulness to department officers in solving their personnel problems in addition to that of preventing them from indulging in practices which would debase the State service. This modern conception, which is supplemental rather than in opposition to the earlier conception of personnel systems, has been considerably strengthened by the amendment to the Civil Service Act adopted in 1929, which created a Division of Personnel and Organization in the Department of Finance, with a chief selected by modern testing methods as its administrative head, and the former commission retained to pass upon quasi legislative matters, such as the adoption of rules and of classification and compensation plans, and to hear the appeals of employees and make investigations. Administering the personnel system through the Department of Finance gives assurance that the personnel work will be properly related to the State's financial policies, needs, and resources.

New Classification and Compensation Studies.

The original classification and compensation plans for the classified service, which now includes 11,000 positions, have been completely overhauled and revised so as to be in keeping with the most advanced modern standards. A system of service ratings to determine the character of the performance of the 11,000 officers and employees in the classified service, so that intelligent action regarding salary adjustments, layoffs and reemployment, promotions, and separations may be taken, is being installed. Administrative machinery is being set up so that continuous attention can be given to such matters as attendance, hours of work, and annual, sick, and special leaves of absence with full pay, with reduced pay, and without pay. Salary advances and decreases within the limits of the schedules of compensation adopted are being based upon an improved system of service ratings representing the joint efforts of department officers and the division, instead of upon length of service supplemented by such recommendations as department heads heretofore have been able without assistance to make.

DIVISION OF STATE LANDS.

Surveyor General's Office Abolished.

Acting upon the recommendation of Surveyor General W. S. Kingsbury, who was elected to that office in 1906 and served continually in that capacity for over twenty-two years, the office of Surveyor General and that of Registrar of State Lands were abolished by the Legislature of 1929, and the duties of the office were transferred to the Department of Finance, as the Division of State Lands.

School Lands Sold.

During the past year 16,918 acres of school lands were sold by the division at a total selling price of $65,053, which was credited to the School Land Fund. The interest from investment in bonds from this fund is credited to the school funds for the support of the schools of the State.

Lease of State Lands for Oil.

In 1921 the Legislature authorized the Surveyor General to grant leases to prospect for minerals on State-owned lands, including tidelands, and to grant leases for taking minerals upon their discovery. There are now approximately seventeen leases in full force and effect for the prospecting for oil and gas on State tidelands.

Revenue From Oil Leases.

It is estimated that a million and a quarter dollars per biennium will be received by the State as a credit to the general fund from oil royalties for oil wells on State tidelands.

DIVISION OF RECLAMATION FINANCE.

Redemption of Reclamation Warrants.

The outstanding accomplishment of this division during the past two years has been the redemption of outstanding warrants of Reclamation Districts No. 2, No. 6, and No. 7. A recent decision of the State Supreme Court paved the way for practically wiping out the indebtedness of these three major projects, or at least putting them into such condition that in due time they can be cleared without financial distress to the landowners affected. This decision, which rewards three years of unremitting effort on the part of the present State administration, validates the legislation enacted at the last session of the Legislature at the request of the administration, making available $5,670,000 for the purchase of outstanding warrants against the three major flood control projects. This obviated the necessity of enforced collection of the indebtedness by the State, the result of which would be, in many instances, tantamount to confiscation. The amount of money thus made available includes the $4,370,000 refunded by the federal government as part of the adjustment between the nation and the State whereby the federal government increases its contribution to flood control from one-sixth to one-third, thus making for an equal three-way participation between the State, the nation, and the landowner benefited. Added to this was an appropriation of $1,300,000 by the State.

Large Purchase Made.

Since the decision of the Supreme Court referred to, there has been purchased by the State at a discount warrants as follows, as of December 1, 1930:

Assessment No. 6-----	$5,549,347 91
Assessment No. 2-----	303,220 72

In addition, warrants by landowners secured at a discount but applied at full face value, plus accrued interest, have amounted to $3,020,120.25. Assessment No. 7 bonds and interest have been paid in the amount of $176,789.11.

There is still available in the State treasury for the purchase of warrants at a discount, as of December 1, 1930:

Assessment No. 6-----	$1,702,924 95
Assessment No. 2-----	806,135 53

There remains for further use in Assessment No. 7 fund, $13,722.89.

Following upon a period of more than a decade in which the affairs of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Drainage District affairs had been in a state of chaos, this is an accomplishment in which the administration naturally takes great pride.

OTHER DEPARTMENTAL ACTIVITIES.

Liability Insurance for State-Owned Automobiles.

The Supreme Court in due time affirmed the constitutionality of an act passed by the 1929 Legislature providing for liability insurance against the negligent operation of State-owned motor vehicles or vehicles operated by agents of the State. Arrangements were made by the Department of Finance for the issuing of an insurance policy whereby the public is protected in the matter of damages which might accrue from an accident in which a State car is involved. California is the first state to assume such a liability, thus setting a precedent which bids fair to be largely followed, judging from inquiries upon the subject which have been received from officers of other states. The insurance policy has protected the State in more than forty claims in the first year.

Old State Claim Against United States Government.

Progress is being made in connection with the prosecution of the claim of the State of California for reimbursement by the federal government for expenditures incurred in connection with the Civil War. The total amount of the claim is now $6,462,143.13. It is being prosecuted on a contingent fee under an act passed by the 1929 Legislature, and a bill has already been introduced in the United States Senate to provide for the payment of the claim.

American River Dam.

The legislative session of 1927 passed an act to provide for the impounding and utilization of the waters of the American River for flood control, river flow control and equitation, domestic use, irrigation, reclamation, power development, or any one or more of such or other public uses; and authorizing the State Department of Finance to acquire, for the State, property useful in connection therewith; also to lease property of the State for such uses. It was impossible to work out the project, which contemplated a dam on the American River at Folsom, within the specified time, and the project failed. The Legislature of 1929 took similar action and provided that any lease entered into under the powers conferred by said act should be executed on or before December 31, 1930. The matter was diligently prosecuted by the Department of Finance, acting in conjunction with the Department of Public Works, and early in the summer of 1930 a form of lease was arrived at which was agreed upon as being substantially acceptable to State authorities and to the American River Hydro-Electric Company, which desired to proceed with the enterprise. The company, however, has failed to carry on with the project and the matter now stands in the same position it did at the time of the enactment of the 1927 statute, plus, of course, the information which has been gained, and which will be useful in case the project shall be revived.

Refrigeration Terminal in San Francisco.

The precooling plant and refrigeration warehouse on the State-owned water front in San Francisco is now a going concern. Inasmuch as the State owns the entire water front at San Francisco, it was found necessary to provide at shipside a facility of this kind. The State Produce Terminal Building erected some years ago was found to present an ideal situation, being located on China Basin and immediately adjacent to The Embarcadero and Pier 46, thus giving more than 3000 lineal feet of wharfage space immediately available, and permitting the docking of an ordinary ship in such a position that the middle hatch is not more than 65 feet from the loading door of the warehouse. In addition to the shipside facilities offered, there is immediate rail and truck accommodation. The capacity of this warehouse, divided into seven refrigeration chambers, is 210,000 cubic feet of refrigerated space, which will care for 3000 tons of perishable fruits or estimated in boxes of apples, 125,000. The fruit growers of northern California used the facility quite largely this past season. In my judgment the present refrigerated space should be doubled, which can be done at moderate cost and without any enlargement of the present building.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS.

DIRECTOR, WILL J. FRENCH.

In this department there are the following six divisions: Industrial Accidents and Safety (Industrial Accident Commission), Labor Statistics and Law Enforcement, State Employment Agencies, Housing and Sanitation, Industrial Welfare, and Industrial Fire Safety. The State Compensation Insurance Fund, which is under the jurisdiction of the Industrial Accident Commission, is also an important section of the department's activities. The Division of Industrial Fire Safety was added to the other divisions by the California Legislature at its last session; and besides enforcing safety in the cleaning and dyeing plants of California, the division is removing the fire hazards from State and public buildings as well as from places of employment.

IMPORTANT GENERAL ACTIVITIES.

Age Discriminations in Industry.

The Department of Industrial Relations has issued during the last biennium two Special Bulletins (Nos. 1 and 2) dealing with the problem of the growing tendency toward refusing employment to those who have reached middle age. Sometimes the limit is set at a year-standard far below 40 or 45 years. The department has urged with vigor that employers consider the physical and mental ability to do the work, regardless of age, and this policy has met with universal approval. California is the first State officially to pay attention to this discrimination, and from all over the United States have come letters that show the deep concern of the large groups of men and women affected by this comparatively new barrier to work.

Filipino Immigration.

Special Bulletin No. 3 gave citizens reliable data about the influx of Filipinos into the United States, and especially into California. Records were carefully checked, and complete information is now available as to the number of Filipinos, the kinds of work they follow, their marital status, and their relations to the economic and social questions that confront our people. The bulletin is fact-finding in character, and does not take a position either for or against immigration from the Philippine Islands. It was thought best first to publish the facts, without the least feeling. There can follow action based on accurate knowledge that will result in good both for Americans and Filipinos.

The Mexican Problem.

Special Bulletin No. 4 is a voluminous document. It is the outcome of the decision to have the directors of Industrial Relations, Social Welfare, and Agriculture form a fact-finding committee to study and report on Mexican immigration. Considerable time was taken in preparing the bulletin. The work had to be done in conjunction with the other duties of the departments named, and its importance warranted unusual attention to detail. State, county, and city records have contributed to the findings, and federal sources were called upon for data. Inasmuch as Mexico is our neighbor on the south, and the many thousands of her people entering California add complexities to our problems, it was deemed advisable to be as careful as possible in presenting the labor, social, and agricultural aspects of such tremendous importance to all the residents of the United States. As in the Filipino study, the Mexican research was concluded on the basis of supplying reliable information, without recommendations either for or against Mexican immigration.

Boulder Dam.

The federal government was asked by the Department of Industrial Relations to make operations safe for employees in constructing Boulder Dam, and to pay especial attention to town planning, sanitation, housing, and the variances in temperature. The responses were most cordial. It is believed the early attention given to these important matters will help attain the great purpose of life conservation, as well as comfort, for the thousands who will be employed on the project, many of whom will be Californians.

Unemployment.

The extension of the State employment agencies and the opening of seasonal offices in the fruit-growing districts have enabled the department to make some contribution toward assisting the men and women who are out of work. Arrangements have been made for the transportation of those who are willing to pick cotton. The growers will provide auto trucks, and the agencies in Los Angeles will serve as a medium of connection between the workers and the jobs. An experiment in Berkeley is receiving attention. Cooperation between the State, the city of Berkeley, the Berkeley Chamber of Commerce, the University of California, the trade unions and the social groups, all clearing through the State Employment Agency, has proved beneficial in many ways.

DIVISION OF INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS AND SAFETY.

Efforts to Save Life.

During the last two years the Industrial Accident Commission has stressed the prevention of accidents. The city of Los Angeles gave instructions to its building inspectors to enforce the commission's safety standards on all construction work and excavations. This aid has proved most valuable. The city of San Francisco is considering an ordinance that will provide for special safety service. All of the larger cities of California have departments in their governments that enable the commission to secure cooperation in making places of employment safe, and all have accepted the invitation. The casualty companies' engineers inspect insured boilers and elevators and turn the reports in to the Industrial Accident Commission, thus avoiding duplication and annoyance to owners.

Illustrations of Value.

The William Taylor Hotel and the Fox Theater in San Francisco, unusually large structures, were completed without loss of life or serious injury to employees—a very remarkable record, considering the hazardous work. In Los Angeles twenty-one large buildings, representing 270 stories, were constructed with a like final report. This shows what can be done when all agencies join hands in a determination that death must not mar building operations.

In Wider Fields.

The commission has been active in removing the X-ray-film hazard in hospitals, in supervising State and public institutions in respect to accident risks, in urging that natural gas be provided with an odorizer for both public and industrial safety, in giving many visitors from foreign countries complete information about methods of preventing accidents, in teaching first aid, and in helping citizens everywhere to avoid untimely death and injury.

State Compensation Insurance Fund.

The State Compensation Insurance Fund is unique among State departments in that it is actively engaged in business, and receives no financial aid from the State. It was created for the purpose of setting standards which other carriers in the same line of business must follow, and for the purpose of protecting employers in this State against excessive rates. That it has served the purpose for which it was created is demonstrated by the fact that one out of every three employers in the State of California patronizes the fund. Since its creation, it has greatly lowered the cost of compensation insurance to its patrons by returning to them a sum in excess of $18,000,000 in dividends. In addition, it has served those employers who do not insure with the fund by acting as a leveler of rates, its very existence tending to prevent any unwarranted claims for rate increases.

DIVISION OF LABOR STATISTICS AND LAW ENFORCEMENT.

Administration and Enforcement of Labor Laws.

This division is charged with the administration and enforcement of many labor laws, the enforcement of which is not specifically vested in other governmental agencies. Among these labor statutes are (1) the laws pertaining to payment of wages, (2) the eight-hour law for women workers, (3) the child-labor law, and (4) the law governing the operations of private fee-charging employment agencies.

District Offices.

District offices are maintained by this division in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Oakland, Fresno, San Diego, Sacramento, Long Beach, Bakersfield, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, San Jose, El Centro, and Stockton. The last mentioned office was established in August, 1929. These thirteen district offices receive complaints of labor-law violations, and offer assistance to men and women applying for the division's services.

Complaints Investigated.

The great volume of work handled by this division may be gauged by the fact that during the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1930, its thirteen district offices received and investigated 68,653 complaints of violations of labor laws. This was an increase of 6.7 per cent over the number of complaints received during the preceding biennial period. Almost ninety out of every hundred complaints received by the division are claims for unpaid wages. Thus, of the 68,653 complaints received during the last biennium, 60,469, or 88.1 per cent, were wage claims, while 8184, or 11.9 per cent, were complaints of other labor law violations.

Collection of Unpaid Wages.

During the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1928, the division collected $1,962,992 in unpaid wages, and during the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1930, the division collected $2,134,783—an increase of $171,791, or 8.8 per cent, over the preceding biennium. These wages are collected free of charge to the men and women who file their wage claims with the division, and who are unable to employ attorneys. More than one-half of the wage claims are for amounts under $50, and about one-fifth are for amounts in excess of $100. The average amount of unpaid wages collected per wage claim settled is $57. About 20 per cent of all wage claimants are women workers.

Regulation of Employment Agencies.

While the collection of unpaid wages is the greatest service rendered by the division to the wage earners of the State, the welfare of the workers is also looked after by this division through its regulation of the private fee-charging employment agencies. There are 400 such agencies in the State, licensed by the division to conduct business in accordance with the requirements of the Employment Agency Act.

Prosecutions.

In order to compel compliance with the labor laws of the State, the division started 1537 criminal prosecutions during the fiscal year 1928-1929, and 1544 during the fiscal year 1929-1930. Although 85 per cent of these prosecutions were against employers who wilfully refused to pay wages, by far the greatest number of wage claims were adjudicated without recourse to court actions. The remainder of the criminal actions were against violators of the Child Labor Law, the eight-hour law for women workers, the Employment Agency Law, and other labor laws.

Labor Statistics.

As the name of this division implies, it is also one of its important functions to gather and disseminate statistical information concerning labor conditions in the State. The Division publishes a monthly bulletin pertaining to employment conditions, wages and earnings of factory workers. It also gathers and publishes data on union rates of wages and hours of labor, and other economic statistics pertaining to the well-being of wage earners.

DIVISION OF STATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES.

Number of Free Employment Agencies.

The California system of State free employment agencies was inaugurated in 1916, with the opening of permanent free employment agencies in San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, and Los Angeles. Since then, but prior to the last biennium, permanent State free employment offices were also established in Bakersfield, Fresno, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Jose, and Stockton. In February, 1930, another permanent free employment office was opened in Berkeley, in cooperation with the city of Berkeley and the Chamber of Commerce of that city. In San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Oakland are maintained separate branch offices of the State free employment service, which specialize in placing general labor, clerical workers, and female industrial and domestic workers. The special branch for female workers in Oakland was opened on December 15, 1929. In Los Angeles, there was opened in March, 1930, a special branch office to take care of Negro applicants for employment. In addition to these permanent offices, the division also operates, during the fruit picking seasons, seasonal employment offices for the benefit of farmers and farm laborers. During the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1930, such seasonal employment offices were operated in Lodi, Hollister, Gilroy, Watsonville, and Newcastle.

Number of Free Jobs Furnished.

During the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1930, the State free employment agencies furnished 295,385 jobs to applicants for employment. During the ten years, 1920-1929, the average annual number of jobs furnished free to the workers of the State, through the State employment agencies, was 173,087. The number of placements made by the State employment agencies varies with industrial and agricultural conditions in the State.

Amount Saved Through State Agencies.

The average fee, per temporary or permanent job, charged by private employment agencies, was $2.42 during the years 1928 and 1929. If the men and women who secured the 295,385 jobs through the free employment agencies during the two fiscal years ending June 30, 1930, were obliged to buy these jobs from private agencies, the cost to them would have been in excess of $700,000, or over $350,000 annually.

DIVISION OF HOUSING AND SANITATION.

Aid Given Immigrants.

This division is the point of contact between the State and its large alien population, which is yearly increasing. California averaging fifth in rank of those states receiving the largest number of immigrants. Their problems are presented in their native language handicaps are removed, due mainly to ignorance of our language, laws and customs, and ultimately good citizenship results. Due to changes in immigration and naturalization laws, more and more immigrants are seeking the division's assistance on these questions. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, 15,290 immigrants in California declared their intention of becoming citizens, and 10,483 former declarants were naturalized.

Labor Camps Have Higher Standards.

Supervision of the sanitary conditions existing in labor camps in the State, numbering approximately 2700, is placed with this division. The yearly population of these camps is about 90,000 persons, a little more than one-third of them being women and children. When the division started the inspection of labor camps, conditions were deplorable. In its first investigation as to the cause of a riot wherein public officials were murdered, it was found that there were no housing accommodations or sanitary facilities; sickness was prevalent, water scarce, a superabundance of flies contaminating food, and other drawbacks of a serious nature. The standard of labor camps in California is now such that other states and nations are using our law as an authority on the subject. Good housing accommodations and sanitary facilities for the workers are now general throughout the State. This has been obtained through constant vigilance and sane enforcement, which must necessarily continue.

Housing Improved.

The State Housing Act is enforced by this division. Regular supervision is maintained in order to keep up modern standards and to remove any tendency toward slum conditions in the older districts of our cities. Through the cooperation of local building inspectors and health officers in our cities and counties, there has been great improvement in the sanitary conditions of hotels, apartment houses, and dwellings. Many of these buildings, which had outlived their usefulness for human habitation through deterioration, have been vacated, destroyed or remodeled. In the unincorporated areas a number of groups of shacks have been eliminated. Although not required by the act, plans for new construction are frequently brought to the division for recommendation and approval. This has prevented violations and in many instances saved the owner additional expense and worry.

Auto Camp Regulation.

A new statute regulating the construction and maintenance of auto camps outside the limits of incorporated cities was given this division for enforcement. The need for such regulation had long been necessary. Many of the camps were dirty, and lacking in most of the essentials required for temporary housing. The improvement produced in a short time in old camps, and the living conditions established in the new ones, are outstanding features.

DIVISION OF INDUSTRIAL WELFARE.

Minimum Wage Benefits Most Apparent.

The last biennium has revealed in a graphic and unbiased manner the value of minimum wage legislation for women and minors as enforced by the Division of Industrial Welfare.

Rates of Wages in the Limited Price Chain Department Store.

The Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor has released in the last year two extensive studies on the employment of women. The first, Bulletin No. 76, is a study of wages in the limited price chain department stores of representative states and cities of the country. This study shows that of approximately 6000 women, including 881 from California, 73.5 per cent received rates of pay less than $16 per week, or California's legal minimum wage. Only 15.7 per cent received rates of pay of $16 per week, and but 10.8 per cent exceeded $16 per week. When the 881 California women are excluded from the study, one finds that in the other states and cities, where no legal minimum wage exists to control competitive levels, 83 per cent received less than $16, or a living wage, and 40.7 per cent received rates of pay under $12 per week, which is the lowest apprenticeship rate permitted in California for adult women in the mercantile industry. A very different story is told of California, where, of 881 women, but 20.2 per cent received under $16, and were licensed apprentices.

High Wages Received in the Laundry Industry in California.

In Bulletin No. 78 of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor is an exhaustive study of employment of women in the laundry industry of the country. There are 19,180 women in the study, including 4063 from California. These were employed in 38 laundries of San Francisco and Los Angeles. Of those employed throughout the country, including California, 61 per cent received earnings of less than $16 per week, while 9.7 per cent received exactly $16, and 29.3 per cent received $17 and over per week. Of the 4063 California women, 13.8 per cent received less than $16 per week, while 21.8 per cent received exactly $16 per week, and 64.4 per cent received more than the minimum wage. This proves conclusively that the minimum wage does not become the maximum wage. California pays by far the highest laundry wages in the United States. San Francisco pays the highest laundry wages of any city in the country, the median wage being $20.70 per week. These high wages in San Francisco are partly due to a strong union, which has used the minimum wage as a basis only for higher wages.

Conclusion.

There is no doubt that the continued enforcement of the Minimum Wage Law with an adequate budget for inspections has put literally millions of dollars into the pockets of approximately 200,000 working women under the protection of this beneficent legislation in California. Meanwhile I am happy to believe that there is not a citizen of this State who would wish to see these women deprived of a decent living wage.

DIVISION OF INDUSTRIAL FIRE SAFETY.

Self-supporting.

The division is self-supporting, the cost of its operation being borne by the dry-cleaning establishments, through an annual occupational license fee.

Attitude of Plant Owners.

A very noteworthy fact in connection with the law is the attitude of the plant owners. With the exception of an almost negligible number, their hearty support has been given the division in its enforcement. This is due to the equity with which all such establishments have been treated, regardless of their magnitude; and, in addition, to a marked reduction in fire losses, which also has resulted in lowered insurance costs.

Plant Employees.

The security, health and comfort of the plant employees have been greatly enhanced by the elimination of many flagrant violations of common sense in the employment of the highly inflammable explosive and somewhat toxic solvents used as cleansing mediums. Working in a safer environment, and under more healthful conditions, their production output has been increased and the character of their work improved. These facts, together with the greater security against loss by fire afforded the customer, has resulted in a material benefit to the public, as well as to all others immediately concerned.

Enlightening the Public.

Through the medium of talks, magazine articles and office advice, fire prevention and extinguishment propaganda has been understandingly set before the public, and in particular before the housewife given to home dry cleaning. In this connection, with the heavy and ever-increasing loss of life and property, the division is endeavoring to obtain the cooperation of the oil companies through a discontinuance of the sale of petroleum products for such use in the home.

State Institutions.

When in their vicinity the division's field deputies have, in conjunction with the local fire authorities, made inspections of practically all of the State institutions, and the division has reported their findings and its recommendations to the Department of Industrial Relations for transmission to the proper sources for remedial action where the necessity for such is obvious.

DEPARTMENT OF INSTITUTIONS.

DIRECTOR, EARL E. JENSEN.

On January 1, 1928, the institutions of the State consisted of six hospitals for mentally ill, two homes for the feeble-minded, three correctional schools and an industrial home for adult blind. Provision had also been made by law for the creation of a State Narcotic Hospital, and steps were soon thereafter taken toward its establishment on State-owned property in southern California. The establishment of this latter institution had been authorized by the Legislature of 1927, but no funds were provided. One hundred thousand dollars were made available from the emergency fund for the initial support of this hospital.

Comparison of Resident Population and Capacity.

The following table will indicate the resident population and capacity of the various groups at the beginning and end of the period covered by this report:

	July 1, 1928		June 30, 1930
	Population	Capacity	Population	Capacity
Mental hospitals.....	13,797	12,194	14,906	12,797
Homes for feeble-minded	2,364	2,078	2,715	2,558
Correctional schools.....	1,096	1,055	1,114	1,170
Adult Blind Home.....	122	143	123	131
Narcotics	---	---	86	92
Totals	17,379	15,470	18,944	16,748

Increased Capacity Provided.

It will be seen that during the two-year period, capacity for the care of inmates was increased by 1278. Resident population, however, had increased during the same period by 1565 persons, adding 287 to the excess population at the commencement of the period. This indicates an increase of institutional population proportionate to the increase of the population of the State, demonstrating the need of a more extensive and rapid building program than has been heretofore planned. Such an expanded program appears essential if the institutional problem before us is to be met in an adequate manner.

INSTITUTIONAL CARE.

Eight-Hour Day.

During the biennium an eight-hour day was adopted for all institutional employees. Considerable difficulty was encountered, as additional funds were not made available in appropriations to provide for this change in service. Accomplishment was possible only through the hearty cooperation of the superintendents of the several institutions, who recognized the value and importance of the plan, and who, though with regret, willingly eliminated a number of positions and functions provided in their budgets in order that funds might be available for the added personnel. As now functioning, the eight-hour day in some institutions is on straight shift and at others on broken shift. Budgets for the coming biennium will undoubtedly be based upon a continuance of this service on an extended and standardized basis.

Division of Research and Psychiatric Supervision.

This division was created within the department with Dr. Herman Adler, formerly of Chicago, Illinois, as chief. Dr. Adler, a man of national reputation, comes to the service of the State of California with years of training and experience in all lines of research, psychiatry, psychology, criminology and allied subjects. At the present time this division is conducting a survey of commitments made to State hospitals over a period of several years in an endeavor to determine pre-commitment environmental causation of mental trouble. Dr. Adler's connection with the department, in a supervisory and advisory capacity, will be inestimable in value.

Dietetic Supervision.

The problem of foods and feeding has been put upon a sound scientific and economic basis under the direct supervision of a highly trained State Dietitian. This service has been in operation for nearly three years and has proved a success from its inception. Before such supervision and scientific direction were inaugurated, complaints were had by the hundreds from inmates, employees, and the general public on institutional food—its quality, quantity, preparation and service. Such complaints are now unknown. Food now served in our institutions is ample in quantity, excellent in quality, palatably prepared, and attractively served. The function of the supervising dietitian has been extended beyond the actual institutional dietetic problem. Study of plans and specifications for buildings to be erected at the State institutions, related to food—its storage, preparation and service—is undertaken. All such buildings must first be approved by this agent before construction is commenced.

Cafeteria Food Service.

Cafeteria food service for employees and inmates alike has been given close study and consideration, resulting in this form of service being generally inaugurated to some degree in every institution, with the exception of the girls' school, which is operated on the cottage plan—all meals being prepared and served by the girls, under supervision, as a training project. This form of food service is not only recognized as an economic measure, but also one having very distinct therapeutic value. Mental patients particularly respond to this type of self-service, developing within themselves a self-reliance not heretofore demonstrated. The privilege of selecting food to be eaten, though that selection might necessarily be limited, has a very definite effect upon the patient, and has many advantages over the congregate dining rooms where food was served upon the table by attendants or other patients to those assembled. Aside from its therapeutic value, it is quicker, easier, cleaner, more economic and more greatly appreciated. Cafeteria service should be inaugurated to the maximum degree in all institutions.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITIES.

Supervision of Industries and Production.

The work of the supervisor of industries and production has been broadened to include field surveys, soil and crop analysis, industrial buildings and plant lay-outs, standardization of farm and other equipment, standardization and purchase of live stock, particularly dairy herds or their replacement. One of the most important functions has been the organization and maintenance of the program for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis and infectious abortion from our institutional dairy herds. This program has, within the past two years, developed tuberculosis-free herds at eight of the institutions supporting dairies. The ninth institution is supporting two herds—one tuberculosis-free and one infected—at widely separated points, until funds are made available for disposal of the infected herd and its replacement. All institutions maintaining dairy herds are equipped with pasteurizing equipment as an additional safeguard of the health of the State's wards.

Production and Industries Stimulated.

Institutional industries and maintenance departments have been studied and carefully analyzed. Changes have been made, new ideas incorporated and a general plan developed placing these functions upon the highest possible plane, economically as well as in productivity. The complete reorganization of some institutional activities has been necessary to accomplish the desired purpose. The plan is for standardization of such departments along an accepted plane, unification of effort, economy of program and product. The maximum production of those commodities that may be used within the institutional group is an essential of this program, although, in some instances, a surplus develops.

Sale and Exchange of Surplus Products.

Activity in this department developed need for a manner of sale and exchange of surplus products, in order that progress might not be interrupted, and the producing institution realize a value for its efforts. A bill was introduced and passed by the Legislature of 1929, enabling an institution to dispose of its surplus products from any department through sale or exchange to another institution, or, in case no need was shown for such product within the institutional group, then to dispose of it upon the open market. The value of the product is fixed by the Department of Finance, sale or exchange effected, and, in case of sale, the proceeds thereof are credited to the appropriation of the producing institution. An incentive for maximum efficiency and productivity is thus established that builds to a greater economic program.

SERVICE OUTSIDE THE INSTITUTIONS.

Parole Supervision.

The sociological group (social service, parole, placement and field workers) has been increased materially, there now being seven psychiatric social service workers with the mental group and eight with the feeble-minded. The correctional school group is covered by eleven parole and placement officers, and the State Narcotic Hospital with one. Field supervision of the blind is conducted by a group of six trained instructors. The State's program of extramural supervision has enabled the continued parole of a larger group than ever before in history, with more final adjustments from parole back into society.

Large Groups Requiring Service.

When it is considered that there are 1312 on parole from the mental hospitals, 1231 from homes for the feeble-minded, 1268 from correctional schools, and 109 from the Narcotic Hospital—a total of 3920 requiring supervision under this parole system—one wonders at this small group of twenty-seven persons maintaining the degree of success that has been evidenced. Adequate supervision of so large a number of maladjusted persons by so few is a physical impossibility, though they are to be highly commended upon their interest, energy, and achievement. A greater success in this field is possible, with an appreciable increase in the number on parole, if provision be made for an extension and elaboration of this important work. For every mental patient continued on parole the State and the taxpayers are saved an average of $21.50 per month, for the feeble-minded $24.52, the correctional school case $63.95, the narcotic addict $80.23. It is estimated that there are upward of 2500 adult trainable blind within the State of California who are not cared for or receiving training in an institution. Only a relatively few of this great group can be contacted and trained by the seven field workers allotted to this work. This program itself is worthy of greater consideration and expansion, but adequate funds therefor must be provided by a sympathetic people and its Legislature.

Out-Patient Clinics.

Clinics are held regularly each month in centers of population. Clinics to the number of thirty are now on the monthly schedule, twenty-five being conducted from the State hospitals and five from the homes for feeble-minded. This service is in demand by communities, with an increasing number of requests for the clinics. In addition to the contact and adjustment of preinstitutional cases, cases on parole who are having difficulty in adjustment are contacted, thus aiding the field supervisory group. Clinical service upon request is extended to those communities which are not on the regular monthly schedule and do not have reason for such periodic visits. The State's plan is to extend this service wherever and whenever needed, if possible and consistent with the hospital program and routine. A legislative program providing for an expansion in this field, with a more liberal service to the public, may well be undertaken during the coming biennium, since through this medium many may be saved from commitment to a State institution, while the public will be saved the expense such commitment entails.

MENTAL HOSPITALS.

Restraint Abolished in State Hospitals.

The policy of nonrestraint has, contrary to general prediction, proved a success. Mechanical and other forms of physical restraint, in all but a few post-operative cases, have given away entirely to hydrotherapy, occupational therapy, specialized treatment and a stricter segregation. The abolition of restraint has, in the opinion of the well informed, greatly aided in the adjustment and ultimate recovery of many patients committed to our care. Large numbers of patients are delivered to our hospitals from courts of commitment in various forms of restraint. In practically every instance restraint would have been unnecessary had the person in charge been one trained in the care of those mentally ill. Patients received at the hospital in restraint are more difficult of adjustment into the routine and less responsive to early treatment. An educational program on the manner of handling this class of patient is necessary and is being planned. The delivery of persons to all State institutions should be taken out of the hands of the sheriff's office, and placed with those trained in the proper care and treatment of the particular class involved.

Smoking Prohibited.

The no-smoking rule, applied to employees and inmates occupying buildings in which inmates are housed, has also proved its merit. There has been but one fire during the past two years, and that not due to smoking, but to incendiarism at the hands of a small group of patients in the Sonoma State Home. Promiscuous smoking by mentally incompetent patients and other inmates who are more or less irresponsible was considered an ever-present fire hazard and menace to life and property. Smoking has, therefore, been absolutely banned, except within restricted buildings or areas.

Uniformed Employees.

All employees, including members of the medical staff, entrusted with the care and treatment of patients, both in this and the feeble-minded group, are required to wear standard white hospital uniforms. The result is a better service, a better appearance, and is more in harmony with the idea that these are truly hospitals for care and treatment, and not the old custodial institutions of a few years ago. While this program was seriously objected to by the attendant group, particularly the itinerants, they soon became as enthusiastic of the plan as others were, and are now agreed that it develops a better appearance and service. Uniforms are furnished by the employee at his own expense, but are laundered by the State at the institutional laundries.

Specialization of Medical Service.

Plans are in progress for a specialization of the medical service. It is no longer believed that anyone with just a knowledge of psychiatry is eligible for State hospital work. In addition to psychiatric training, members of the medical staff should be specialized in some other subject as well in order to render the maximum service to our wards. It is hoped that in the near future our psychiatrists may become specialized, one in internal medicine; one in surgery; one in eye, ear, nose and throat; one in heart and lungs—in fact, general specialization in order that the physical ills of our wards may have the same careful diagnosis and treatment that is accorded them in their mental troubles. Steps are being taken toward such specialization within our present hospital staffs, and in future any additions to the staff should be made only after specialization in other than psychiatry has been given due consideration.

Important Field for Research.

The State hospital is considered one of the greatest fields for medical and mental research. This field continues to occupy an important place in the hospital group. With the completion of the $80,000 central research laboratory on the grounds of the Agnew State Hospital, California will be well equipped to further this program and add materially to the success of our work. The service of this laboratory will

Not be restricted to any one group of institutions, being extended to all State institutions and agencies as needed or requested.

Segregation of Patients.

The segregation of patients into groups within each hospital has been undertaken. In this group segregation consideration is given to sex, age, physical and mental condition of the patient, simplifying the care and treatment to an appreciable degree over that required where these considerations are not made. With the early completion of two additional tubercular units at Patton, each to house 50 patients, the segregation of the tubercular group at the one hospital will be possible. Plans have been made for the segregation of the criminal insane group at the Mendocino hospital. The first unit of a group to care for this class has been completed and in use nearly two years. It houses but 65, and is totally inadequate. Further special unit construction will be required to take care of this segregation of the criminal class of insane.

Exercise and Recreation.

The value of the policy announced by the department nearly three years ago, requiring out-of-door exercise, organized recreation, fresh air and sunshine for all ambulatory patients is supported in an article published in a recent issue of "The Modern Hospital" and written by no less authority than John E. Davis, M.A., senior physical director, United States Veterans' Bureau hospitals. All patients who are able to leave their quarters are given at least three hours daily out-of-doors. Physical exercise and awakened interest in kindred subjects are as important in the program of rehabilitation as are other forms of prescribed treatment and the several occupational therapies.

HOUSES FOR THE FEEBLE-MINDED.

Modern Hospital Buildings Provided.

A modern hospital, completely equipped, has been built at the Sonoma State Home. This unit provides one hundred beds. A similar unit of fifty-bed capacity is to be built immediately at Pacific Colony. Funds for this construction were provided by the Legislature of 1929. Up-to-date, well equipped hospitals are very essential in any institution, and especially in those caring for the feeble-minded, who are so susceptible to injury or serious illness due to their mental condition and reduced physical resistance.

Pacific Colony Capacity Increased.

The patient capacity at Pacific Colony has been increased during the past two years by 240—three cottages housing 80 each. Another cottage is to be built during the early months of 1931. The building program at this hospital during the two years, in addition to the above, has provided a gymnasium and amusement hall, school building and industrial shops, with a hospital, an administration building, cottage for patients and a girls' industrial building yet to be built. Further expansion is planned for the coming biennium, which will enable the State to further meet the demands made upon this southern institution for care of patients. It is the hope of those closely connected with this institution that it may continue to be maintained primarily as a training institution, rather than one of dual purposes—both training and custodial.

Sale of Pacific Colony Land.

Four hundred acres of hilly grazing land were sold, the proceeds being used to purchase a tract of forty-one acres, highly developed and producing, within the boundaries of the colony. The purchase of this property has made a well available for additional domestic supply, producing 75 inches of water. A modern dairy unit and live stock plant will be developed upon the remaining 400 acres of the original 800 acre tract purchased at the time of the original establishment of this institution in 1918. Funds in the amount of $18,000 for the initial unit of this plant were provided in 1929, with construction now in progress. The budget for 1931-32 carries an approved item of $25,000 for further development of this project. A herd of 15 purebred registered Holstein dairy cows was purchased recently for Pacific Colony. These animals were selected from the third highest rated dairy herd in the United States, as rated and registered with the American Holstein Friesian Association. The price at which these high-grade animals were secured was most advantageous. Milk in both quantity and quality is an essential of the diet of an institution caring for children and the younger wards of the State.

Specialized Service to the Feeble-Minded.

Orthopedic surgery is being continued at Sonoma, and has been included in the treatment at Pacific Colony. Results are gratifying and justify this important addition to our service. Massage is another important feature of the treatment being rendered this group. Special attention has been given to the diet of all groups, especially the epileptic and the low grade cases. The vocational and educational program is extended to provide the maximum training. Only certificated instructors are employed, and those must have had experience with this particular type of patient. Everything possible is being done by the State of California for this most unfortunate group which leads toward a betterment of their condition and their adjustment in some degree back into society.

Social Service Among the Feeble-Minded.

The program of social service, leading to adjustment within or out of the institution, is being more and more recognized as an essential in the State's program for the care and training of this class. The staff has been increased to eight, adding three workers during the past two years—one additional on the resident staff at the Sonoma Home, one for Los Angeles territory and one in the San Joaquin Valley territory. Close supervision of the parole group is very necessary to a safe and satisfactory adjustment. A broad understanding, great sympathy, tenderness and tact are necessary in all workers in order that the desired results may be had. These attributes should be sought for all institutional workers upon the State's pay roll.

CORRECTIONAL SCHOOLS.

Building Program at the Preston School.

With the completion during the past two years of buildings to house 174 boys at Preston, the capacity of this school has been increased to 660. New construction completed during the period includes: A modern hospital of thirty-eight beds, a receiving unit, a custodial unit, a dormitory and a classroom building. Construction in progress, or contemplated with funds now available, includes an electrical shop building, refectory building and a residence for the superintendent. A special domestic water supply is being developed at a cost of $70,000 and is nearing completion. Further legislation will call for irrigation and power development to cost, as estimated, $120,000. This project will be essential to the future development of the school and its agricultural and vocational program. Undeveloped water rights are now owned by the school. The impounding of an adequate supply of water will serve two purposes—the production, through expanded generating equipment, of power for general use and industrial shop program, and for irrigation of farms and gardens. The water so impounded will first pass through the generating equipment and thence into the irrigating system, serving dual purposes.

Development at the Whittier State School.

At Whittier the building program has also been advanced. Construction during the two-year period and now in progress includes: An administration building, a new hospital, and two cottages for boys, all completed, with a kitchen and commissary building; a cottage for boys and a general shop building under construction or provided for. A one-half mile running track and athletic field has been built by the boys themselves for interschool and competitive athletics. The construction of this track and field on a sloping site necessitated the moving of thousands of cubic yards of soil. The entire project was completed by the labor of the boys, with the assistance of, and under supervision of, the school personnel. The boys have also built a very complete miniature golf course for their pleasure and recreation.

No Expansion at the Ventura School.

The fact that there has been no expansion of this school must not be considered as a disinterested attitude toward the school, its program and its very splendid accomplishments. The school has sufficient capacity with which to meet the demands made upon it on the basis of present and past experience. The very fact that to this school go the young girls requiring specialized training and adjustment, future mothers and dependable, worth-while citizens, places Ventura upon a plane by itself. The accomplishments of the school, the success of its program and the satisfaction of its parole group speak for themselves. The school is indeed a credit to the State, and is promptly and adequately meeting all demands made upon it.

Educational Program an Important Feature.

The program of academic and vocational education has been extended in all three schools. Only trained, accredited instructors are employed. Night classes in academic subjects have been inaugurated to give this instruction to those who desire it in addition to their vocational program, which occupies the most of their day. The educational program and the training these boys and girls receive, coupled with our extended parole and placement organization, has enabled us to keep a number constantly on parole and placement greatly in excess of the actual number receiving training and instruction within the schools.

Success of the Parole Group.

A recent survey of the parole group gives the following interesting information on the adjustments being made:

Superior -----	17.56%
Above average -----	23.36
Average -----	39.79
Below average -----	10.81
Failure -----	8.48
Total -----	100%

It is very interesting to note that in this large group of delinquent boys and girls who come to us, after the prescribed period of training, when placed and tried on parole, only 8.48 per cent are classed as failures, with a total of 19.29 per cent to be considered in the unsatisfactory group. This splendid work of rehabilitation is more than justifying itself.

STATE NARCOTIC HOSPITAL.

Hospital for Care and Treatment of Narcotic Addicts Established.

This hospital, established at Spadra on the site of the old Pacific Colony, was opened in August of 1928 with capacity for forty-two patients. The experiment proved successful, and during 1929 a building was erected to provide for 50 additional patients. We have maintained our resident population at capacity, transferring all women addicts to Patton and furloughing the overflow of men patients, in the way of convalescent cases, to the Norwalk State Hospital. The Narcotic Hospital has been looked upon as an experiment, but we are confident that it has ceased to be such, and has demonstrated its need and its right to a continuance in the future. Nation-wide attention has been attracted to this institution; its program and accomplishments are being watched carefully by federal agents and officials of other states. The success of this original California project portends the establishment of similar hospitals in other states based upon the California program of treatment, training, rehabilitation, parole and supervision.

Construction Program Completed and Planned.

Contracts have been let for the construction of two cottages, to house 25 patients each, a receiving building and a gymnasium and recreational hall. These buildings should be ready for occupancy not later than July 1, 1931. The program for the coming biennium calls for further patient capacity, employees' quarters, a modern poultry plant for training of the older group of patients, and an up-to-date auto mechanics and general vocational shop building; also the construction of residences for both the medical director and the resident physician. Heretofore, these officers have been required to live in one wing of the main building which houses patients.

Patients Held in Hospital Eight Months or Longer.

Patients are treated and held for a period in excess of eight months, as required by law, and are then granted parole under supervision, some sort of suitable employment having been arranged before they may leave the hospital. At the end of two years from date of commitment, which is also provided by statute, discharge is granted all cases either on parole or escape, or still in hospital, as the case may be. All patients who are in the convalescent class (off the drug), and physically able to do so, are required to work. At the present time vegetable and landscape gardening, orchard work and all classes of maintenance work are done by patients.

Large Number of Addicts Treated.

Since the hospital was opened there have been 497 commitments. There are 110 who have been discharged, and 303 who have been paroled, furloughed, or transferred to other hospitals, or who have escaped or died, thus leaving 84 actually in the Narcotic Hospital as of November 15, 1930. According to the provisions of the law, there are 297 others still on the rolls of the institution, composed of 112 on parole and the remainder included under the heads of furlough, transfer, or escaped.

Escapes Prevalent During First Year.

Escapes were prevalent during the first year of the operation of the hospital, due to two reasons—first, the type of patient sent to us for treatment, principally persons with a history of years of addiction and lengthy police records; and secondly, the lack of custodial features. The plant and some forty acres have now been enclosed with a steel-wire fence 13 feet in height, which is lighted at night. Through the medium of the fence, and a provision written into the law at the last session of the Legislature making escape or attempted escape a misdemeanor punishable by eight months' imprisonment in the county jail, escapes have been reduced to a minimum. The jurisdiction granted over these patients at the coming session of the Legislature should be increased through the enactment of additional and corrective legislation on the subject.

THE BLIND.

New Policy and Construction Program.

The Industrial Home for Adult Blind, following out the new policy of its being only a training institution, is proving very successful. The custodial cases are being cared for by their respective counties of residence. A reinforced concrete and fireproof broom-shop building has been built, replacing an obsolete frame shop building considered an extreme fire hazard. The entire institution has been given a general renovation. All buildings have been painted inside and out during the past year. A modern salesroom and office building has been erected on the grounds. The quarters formerly occupied by these functions, have been converted into reception rooms and recreation rooms where the residents may meet and converse with friends and relatives, listen to the radio, and enjoy the daily news, magazine articles, books, etc., which are read to them by two readers employed by the Home.

Field Supervision and Home Training.

The staff of field workers who train the blind who are unable to leave their homes for training at the Industrial Home has been increased by four. Formerly this work was handled by two persons, one in the north and one in the south. The State now maintains trained workers, teachers of blind hand crafts, as follows:

- One for the San Francisco Bay district.
- One for northern California.
- One for San Joaquin Valley.
- One for San Diego city and county.
- One for Los Angeles proper.
- One for Los Angeles County and southern California.

The Blind Population of the State.

The blind population of the State has been estimated, through a survey conducted by the Department of Social Welfare, at between 2500 and 3000 adult or trainable. We are reaching a great many of these through our field work, but our staff is not adequate to cover any appreciable number of the whole group. It is impossible for one person to contact more than a relatively few and give them any sort of instruction, training and supervision. The more intensified training of this group in hand crafts through which they may become, at least in part, self-supporting, should materially reduce the obligation to this group through the so-called "Blind Pension Bill." The group is large and the burden heavy. An extended and intensified training program should prove economy to the State.

Industrial Workshops Provided.

An industrial workshop for blind and handicapped persons has been established at 1240 West Pico street, Los Angeles. This is meeting a long-felt local need. There are now sixty-five blind receiving instruction and employed in this shop. Their product is sold through a State operated salesroom at the above address. Profits from the sale are paid the workers. This shop was in the nature of an experiment and thus far is proving a big success. It is quite possible that future legislation will be enacted that will permit of the establishment of similar shops in other large centers of population.

DEPARTMENT OF INVESTMENT.

DIRECTOR, WILL C. WOOD.

The bill creating a Department of Investment, including the Division of Banking, Division of Building and Loan Supervision, Division of Corporations, Division of Insurance, and Division of Real Estate, became effective in August, 1929. The department was organized as provided, and regular monthly meetings of the Board of Investment have been held as required by law. These meetings have afforded a clearing house for problems involving two or more of the divisions and have been very helpful in the solution of such problems. With the limited powers given to the Director of Investment, the plan of organization has achieved as much as could reasonably be expected. I would suggest that you consider whether the Department of Investment might not be more appropriately named the Department of Investment Regulation.

SUGGESTED CHANGES.

Term of Director.

As an outgrowth of the department's experience, the question arises as to the term the director should serve. Under the present law, the chiefs of divisions serve in fixed rotation as Director of Investments for a period of six months. The term is too short for the work-out of a continuous policy, which is undoubtedly desirable, and it is worth considering whether the term of the director should not be for a longer period—possibly for a year. The question also arises as to the future status of the Department of Investment. If the director is to represent the Governor in the handling of investment problems and is to supervise and correlate in an efficient manner the work of the several divisions, a more stable arrangement is in order. This might be accomplished either by the appointment of a Director of Investment, to have charge over all the divisions, as in the Department of Natural Resources; or, if it is thought that this extra expense should be avoided, by naming as director some one of the division chiefs, as in the Departments of Industrial Relations and Military Affairs. If the latter plan is followed, care should be taken to see that the director is not chosen from a division which has interests conflicting with those of any other division.

Larger Authority for Director Advisable.

Under the present law the director is without legal authority to insist that modern and effective methods of operation obtain in the several divisions. The law should be so amended that the director may require and be held responsible for the effective operation of the several divisions composing the Department of Investment.

Regulation of Investment Trusts.

The investment trust is a comparatively new development in the United States. However, these organizations have, during the last five or six years, absorbed huge amounts of investment funds. Taken as a whole, the volume of funds handled by the various types of investment trusts in the entire country will soon be quite as large as the volume of funds handled by building and loan associations. These trusts should, in my judgment, be under adequate supervision, which will involve an annual examination and appraisal of the assets carried, such examination to be made by a competent State agency. This is probably of such rapidly increasing importance as to require immediate and effective supervision of investment trusts.

Necessity for Reports and Statements.

Periodical reports to the supervising agency should be required as to all investment trusts, and the publication of a statement of assets and liabilities at least once a year should be another requirement. This suggestion, however, does not involve the publication of lists of securities held by the corporation. When so large a proportion of investment funds is carried in institutions of this type, the public is entitled to authentic information as to the financial status of the institutions concerned.

DIVISION OF BANKING.

General Progress of all Banks in California.

The past fiscal year brought to a close a decade of banking growth and expansion in California which is unparalleled in any previous decade in our banking history. Going back to June 30, 1920, we find that the 725 State and national banks with their 170 branches doing business in California reported aggregate resources of $2,499,316,000. On June 30, 1930, the 436 State and national banks with 852 branches reported aggregate resources of $4,233,409,000—a gain of almost two billion dollars in the period of only ten years. For this period savings deposits show an increase of almost one billion dollars, bringing their total up to $1,890,136,000 on June 30, 1930. Meantime the volume of loans secured by urban and rural property has increased from $472,176,000 to $993,586,000 and commercial loans from $908,999,000 to $1,360,797,000.

Present Status of Banks and Banking—National and State.

While the number of banking corporations (State and national) has declined from 725 on June 30, 1920, to 437 on June 30, 1930, due to absorptions and consolidations with the large branch banking systems for which this State is noted, the number of banking units has increased by virtue of the establishment of new branches. There are now 852 branches of banks in the State in contrast to 170 in 1920. Our total gain in banking units or establishments has been 394 for the decade. The past two years, and particularly the one just closed, have shown a slackening in the rate of banking growth, which was to be expected in view of the events of the past two years.

Reasons for More Moderate Growth.

Bank statements reflect quite accurately the effect of changes in fundamental business processes, and it is now a well-established fact that industrial production began to decline early in 1929, and with it, the amount of new business offered to the banks. Building activity had failed to maintain its record of phenomenal increase which began in 1921, and though agricultural activity continued at normal levels in California, the decline in the amount of new business offered and the curtailment of general purchasing power, caused by gradually decreased production schedules, were apparent in the statements of the banks. In California the June, 1929, reports of the banks showed a substantial yearly increase in savings or time deposits, but the record of the preceding years was not maintained. There was a decline in real estate loans, though commercial loans showed a substantial increase on account of the growth in security market financing. Commercial deposits remained relatively unchanged.

Condition of State Banks.

In view of surrounding business conditions, the State banks have made a very creditable showing during the past two years. All banks in this State (State and national) reported an aggregate decline of $38,000,000 in savings on deposit on June 30, 1930, as compared to June 29, 1929. Summaries reveal that the State system actually recorded a slight gain in savings deposits during this interval. While a decline of only $8,604,000 in commercial deposits was recorded in the annual comparison based on the State system, the total decline for all banks was $46,000,000. The volume of commercial loans in all banks shows an aggregate decline of $31,000,000, $26,000,000 of which was in the State system. Total real estate loans show a decline of $26,000,000, $18,690,000 of which was in the State system. In past periods of economic depression the question of liquidation without loss in slow-moving credit lines has been the chief concern of the banks. The present situation affords an agreeable contrast, for at no time during the present administration has the cash and secondary reserve position of the banks been more adequate. They have more than ample funds for any emergency, and are now ready for the general revival of business that follows in the wake of a temporary period of slackened industrial and commercial growth.

Stockholders' Liability.

The statute with reference to the liability of stockholders of banks should be amended in such a way that it will conform substantially to the provisions of the National Bank Act, which means that the stockholders would have an additional liability of 100 per cent of the value of the stock owned by them. This can be accomplished under Ballot Proposition No. 16, adopted at the recent election. In addition, the law should provide that the Superintendent of Banks should have the right, in the event that he takes possession of the bank, to collect this liability. Furthermore, there should be a provision of the statute that where there is an impairment of capital of a bank and the bank is still in operation, the Superintendent of Banks would have the right to order an assessment to repair the capital.

Term of Superintendent of Banks.

The Commissioner of Insurance and the Commissioner of Building and Loan Associations have a definite term fixed in the law. The tenure of the Superintendent of Banks is at the discretion of the Governor. In other states the tendency recently has been to give the Superintendent of Banks a definite term. I suggest and recommend that section 120 of the Bank Act be amended so as to provide that on January 1, 1932, a Superintendent of Banks shall be appointed for a term of four years, and that, thereafter, the term be maintained at four years, with interim appointments due to death, resignation or other cause, to be filled for the unexpired term. Until January 1, 1932, the Superintendent of Banks appointed by the incoming Governor would hold at the pleasure of the Governor, as at present, and at that time he should be reappointed by the Governor for a four-year term. Under such plan, whenever there is a change in the State administration, the Superintendent of Banks would have opportunity, for a period of one year, to work with the incoming Governor, and the Governor would have opportunity to appraise the work of the Superintendent of Banks during that period. The business of banking is of such great importance in the economic structure of the State that the supervisory agent of the State should be continued in office solely on the basis of efficiency and good judgment, rather than as a matter of politics or patronage.

DIVISION OF BUILDING AND LOAN SUPERVISION.

Growth.

During the biennial period which ended June 30, 1930, building and loan has taken the greatest forward strides in the history of the business in California. Assets have mounted from $337,706,657 to $513,110,594, or an increase of over 50 per cent. In consequence, California has earned fifth place among states of the nation in volume of building and loan assets. This tremendous growth was accomplished in part, at least, during a period of world-wide depression which had its adverse effect on general business progress and prosperity, and hence on home building, which is the backbone of the building and loan business. Seventy per cent of association assets consist of 136,000 home loans, averaging less than $2,500, on association books.

New Legislation.

The last Legislature passed several laws calculated to increase the safety and efficiency in building and loan operations. The most important enactment was a law requiring that associations must apply to the commissioner for permission to sell capital stock. This law has made it possible to prevent the organization of associations on a promotion basis, by permitting the commissioner to set up such rigorous conditions in regard to sale of stock that the promoter has been completely eliminated. Another important step was a law providing for the licensing of branch associations. Under this act an association must secure the approval of the commissioner, take out a license and put up an additional $25,000 paid-in capital, for each branch to be established.

Reorganization of Division.

Complete reorganization of the division has been accomplished, permitting this supervising agency to keep pace with the rapidly growing and changing building and loan business. Although the scope of examinations has been greatly enlarged, every association is now assured at least an annual examination, and endeavors are being made to insure that they shall be even more frequent. Appraisal of real property has been instituted through the employment of a corps of experienced appraisers, and, for the first time since the institution of State supervision, an examination of the records and accounts is accompanied by an appraisal of a cross-section of the properties upon which the association's funds are loaned. Write-offs out of profits are required where loans are found to be excessive. Associations have been encouraged to carry larger cash balances, and the ratio of current assets over current liabilities is now 2.7 to 1, an improvement of 100 per cent during the past year. A close check has been kept to see that associations maintain the reserves required by law. The biennial period has shown a rapid development of branch building and loan systems. Thirty associations were affected by mergers, there now being 87 branch associations in operation. The total number of associations has increased from 216 in 1923 to 224 at the present time. Most of the mergers have resulted in the creation of stronger, as well as larger, associations.

AN ASSOCIATION LOOTED.

A Building and Loan Defalcation.

Within the past month in the southern part of the State there has occurred a building and loan disaster so deplorable as to attract wide attention. It involves the tragedy of a man who, as a leader in all civic and business enterprises, had gained the good will and confidence of every one in the community where he was born and had spent his life; but who for years had been systematically looting the rapidly growing business he had built up. Whatever his system of concealment may have been, it eluded the vigilance of examiners under at least three and possibly four Building and Loan Commissioners, until the total of his defalcations became a staggering sum, and many thousands of people had been robbed of the money they had invested with his association.

Examination Reveals Conditions.

The unfortunate feature of this failure is the fact that the commissioner who discovered the embezzlement did not discover it until he had been in office for more than a year; although, as I am positive every building and loan official in the State would agree, inspections during his administration have been more rigid and thorough, and in the case of any association suspected of weakness, more frequent than ever before in the history of building and loan supervision in California. Upon his appointment the new commissioner at once insisted that he must have more examiners and appraisers; but, after these were furnished through a budget addition by the Department of Finance, their chief activity was to protect the interest of investors in associations that might require special attention, with no thought of danger from this, which was ranked by everyone as among the strongest and most flourishing associations of the State.

Lessons from This Experience.

Fortunately building and loan defalcations of this kind are of extremely rare occurrence, and do not in any way affect the stability of other associations. Such a catastrophe is so serious when it does occur, however, that nothing should be taken for granted; and every financial institution in charge of the people's money should be obliged to furnish audits by qualified public accountants—a requirement which the present building and loan commissioner was the first to seek—as well as continue to receive careful examinations at frequent intervals. As stated above, this has required a considerably increased staff for the commission, and the additional cost should be partly met by requiring additional fees from those associations which consume an undue amount of the commissioner's time. It is essential that public confidence shall be maintained, and it is of interest to note that, except for one case of personal dishonesty, present building and loan conditions are especially sound.

Recommendations.

Among the recommendations are: A law giving the commissioner the right to determine necessity and convenience for the establishment of new associations or branches; the power to appoint an operating custodian without the necessity of ordering immediate liquidation (procedure such as is permitted in connection with the rehabilitation of a weak bank); a larger appropriation to admit of more frequent examinations; the right to require the publication of statements of condition; closer supervision of agents; the fixing of effective penalties for violation of code sections and the orders of the commissioner.

DIVISION OF CORPORATIONS.

Corporation Financing.

Corporate financing in all of its phases has passed through, within the past eighteen months, a most critical period. The stock market crash of October and November, 1929, had the result of making the distribution of corporate securities extremely difficult, if not discouraging. Many enterprises were on the threshold of their expansion, but, with the losses occasioned to investors in securities at that time and the resultant fear and cautiousness on the part of the investing public, the completion of these expansion programs was rendered impossible until there has been a reestablishment of confidence in the future. The result of the depression caused by the collapse of prices on the stock exchanges has probably been felt more keenly by the Division of Corporations than any other State agency, due to its closeness to corporate financing and the sale and issuance of securities generally. The number of applications for permits authorizing the sale of securities within the State of California has always been considered an accurate barometer of business conditions, and as indicating the pulse of the investing public in their attitude toward securities generally.

Returning Confidence Shown in New Financing.

That a return of confidence on the part of the public is gradually growing is indicated by the fact that both the number of applications and the aggregate par or face value of securities represented by such applications are approximately equal to the number of applications and aggregate par value of securities that were represented thereby that were filed with the division during the few months next preceding the stock market debacle. During the four months next preceding the October crash there was filed in the three offices of the division an average of 626 applications per month and during the same period the average monthly receipts from such applications were $38,263, whereas, during the four months of this year from June 1st to September 30th, both inclusive, there was filed in the three offices of the division an average of 667 applications per month and the receipts of the division averaged $36,236.

More Applications But for Smaller Amounts.

The filing fees received by the division are based upon the amount of stock for which a permit is applied. The comparison of the average number of applications filed, together with the average receipts during the two four-months periods mentioned, indicates that there are slightly more applications now being filed than were being filed just prior to the stock market slump of 1929, but the applications request an authorization for a smaller average amount of stock per application than previously, as indicated by the smaller amount of fees collected. This indicates cautiousness on the part of the applicants, but the number of applications filed indicates a healthy condition and a tone of confidence in the possibilities of corporations in carrying on their plans of financing through public subscription.

IMPROVEMENTS IN SERVICE.

Improvements in Division Procedure.

Many important improvements have been inaugurated within the division. These improvements have been made with the view of cutting down the elapsed time required between the filing of an application and the issuance of a permit thereunder, but without lessening in any respect the scrutiny where public subscription to the securities authorized is contemplated. One of the first and most important improvements put into effect was the printing and distribution of Rules of Practice for the guidance of those having business with the division. These rules are complete and cover the policies in all the bureaus of the division and clearly set forth the theories and reasons underlying its activities.

Results of These Improvements.

Red tape has been reduced to a minimum with the result that permits authorizing the sale of securities now reach the applicants within an average of 3.82 days after the application is filed against 7.32 days in the month of May, 1929, when the new methods were inaugurated, and several times that number of days only a few years ago. This reduction in the elapsed time has been accomplished without adding any additional personnel, and without lessening any material investigation as to the merits of each application. It has, however, been accomplished through modern methods being substituted for the antiquated methods of handling the business prior to that time. These improvements have resulted in much public commendation and favorable criticism. Another matter which will undoubtedly help in the work of the division is the publication of a manual for the use of the deputies and other personnel. It is complete within itself and covers all of the functions of the commissioner and the division, citing the various laws granting him authority.

Supervision of Books and Records of New Permittees.

There has also been established, within the bureau of analyses, the policy of having qualified auditors make periodic examinations of the books and affairs of new permittees, in order that it may be determined whether or not they are setting up their records in proper shape, and to discover whether the permits are being strictly complied with and the money realized from the sale of securities expended in accordance with the statements contained in the applications. This work is being done on the theory that many corporations make mistakes in interpreting the terms of the permit, which, if brought to their attention, are easily corrected. Thereby, violations of the Corporate Securities Act, with the resultant question as to the validity of securities issued by such corporations, are avoided.

Bureau of Complaints and Investigations.

There has been inaugurated within the division a Bureau of Complaints and Investigations; and the policy has been established where, from the facts presented, the commissioner is without jurisdiction to act but if it is clear that a crime has been committed, the commissioner will certify to the prosecuting officer of the county where the crime was committed a concise statement of facts, setting forth the nature of the alleged crime, together with names and addresses of witnesses. The establishment of this practice has resulted in a clearer understanding of the prosecuting attorneys with reference to the Corporate Securities Act, and in speeding up the bringing to justice of those offenders.

DIVISION OF INSURANCE.

Increased Responsibilities.

The activities and responsibilities of the Insurance Division have been materially increased during the past two years, largely through the enactment of certain legislation at the 1929 session of the Legislature and through an increase in the number of insurance companies licensed to transact business in this State, which latter of necessity carries with it a large increase in the number of agents licensed by the division, and a corresponding responsibility in its examination branch.

During the past two years, 56 new companies have been admitted to the State, while only seven have withdrawn.

Commissioner's Increased Jurisdiction.

Among the insurance acts of the last legislative session was a law similar in its provisions to the Corporate Securities Act, under the terms of which all permits for the sale of stock or other securities by insurance companies must be secured from the Insurance Commissioner rather than from the Corporation Commissioner, as heretofore. Under the old method of supervising the sale of these securities, the Corporation Commissioner was permitted by the law governing his activities to issue a permit for such sale only to companies in process of organization, and once the company secured a certificate of authority to transact an insurance business, the jurisdiction of the Corporation Commissioner ceased. No provision existed for the supervision of subsequent stock sales by such company. The Insurance Commissioner now has jurisdiction over such sales at all times. While it is possible that this law may require amendment from time to time, the only outstanding requirement at this time is to broaden the bill so that it will cover not only companies organized for the transaction of an insurance business in this State, but also include insurance companies of other states desiring to sell securities in California.

Restriction on Mutual Benefit Associations.

There was also enacted at last session an amended statute pertaining to the operations of mutual benefit and life associations. During the past four or five years a large number of applications from various persons desiring to organize so-called mutual benefit associations have been received. I say "so-called" because in many instances they were not truly "mutual benefit" associations but rather strictly commercial organizations to be operated in the interests of the organizers. Under the present law more complete supervision is provided, thereby protecting the interests of the general public to a greater extent, although it is doubtful whether this is yet being accomplished in adequate measure. The division is giving the matter further study.

Regulation of Automobile Service Clubs.

Many automobile associations or service clubs having been organized in California in recent years, a considerable percentage of which were operated by more or less unreliable and in many cases unscrupulous persons, who represented them to the general public as insurance companies, a bill bringing such clubs or associations under the jurisdiction of the Insurance Commissioner was enacted, with the result that the citizens of this State have been saved large sums of money which would otherwise have been lost. It is needless to say that this bill was bitterly fought because of its apparent stringent requirements. Reliable organizations only can meet such requirements.

Checking Financial Affairs of Companies.

Careful check of the financial stability of the various insurance companies operating under our direct supervision has been maintained in order to safeguard the interests of the general public, particularly because of the conditions that have existed in the stock market in the last twelve months. Investments are being closely watched, and in the case of two companies found to be not in a healthy condition, I am glad to advise that one has already recovered following its reorganization and is now found to be in a stable condition, while the second, although not yet having completed its rehabilitation, is in such condition as to indicate that there will be no loss to policyholders. From the present outlook it would appear that this company also will be successfully reorganized and put on a sound basis. One other company found not to be in the best financial condition has reinsured all its outstanding liabilities and is being liquidated.

Handling Complaints.

While the division lacks judicial power, it has been very successful in the handling of many hundreds of complaints pertaining to settlement of claims or disputes between insurance companies, agents or brokers and the insuring public. Through these efforts many thousands of dollars have been collected and turned over to the assured, many of whom would have been compelled to sacrifice their claims because of a lack of funds with which to appeal to the courts.

DIVISION OF REAL ESTATE.

General Progress.

During the past three years the Real Estate Division has collected and tabulated authentic data regarding soil conditions, water availability and California crop conditions in connection with agricultural land subdivisions. Agents of the division have visited, inspected, and written up public reports on about 200 projects, some of many thousand acres, totaling hundreds of thousands of acres in this and other states. They have effectively stopped the sale of sixteen questionable agricultural subdivisions and persuaded the promoters of scores of others to change their setup in some vital particular. The sale of large tracts in the Colorado River watershed hundreds of feet above possible reach from any canal, which were offered as irrigable lands at from $10 to $100 per acre, has been prevented.

Importance of Strict Supervision.

Watchfulness over these land projects is essential to the protection of the real estate business and the people of the State of California. By tabulation of listed acreage and prices we know that during the past three years the division's reports and enjoining orders have saved the people of this and other states at least thirty million dollars. During the past three and one-half years we have, as a result of 7695 conferences between agents and their accusers, brought about restoration of cash and real property to people from whom they were wrongfully taken, to the total value of $6,492,269.95. The total expenditures to effect these results were $642,702.24.

Decrease in Number of Licenses.

Due to the fact that there are about 15,000 fewer persons licensed this year than last, and a cut of 50 per cent in the broker renewal fee became effective in the fall of 1927, a drastic and still continuing reduction in the personnel of the division was made necessary despite additional work imposed upon the division by the amendments to the act, effective in the fall of 1929.

Examinations.

It is now necessary for an applicant for a license to demonstrate his educational qualifications by successfully passing a written examination. Specimen questions were published, in order to give the licensees and applicants for licenses an idea of the type of questions that would be asked in the examination. The deputies of the division also appeared before various groups and explained in detail the workings of the Real Estate Act.

Many Complaints Received.

Depressed business conditions are responsible for an unusually large number of inquiries and complaints. A careful analysis shows that only about 50 per cent of them are found to have merit; but during the first eight months of this year, 1385 agents were called before the department by aggrieved customers and clients, and at informal conferences satisfactory adjustments were made in many cases. One hundred sixty-four agents were called to formal trial during the same period, and 45 were found guilty and were deprived of their licenses.

PUBLIC UTILITIES REGULATION.

The Railroad Commission, into whose hands the State constitution commits the regulation of public utilities, must of necessity be considered apart from the five agencies included under the Department of Investment. The four years comprising the last two bienniums have been distinctly a period of transition in the public utility field, during which there has been a series of large mergers of gas, electric, water, and automotive utilities. During this period, also, there passed out of the jurisdiction of the Railroad Commission the large water systems serving San Francisco and the East Bay cities, through their assumption of municipal ownership.

Scope of Public Utility Operation.

For the year ending December 31, 1929, there were 1636 public utility and transportation companies filing reports with the Railroad Commission. Their operating revenue during the four-year period of the present administration has grown very materially from year to year, as is indicated by the following approximate figures: For 1926, $543,091,000; for 1927, $591,988,000; for 1928, $599,411,000, and for 1929, $621,636,000. For the year ending June 30, 1929, and for the year ending June 30, 1930, the Railroad Commission passed on applications for permission to issue securities involving the following amounts:

	Year ending June 30, 1929	Year ending June 30, 1930
Securities authorized -----	$122,665,101 23	$267,717,330 17
Securities denied -----	2,785,909 61	1,222,900 00
Securities dismissed -----	1,240,100 00	47,031,669 27
Totals -----	$126,691,110 84	$315,971,899 44

Conservative Policy on Financing.

During the last two years, the commission has adhered to the policy which has for its end the conservative financing of public utility properties. In the refinancing of such properties incident to their transfer, the commission has held to the position that the amount of securities which the purchaser may be permitted to issue should not exceed the actual or estimated historical cost of the properties including land at present market value, less accrued depreciation.

FIXING OF PUBLIC UTILITY RATES.

Interim Rates.

The Railroad Commission adopted a new policy in the fixing of public utility rates during the last biennium, which resulted in immediate benefits to the general public on a large scale, by establishing reduced interim rates for both gas and electricity. These rates are to prevail during the continuance of major rate proceedings that show indications of being drawn out unduly, pending the fixing of a complete rate basis upon which so-called permanent rates may be established. In the field of gas distribution, the service has been transformed from artificial to natural gas, so that approximately 95 per cent of the consumers are now enjoying the advantages of the more efficient fuel without being required to pay commensurate increases in rate.

Ceiling Rule.

Another important policy has been declared by the commission, which resulted in substantial savings to telephone users by the promulgation of the so-called "ceiling rule." In brief this rule is as follows: "That a company having a farflung business in the State, which is on a reasonable and normal earning basis as a whole, may not pick out one section where its earnings are subnormal, and obtain a rate increase there without expecting a decrease somewhere else, so that its overall State earnings will not be augmented." Application of this rule resulted in offsetting necessary increase of rates of approximately $2,100,000 a year to the Bell System in northern California, by a contemporaneous reduction of $2,300,000 for the Bell Company operating in the Los Angeles area.

Transportation Industry Changes.

Aside from the changes made by the commission, the utilities, particularly the railroads, have made many radical downward revisions in their rates during the last two bienniums, which changed the aspect of the transportation business somewhat. Some of these were brought about by the increasing use of the automotive carrier, a type of transportation made possible by the widespread development of our highways. Others were due to the development and growth of our resources.

Benefits of Regulation.

Benefits of regulation from the standpoint of the public utility patrons reached record figures during the last two bienniums. Reductions in rates during that time totaled more than $20,000,000, as against increases of approximately $3,500,000, each of the figures representing the decrease or increase per annum. The denial of requested increases aggregated more than $3,700,000. A number of large decreases in rates were made voluntarily by utilities, rendering rate proceedings unnecessary. Compared with the cost of maintaining the commission, which is about $500,000 a year, regulation has produced measurable results to the users of utility service.

OTHER COMMISSION ACTIVITIES.

Natural Gas Conservation.

The Engineering Department of the Railroad Commission, through its chief gas and electric engineer, has made an intensive study of the subject of natural gas production, utilization and wastage. A report was prepared by the Gas and Electric Engineer in 1928, calling attention to the tremendous wastage of this precious natural resource in the production of petroleum in California. The commission's engineers have cooperated actively in furthering the State conservation movement that followed the filing of this report, and, in conjunction with the State Department of Natural Resources, have aided materially in having large amounts of natural gas utilized, or reinjected into the ground for storage and repressuring.

Distribution of Water Supplies.

The last three years have been marked by an acute period of subnormal rainfall. This has imposed a difficult task upon the Hydraulic Division in devising measures to provide an equitable distribution of the available water supplies among consumers of the major irrigation systems and many small domestic systems. These efforts were successful in preventing heavy losses to agriculturists through shortage of water. The division was largely helpful in perfecting a flow schedule for the utilization of the waters of the San Joaquin River by consumers on the largest irrigation systems in the San Joaquin Valley. This involved a working agreement between the power companies operating generating plants and storage reservoirs along the river, the largest riparian land owners, Miller & Lux, Inc., and the public utility irrigation systems. A flow schedule providing for release of water in accordance with the demands of irrigationists was placed in effect, which resulted in equalizing the flow of the river and extending the irrigating season into the fall months.

Reparation.

Many of the orders of the commission with respect to freight rates have required the carriers to refund excessive charges paid by shippers within the statutory period. The aggregate amount of these reparations is estimated at $1,000,000. One decision rendered by the commission during the present biennium meant a refund of some $250,000. In addition to these intrastate matters the commission has also represented California in proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission involving the deciduous fruit rates from California to eastern points, the construction of new lines of railroad, and the general readjustment of the entire railroad rate structure on grain and grain products, live stock, cotton seed and other essential commodities.

Safety Measures Ordered.

Outstanding among the actions taken in the cause of public safety during the last two biennial periods were the creation of a safety division to prosecute a vigorous campaign for the enforcement of safe operation of passenger transportation lines; the issuance of general orders regulating overhead electric line construction and safe clearances on rail lines, and the elimination of dangerous grade crossings by means of overhead or underpass grade separations or crossing protection. Hundreds of unsafe operating conditions and impaired clearances on other rail lines have also been removed through the enforcement of these orders.

Record of Litigation.

The Railroad Commission has been a party to 225 court cases involving its jurisdiction or upholding its orders, during the 19 years since it was reorganized in its present form. But 17 of these cases were actually lost. In view of the fact that the commission has issued approximately 23,000 orders during that time, it has been reversed in less than one-tenth of one per cent of its actions.

DEPARTMENT OF MILITARY AND VETERANS' AFFAIRS.

DIRECTOR, ALLEN B. HIXBY.

In my first biennial message I stated that in accordance with the general scheme of reorganization, and in order that all related State agencies may be grouped together and their functions coordinated within a department with representation in the Governor's Council, it seemed desirable that the National Guard, the Veterans' Welfare Board, the Veterans' Home, the Woman's Relief Corps Home, and the State Athletic Commission should constitute independent divisions of a new department. The Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs was therefore created. This departmental organization preserves the autonomy of the above named agencies, but affords opportunity for cooperative solution of mutual problems affecting both service and ex-service men and women.

NATIONAL GUARD.

Strength.

There has been a continuous and healthy improvement in the National Guard of this State during the last two years. The strength has been increased from 5839 to 6455, which is the maximum fixed by War Department appropriations. There are applications on file from over forty cities in the State desiring National Guard companies which can not be accommodated.

Drill and Camp Attendance.

The armory drill attendance has increased from 80.83 per cent to 83.58 per cent during the last two years, and over 90 per cent of the men attended camp during 1930. The reports of the War Department based on the annual armory and field training inspections indicate that a great improvement has been made in training. Programs and schedules are being more closely followed, and generally speaking, the National Guard of this State may be said to be in splendid condition. It is rated by the War Department as one of the best national guards in the United States. This fact is recognized by many other states which are following with success the methods initiated by California.

Care and Accountability of Property.

Care and accountability of property has improved to such an extent that our accounts now balance with those of the federal government, and practically no shortages exist among the organizations. The total amount of federal property on hand is valued in excess of $4,500,000.

Cost.

Federal aid to the amount of $871,288 was extended to this State during the last fiscal year, or $149.22 per guardsman. The State provided funds to the extent of $51.50 per guardsman, making a total annual cost of $200.72 for every officer and enlisted man. These figures do not include money allotted for permanent improvements.

New Training Camp at San Luis Obispo.

This State has purchased 2789 acres of land in San Luis Obispo County for a permanent camp site at a cost of $161,000, and the federal government has expended $300,000 for the construction of camp facilities. The camp now has accommodations for one brigade of infantry, and all of the special units of the 40th Division. War Department plans contemplate a sufficient increase in these facilities to take care of double this number of troops. The National Forest Service has turned over approximately 3000 acres of its land for our use, which gives a total reservation and acreage of 5789 acres. The San Luis Obispo Camp has been declared by the chief of the Militia Bureau at Washington, D. C., and other experienced army officers to be the best training area in the United States. Experience with the three camps held there so far has proven it eminently satisfactory, and it has passed the expectations of its most ardent supporters.

Other Purchases Necessary.

Before the camp can be declared entirely complete it will be necessary to purchase two pieces of land lying between the camp site proper and the national forest land and other land recently purchased by the State. The water rights on a creek which are very vital to the future success of the camp also belong to the land which we do not yet possess. The items for the purchase of these two remaining plots of ground have been included in the budget recently submitted. After completing the acquisition of necessary properties for the San Luis Obispo Camp it will be necessary to secure a smaller camp on the coast for the coast artillery and anti-aircraft troops of the State. Recommendation for the purchase of such a site will be made in the future.

ARMORIES.

Improvements.

Considerable improvements have been made in the four State-owned armories during this biennium. The sum of $48,000 has been spent on building stables and an addition to the armory at Stockton, and general repairs have been made to the armories at Sacramento, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The armory at Long Beach which was authorized by the last Legislature was completed recently.

Building Program for Armories.

The ten-year building program, if followed, will be of inestimable benefit to the National Guard. Heretofore the National Guard relied on securing appropriations from the Legislature for the construction of armories, and each time an effort would be made by any particular town to secure an armory, other cities or towns would make similar efforts, with the result that the National Guard secured nothing, and at the close of its eighty years of existence was occupying only four State-owned or suitable armories. Most of the armories, with the exception of the four mentioned, are rented or leased and are generally unsatisfactory. The fact that the National Guard has reached its present high state of efficiency speaks well for the loyalty and devotion of the commanding officers who have worked under such a handicap.

Rifle and Pistol Ranges.

A large number of rifle and pistol ranges have been constructed, and practically all of the units now have access to ranges. These ranges are made available to civilian rifle clubs, R. O. T. C. and other components of the army when not being used by the National Guard. A National Guard rifle team representing this State was sent to Camp Perry, Ohio, to take part in the 1929 and 1930 rifle matches.

High School Cadet Corps.

The California High School Cadet Corps, which is supplemental to the R. O. T. C. in the high schools and is placed in schools that can not secure the R. O. T. C. units, has shown a great improvement. The cadets of the Fresno Technical High School were adjudged the most proficient for the school year 1928-30 and were awarded a set of colors. The Sacramento High School was awarded a plaque for having the most proficient cadet corps during the year 1928-1929, as determined by a regular army officer. The annual rifle and small bore competition which was held at the State Rifle Range, Leona Heights, during May, 1929, was won by the Fresno High School, and the school was awarded the Adjutant General's trophy. The Fresno High School also won the match held during 1930 and was again awarded the Adjutant General's trophy for the high team score.

Historic Flags Preserved.

The war colors of the State dating back to the Civil War have been preserved by a patented method and installed in substantial insect and air-proof cases, and placed on the second floor of the Capitol. They now present one of the finest displays of colors in the United States.

Naval Militia and Marine Corps Reserve.

There is a movement under way to reestablish the Naval Militia and Marine Corps Reserve. Before the war California had such an organization, and it has been reorganized as a federal reserve force instead of a State force. Experience has taught that their efficiency would be very greatly improved if they could reestablish themselves on the same basis as the National Guard, and in view of their former service to the State and nation, it has been earnestly recommended that their reestablishment be approved.

VETERANS' WELFARE BOARD.

Origin.

The California Legislature of 1921 was a far-sighted body, with friendly tendencies toward the veterans who within the preceding 24 months had returned from foreign soil or training in American camps, for it formulated and passed the most constructive and satisfactory legislation for the benefit of the veterans yet conceived in any state of the Union. This legislation, which operates without cost to the taxpayers and without injury to the self-respect or dignity of the veteran, is a masterpiece of economy. As an accomplishment under this legislation thousands of California veterans are now securely housed in their own homes and many thousands of California acres are under cultivation by veterans who heeded the call to the farms.

Veterans' Legislation.

The specific acts comprising this legislation were known as the Veterans' Welfare Act, creating the Veterans' Welfare Board and defining its powers and duties, the Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act and the enabling act, designated as the Veterans' Welfare Bond Act, providing a bond issue of $10,000,000. These were followed four years later by another Veterans' Welfare Act for $20,000,000, and at the general election in November, 1930, by a vote of 835,579 to 265,682, or more than three to one, the voters of California approved a third bond act for $20,000,000, which had been passed by the preceding Legislature.

Provisions of the Act.

The Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act provides a financing plan whereby veterans who were bona fide residents of California at the time they entered the military forces of the United States in time of war, can purchase farms or homes with a small initial payment and moderate installment payments extending over a long period of time, with a low interest rate on the deferred principal. The board is authorized to expend $7,500 for the purchase of a farm or $5,000 for the purchase of a home for each approved veteran applicant. In the case of home purchases the veteran is allowed the privilege of investing in the property a maximum of $2,500 of his own funds.

Organization.

Executive administration, accounting, and classification of applications are functions of the main office of the Veterans' Welfare Board in Sacramento. For the purpose of conducting personal interviews with applicants, appraising property selections and placing tentative property purchasers in escrow with local title insurance companies, the State is divided geographically into three districts.

The Situation of the Veteran Farm Owners.

Since the passage of the Farm and Home Purchase Act in 1921, agriculture in both State and nation has experienced a period of depression. These subnormal years have been very trying for the farmers of California. The great majority of our veteran contract purchasers have, however, despite these conditions, carried on with the same spirit which actuated them in the trying years of the war, and we are proud of the successful record they have made. At the close of the last biennium, June 30, 1930, the Veterans' Welfare Board had purchased 290 farms, costing $1,592,636.80. These farms, representative of nearly every type of California agriculture, are located in 41 counties of our State, and represent an average cost of $5,491.

Veterans' Welfare Bond Act of 1929.

The Veterans' Welfare Bond Act of 1929, providing for the issuance of $20,000,000 in bonds to continue the administration of the Veterans' Farm and Home Purchase Act, was adopted at the last general election by approximately a 76 per cent affirmative vote. The success of the $20,000,000 bond act can be attributed to the wisdom of the veterans of California, who have worked out their own form of relief legislation without cost to the taxpayers, who have for the third time approved the method by granting the use of the State's credit for this purpose. It can also be considered as a vote of confidence for the able manner in which the Veterans' Welfare Board of the State has administered this tremendous fund to the satisfaction of the citizenry as well as of the veterans that this board was created to serve.

Prompt Home Construction.

The work of facilitating the purchase of farms and homes for qualified and eligible California veterans has, as a result of the success of this bond act, been vigorously begun, and the purchase of over 4000 additional farms and homes will ensue. This means that a great impetus will be given to the building prosperity program beginning with the new year of 1931, which will furnish employment to hundreds of California workmen, thereby alleviating to an appreciable extent the unemployment situation which has been in existence, particularly among the building trades.

VETERANS' HOME OF CALIFORNIA.

Membership.

On January 1, 1929, the total enrolled membership of the Veterans' Home was 1352. On January 1, 1930, this membership had increased to 1543, an increase of about 15 per cent, and is at the present time in excess of this figure. The number of veterans actually present and cared for has increased from 839 in January, 1929, to 976 in January, 1930, an increase of over 16 per cent. The Civil War veterans are rapidly diminishing, the Spanish War veteran membership is constantly increasing, and many World War veterans are now applying for admission. The number of sick has increased from 145 in January, 1929, to 185, an increase of 28 per cent, which indicates that the proportion of veteran members subject to hospital treatment is rapidly increasing, thus calling for more hospital accommodations.

Building Program.

At the beginning of the present State administration a tentative ten-year building program for this home was formulated, the purpose of which was completely to replace the old and dilapidated frame buildings with modern fireproof structures, furnishing living quarters of the latest approved style, equipped with sanitary plumbing, heating, lighting and ventilating, so necessary wherever large numbers of human beings are housed.

The Buildings Proposed.

The main items in this building program are eight large, two-story, reinforced concrete, tile-roofed barracks buildings, with a capacity of about 200 beds each; a new mess hall, large enough to handle the daily feeding of 1600 men; a new administration building to house all offices under one roof; a patriotic hall for the use of the many patriotic organizations at the home; a guard house; a theater and library; a recreation hall, and various minor buildings, such as quarters for officers and employees. Of this ten-year building program, three barracks buildings, furnishing up-to-date quarters for 634 men, a new guard house and a number of single and duplex cottages for married employees have already been completed. These new barracks buildings have at last practically eliminated the fire hazard which for many years was a menace to the home. With their completion the third and fourth story attic rooms in the old buildings were padlocked, so that now no room is used above the second floor.

Hospital.

The only change that should be made in the ten-year building program is perhaps an earlier construction and equipment of a new hospital. The sum of $260,000 is provided for a new hospital group. At first it was thought that remodeling or enlarging the present hospital might serve the needs of the home for some years to come. However, a careful and extensive survey clearly indicates that the present hospital has outlived its usefulness, is antiquated, unsanitary, badly located and has poor drainage. It is, therefore, urgently recommended that provision be made by the next Legislature for an amount sufficient to erect and equip a new fireproof hospital, located at a higher elevation at the southeast end of the reservation, where the buildings would have more air, better light, plenty of sunshine, excellent drainage, and be entirely removed from the ranch operations, which are now in the rear of the old hospital.

Discipline.

The home has suffered for years from the traffic in narcotics and the pernicious activities of bootleggers. Under the present administration this condition has been very largely corrected. There is no more traffic in narcotics within the reservation, and the operations of bootleggers have been practically suppressed through the excellent discipline maintained by the commandant, his officers and the members of the police guard.

Survey of Potential Vocational Rehabilitation Activities.

At the request of the director of the department, the directors and the executive staff of the home, Mr. Vierling Kersey, Superintendent of Public Instruction, recently instituted a survey of potential occupational rehabilitation activities at the home. The purpose of this survey was to ascertain the need for vocational activity for members of the Veterans' Home and if such a need were found to exist what form the activity should take. Although no organized program of training or occupational activity has ever been established at the home, the directors and executive staff are unanimous in the belief that such an activity should be undertaken and would undoubtedly be of great benefit to members.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS HOME.

Purpose of Home.

Near Santa Clara, California, is the Woman's Relief Corps Home of California. It is an institution in large measure supported by the State, but with some contributions from various individual units of the Woman's Relief Corps of California, for the maintenance and care of widows, unmarried daughters, and dependent sisters of veterans of the Civil War. The population of the home varies but little, and is generally about 50, that being its extreme capacity.

Origin and Management.

The home was originally built from private funds secured by the Woman's Relief Corps, Department of California, with some assistance from the posts of the Grand Army of the Republic. It was established at Evergreen, Santa Clara County, and was changed to its present location following a fire which destroyed the buildings at Evergreen. The property at Evergreen was sold and the present property near Santa Clara purchased, the State contributing toward the purchasing price. The control is vested in a board of directors, consisting of seven women, all of whom are members of the Woman's Relief Corps, Department of California.

Future of the Home.

There is an ever-increasing demand for the care of women veterans composed of nurses and yeomanettes who have served in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps of the United States in time of war and for the care of indigent women dependents of all war veterans. If the scope of this home is to be enlarged to care for these deserving women it will be necessary to entirely reconstruct the institution. The facilities are now entirely inadequate for the purpose of an enlarged institution, and a well-planned building program similar to the plan adopted for the reconstruction of the Veterans' Home in the Napa Valley should be adopted.

STATE ATHLETIC COMMISSION.

Origin.

At the general election held November 4, 1924, there was passed "An act to authorize boxing and wrestling matches in the State of California," and under the provisions of this act the State Athletic Commission functions when such contests are held. The original act was passed by a majority of only 20,214 votes, but at the election November 6, 1928, an initiative measure to repeal the boxing law was defeated by a majority of 393,383 votes.

Organization.

The law provides for the appointment by the Governor of three commissioners, who, acting as a body, shall regulate boxing and wrestling matches. The commission is authorized to employ a secretary and such official representatives, designated as inspectors, as shall be found necessary. The main office of the commission is maintained in Sacramento, with branch offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles. A chief inspector is placed in charge of each branch office and supervises the inspectors in each district. All original records are kept in the main office.

Commission Self-supporting.

The law provides that 5 per cent of the gross receipts of all professional boxing or wrestling contests, except those conducted by veterans' organizations, shall be paid to the Athletic Commission, and that from such funds $10,000 per year shall be allowed to the commission for operating expenses. The balance of the receipts from the 5 per cent taxes and license fees are credited to the State Athletic Commission's funds to be used for the construction of new buildings at the Veterans' Home.

Taxes and License Fees.

During the fifth fiscal year of its existence, December 1, 1928, to November 30, 1929, the commission received from the 5 per cent tax and license fees the sum of $148,245.13. In the period from December 1, 1929, to October 15, 1930, the receipts from the same source amounted to $137,374.89.

Investigation of Boxing Situation.

Although much of the Athletic Commission's activities are not directly connected with veterans' affairs, the fact that the funds derived through this commission were applied to the erection of new barracks and other buildings at the Veterans' Home made its inclusion in the Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs most natural and desirable. Accordingly, when some months ago there was evidenced a general dissatisfaction with boxing conditions in California, I commissioned the director of this department to select a board of inquiry, and with them to make a thorough investigation of these conditions. It is evident that this sport can not survive unless those who are interested in it believe that it is "on the square"; and the report which will follow the painstaking investigation of the director and his colleagues will be awaited with a great deal of interest.

DEPARTMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES.

DIRECTOR, FRED G. STEVENOT.

The Department of Natural Resources has to do with the elemental resources of the State. The purpose of the department is primarily one of conservation. Interested as it is in the development of enterprises dependent upon the State's natural wealth, the greatest service this department can render to the people of California is such as will preserve to industry those things on which our State's industrial structure is builded. The guarding against waste of our mineral wealth, particularly the State's oil and gas resources, the protection of forests and watershed cover and preservation of our recreational areas, combined with the protecting and propagating of the State's wild life and the dissemination of information and knowledge of general interest concerning these resources, represent the most important activities carried on by this department through its five divisions, which are as follows: Division of Fish and Game, Division of Forestry, Division of Mines, Division of Parks, and Division of Petroleum and Gas.

DIVISION OF FISH AND GAME.

Duties.

The Division of Fish and Game is charged with the enforcement of fish and game laws; the operation of fish hatcheries and the proper stocking of our waters; the operation of game farms and the distribution of game birds from the farms; the purchase and management of game refuges; the supervision of our important commercial fisheries, and the scientific investigation of all problems pertaining to the conservation, propagation and perpetuation of our fish and game. The policies of this important State activity are promulgated by the Fish and Game Commission, and during the past biennium this body has established an enviable record in the protection of the wild life of California.

Self-supporting.

The work of the division is carried on entirely from the revenues derived from the sale of fishing, hunting and trapping licenses; revenue from the commercial fishing industry; and fines imposed by courts for the violation of fish and game laws. No appropriations are made from other State funds to support the work of this division.

Commercial Fisheries.

In 1929 the commercial catch of fish in California exceeded that of any other state, amounting to 850,000,000 pounds. The division placed in commission a new 86-foot patrol boat during the past year to assist in this industry. The Bureau of Commercial Fisheries also maintains a well equipped laboratory for scientific investigation, and for the collection and dissemination of statistics. The organization of this bureau has served as a model for many other states.

Game Birds and Fish.

During the biennium nearly 80,000,000 trout and salmon have been hatched and planted by the Bureau of Fish Culture. During the same period 15,000 pheasants were reared and planted and 6000 eggs distributed for hatching. Hungarian partridges, wild turkeys and other game birds were also reared and distributed. Striped bass have been planted in Salton Sea, and important work has been done in the rescue and transplanting of spiny rayed fishes by the Bureau of Fish Rescue. A 3000-acre game refuge for migratory waterfowl has been purchased and developed, with the help of the Game Refuge and Public Shooting Grounds Committee, and the preliminary work necessary to secure other areas has been completed. Deer have become more abundant as the result of the protection given these animals by restrictive legislation and by the creation of game sanctuaries.

Work Organized.

The work of the division is well organized into bureaus, that of patrol being the largest of the group, having 120 regular deputies in the field, and the assistance of 800 volunteers. Other important work is carried on by the bureaus of Education and Research, Hydraulics, and Licenses. The division maintains an annual exhibit at the State Fair, depicting in an interesting and colorful manner some of the attractive features of California's outdoor life.

Much Help Received.

The division is especially fortunate in having available the facilities and personnel of the University of California, the Hooper Foundation for Medical Research, Leland Stanford Junior University, the Hopkins Marine Station, the State Board of Health, the Federal Bureau of Fisheries, and other State and federal agencies. The division contributes to and shares in the benefits of these institutions.

DIVISION OF FORESTRY.

Forestry Policy.

An effective forestry policy is essential to the general welfare of California. To this end the State Board of Forestry, through the Division of Forestry, has expanded all branches of this service, resulting in a highly developed fire prevention organization, which has contributed largely to the successful results attained in fire suppression work during the past fire season. The continued expansion of this important service should go hand in hand with the growth and development of the State, particularly in view of the increasing prominence given to our State water conservation program, recreational needs, and the value of our timber resources.

Fire Protection Progress.

During the present biennium the field force of the State Division of Forestry has increased nearly fourfold, due to the interest in forest protection taken by the State and federal governments as well as county and private agencies. Fire fighting facilities have been greatly increased through the construction of nine fire fighting trucks, by means of which many fires have been checked which otherwise would have burned over vast areas of timber and watershed. Increased detection has been made possible through the erection of four additional lookouts, and better communication has been afforded through the construction of telephone lines leading directly to the rangers' headquarters. Suitable offices have been provided for most of the inspectors and rangers, and their supplies of fire fighting equipment have been greatly augmented.

Hazard Reduction.

The reduction of fire hazards along State highways by the State Division of Highways in cooperation with the State forest rangers, has resulted in the elimination of most of the roadside fires. In this connection the Division of Motor Vehicles has been especially helpful in the enforcement of the State law as regards the throwing of burning tobacco from motor vehicles. Much remains to be done, however, in reducing the fire hazards along county roads. State rangers have been active in several counties in burning strips along such roads and in encouraging ranchers to plow fire guards inside their fences. The burning of slashings resulting from logging and cordwood operations has become a fixed policy, and State rangers accomplish much in the way of hazard reduction at a time when weather conditions make it possible to keep the fire under control.

Firebreaks.

The firebreak systems on the watersheds of southern California towards which the State has been contributing for a number of years, have been materially extended and improved during the past two years. In northern California extensive firebreaks were constructed last winter in Mendocino, Sonoma and Marin counties. This work marks the beginning of systematic firebreak construction in the northern part of the State. It is planned to continue it until all of the timber and watershed area outside the national forests are gridironed with firebreaks. When this is done the problem of fire control will be much simplified, due to the added accessibility to fire fighters.

Fire Prevention Education.

During 1930, in cooperation with the Extension Service of the University of California, 125 fire prevention demonstrations were given throughout the State. These demonstrations have led to a decided increase in rural fire protection since they stimulated the purchase of fire fighting trucks, such as are used by the State, by various small towns and communities. Education in fire prevention has made rapid strides in recent years, inasmuch as many organizations are cooperating with the State and federal foresters in causing the people to become "fire-conscious."

Acquirement of Delinquent Timber Lands.

The last Legislature passed an act whereby the State can acquire by purchase areas of cut-over timber lands the taxes of which have become delinquent. Steps are now being taken to acquire areas of this kind for State forests.

Season's Fire Record.

The gradual building up of the protection force and the use of motorized equipment are having a decided effect in cutting down fire losses. The fire season of 1930 was one of the best the State has ever experienced, due in part to favorable weather conditions, but largely to the effective fire organization supported by the State.

DIVISION OF MINES.

State Mining Board.

By legislative enactment in 1929, the name of this division was made the "Division of Mines"; and a "State Mining Board" was created, consisting of five members appointed by the Governor, to determine "general policies for the guidance of the division."

General Duties.

The division, aside from its general routine work, has through the years been helpful to the mining industry and particularly to prospectors, small operators, and mine owners not possessing the necessary facilities to cope with their many problems.

Mineral Production.

Mining represents a large portion of the State's productive wealth. Compilation of the final returns from the mineral producers of California for 1929 shows the total value of the year to have been in excess of $432,000,000, being an increase of approximately $100,000,000 over the year 1928. Although the greater portion of this impressive total is made up of petroleum and natural gas, yet the value of the metallic and nonmetallic minerals is in excess of $81,000,000 and equal to the maximum record made by California during the days of '49, when her mineral production astonished the civilized world.

Aid to Mining.

The division's fine mineral collections, reference library and facilities offered contribute in no small manner to the advancement of general mining knowledge, and represent the public interest in this highly important basic industry.

Geological and Economic Survey.

The 1929 budget of the Division of Mines contains a special item of $20,000, to provide for the renewal of the geological survey of California. This work is being planned on an estimated ten-year program. The sum, although small, has permitted cataloguing and coordinating of the geological work thus far done by the State, United States Geological Survey, universities, railroad and oil companies, and prepares the way for the expansion of the program for carrying on necessary field work in areas of the State not yet studied and upon which reports have not been made. A bibliography of California's geology has been prepared, listing all public reports and papers.

County Mineral Survey.

The developmental activities of the division have included surveys and reports on the mineral resources of the following counties during the present biennium: Butte, Tehama, Madera, Plumas, Kern, Lassen, Modoc, Napa, San Mateo, Sierra, Colusa, Fresno, Lake, Glenn, Alameda, Mendocino, Riverside, Santa Clara, and Nevada. Special reports have also been made on such commercial, nonmetallic minerals as barite and mineral paint pigments.

Recommendations.

Special attention should be given during the coming biennium to the State-wide survey of the State's resources in the commercial and nonmetallic minerals, as there are constant requests for data and information as to these economic resources. The geological survey of California should have increased attention and support. This survey is of basic importance, and its early completion will facilitate the progress of mining and contribute to the wealth and prosperity of the State.

DIVISION OF PARKS.

State Parks.

The administration of California's State park system has been carried on in a highly satisfactory manner. Improvements have been made in those things contributing to the convenience and comfort of the visiting public. The State Park Commission, through the Division of Parks, has made the protection and preservation of these parks in a state of nature its prime objective.

Park Expansion Program.

In order to provide for a State park system which will include representative types of those things peculiar to California, the State park program inaugurated under this administration shows definite and satisfactory results. The preliminary period involving examination of various proposed park sites and their appraisal is now well advanced. The comparatively near future should bring about the acquisition of many of the most desirable areas.

Study and Acquisition.

The State Park Commission is studying with great care areas such as the Bull Creek Flat and Dyerville groves of redwoods, Point Lobos, the historic Calaveras Big Tree Grove, Castle Crags, Mount Diablo, Fremont Peak, and most of the available beach area in southern California. The commission has decided to acquire the Silver Strand Beach south of Coronado; the Borego Valley desert area (including interesting growths of cactus, and canyons in which are found the native Washington palm); the Palomar Mountain, all in San Diego County. The San Jacinto Mountain and Painted Canyon areas in Riverside County have also been approved. Favorable action has been taken on the purchase of extensive beach frontages in Los Angeles and Ventura counties, and beaches in Orange and Santa Barbara counties are being studied carefully.

Redwood Parks Acquired.

Progress has been made along the Redwood Highway, where, in addition to the areas previously acquired, the Del Norte Coast Park has been established in Del Norte County, extending for some ten miles along the Redwood Highway on both sides of the Graves Grove. The Patrick's Point area, which is a close rival to Point Lobos and which is situated a short distance north of Eureka, has also been acquired; and options have been obtained on portions of the picturesque lagoon region extending for ten miles north of Patrick's Point along the coast and including some of the finest beaches in northern California. An area on the slopes of Mount Tamalpais has been condemned and added to the Steep Ravine area generously donated to the State by the late William Kent. This is now being enlarged.

Care in Expenditures.

The commission is using extraordinary care in every step that it takes in its endeavor to secure the best possible results for the State in the expenditure of park bond money. According to the act providing for the State park bond issue, every dollar spent by the State must be matched by a dollar from other sources. This naturally has a tendency to render progress in securing new park areas appear somewhat slow, but on the whole the situation is most encouraging.

DIVISION OF PETROLEUM AND GAS.

Duties.

The work of this division in the past has been largely of such a nature as to guard against damage to the underground oil-bearing sands by the infiltration of water, and to gather, maintain and preserve records and matters of general interest concerning the oil and gas resources of California. The work is of a highly technical nature and requires men specially trained and equipped to successfully discharge the duties and obligations of this service.

Natural Gas.

The welfare of the large and extremely important oil and gas industry of the State is dependent upon the manner in which the division functions, particularly in view of the growing importance of natural gas. The value of this commodity in relation to crude oil exploitation has been recognized for a considerable time by those engaged in the business of producing oil. Domestic service and general industry have also been attracted to this important source of heat and power, it being recognized as the best fuel known to mankind and subject to a wide variety of uses.

Oil and Gas Production Problems.

California, along with other important oil producing states, is burdened at the present time by excessive oil production, far exceeding the present market requirements. To correct this condition the oil industry has endeavored, through proration agreements, to bring production and markets into balance. Along with this excessive oil production program is to be found the regrettable wastage of natural gas. This situation has had the attention of the Department of Natural Resources during the past two years.

Legislation.

The Legislature of 1929, through the enactment of chapter 535 of the Statutes of 1929, amended "An act to protect the natural resources of petroleum and gas from waste and destruction," and provided for enforcing the same, first adopted as chapter 718 of the Statutes of 1915. Under the emergency provisions of the constitution, the act provided that the amendments should go into effect immediately upon being signed by the Governor, and it was so signed on May 28, 1929.

Progress Made in Eliminating Waste.

Following this the Director of the Department of Natural Resources and the State Oil and Gas Supervisor addressed all operators of oil and gas wells in the State of California, advising them that the act had been signed and expressing the hope that their cooperation would continue to be given as theretofore in eliminating all unnecessary waste of natural gas. This was followed under date of August 21, 1929, with a notice from the department advising the operators that it was its duty to apply to the courts for an injunction against the blowing of natural gas into the air whenever such a situation is found to exist without a showing of necessity.

Court Actions.

As the quantity of gas blown into the air continued, complaints were filed in the superior courts of several counties. These actions, involving several questions, including the constitutionality of the Gas Act, finally reached the District Court of Appeal and State Supreme Court, where they were decided in favor of the State. As a result of these decisions, the State's gas conservation program in the oil fields of California will be considerably advanced. Thoughtful attention should continue to be given to this important piece of work, to the end that such enormous waste under any guise may no longer be permitted in this State.

Necessity of Conservation.

Our mineral resources are fixed as to their quantity; therefore to dissipate or impose unnecessary drafts upon them will simply result in penalizing general industry and our people in the future, whereas an appreciation of the value of our prodigious good fortune in the nature of abundant natural resources properly conserved will assure orderly progress in the development of the State.

Proposed Legislation.

Experience acquired in the past two years in carrying out the intention of the Legislature to provide remedies to correct conditions existing in the oil and gas industry detrimental to the present and future welfare of the State suggests that you give your attention to such changes in the present law as will be submitted to you, in order to assure the early carrying to a successful conclusion the State's oil and gas conservation program.

DEPARTMENT OF PENOLOGY.

DIRECTOR, JAMES A. JOHNSTON.

In my inaugural address four years ago and in my message to the Legislature two years ago, I emphasized the importance of careful study and intelligent consideration of the crime problem. I recommended the coordination of the agencies of criminal investigation, identification, apprehension, prevention and reformation, in an effort to minimize and reduce crime in California. Following these recommendations, legislation was passed creating the Department of Penology.

Divisions of Department.

The important work of this department is the coordination of effort of the several divisions comprising the department for the prevention, or reduction, of crime. Like all other departments represented in the Governor's Council, it is responsible for correlating the activities of the divisions within the department including:

1. Prisons and Paroles, administered by the State Board of Prison Directors, with the chairman of said board as chief of the division.
2. Criminal Identification and Investigation, administered by the superintendent of the bureau as chief of the division.
3. Pardons and Commutations, administered by the chairman of the Advisory Pardon Board as chief of the division.
4. Narcotics Division, responsible for enforcement of laws relating to narcotics, with the head of that department as chief of the division.
5. Division of Women's Institutions, as provided for in chapter 248, establishing an institution for women offenders, to be administered by a board of trustees.
6. Division of Criminology, administered by the chairman of the California Crime Commission.

PRISONS AND PAROLES.

Administration of Our Prisons.

Perhaps no field of human endeavor presents a more difficult problem than the management of prisons and prisoners. Prison directors and prison wardens have placed in their custody and control those who have offended most seriously against the law. The duties confronting them are difficult and their responsibility great. They must control their wards firmly, at the same time humanely, constantly endeavoring to treat them and train them so that they will realize that they can not offend with impunity; employing such facilities and methods as may prevent the first offender from becoming hardened, and weaning all those they can away from crime, so as to prevent repetition of crimes.

Encouraging Prisoners in Self-Improvement.

In the administration of the two prisons, the State prison directors and the wardens have been guided by certain very definite principles. It is their endeavor to discipline those in their charge so that they will respect the law, and train them in such ways that they may leave the prison better than when they entered. Accordingly, particular attention is paid to examining the prisoners when received and following up the examinations with treatments, thus endeavoring to supplant sickness with health, ignorance with education, and indolence with industry.

Population of Our Prisons.

As I prepare this report, the census figures show that 4272 male and 127 female prisoners are in San Quentin, and 2092 male prisoners in Folsom. On the same date, or for the last day of October, 1930, there were 660 prisoners in road camps; 546 of them from San Quentin and 114 from Folsom. These figures tell their own story of what seems to be an ever present problem confronting prison directors and wardens. During the past four years additional housing space has been provided at both prisons, and additional relief will be secured with the completion of cell houses now under construction, together with the building of the new prison for women and the intermediate institution for young offenders.

Parole System a Success.

A policy of caution, firmness and fairness has secured good results in the administration of our parole law, and a high degree of success in handling paroled prisoners. One who desires to be accurate is likely to feel doubtful about the reliability of statistics relating to crime and criminals, particularly those dealing with parole and the after-life of offenders, because there are so many unknown factors. However, there is ample evidence of which we can be certain that the parole system, properly administered, is one of our very best agencies for turning one-time offenders into right paths. My personal study of the matter convinces me that the system is well administered in this State, and the results secured are very satisfactory. The examination of the figures relating to parole and violations of the same show that 80 per cent of those paroled make good, while approximately 20 per cent fail and violate the terms of their parole either by disobedience of rules laid down for their guidance or, to a smaller degree, by the commission of new crimes. The most encouraging aspect of the matter is the comparatively small number again resorting to crime. At this time there are 2339 prisoners on parole, which is about 24 per cent of the total under commitment from the courts.

EMPLOYMENT OF PRISONERS.

Within the Prison.

To keep prisoners busily employed while serving their terms is a difficult problem for the managers of prisons. This is particularly true when prisons are overcrowded. Nevertheless it is one of the most important duties and responsibilities which prison authorities must study and solve. At San Quentin Prison the chief industry, considered from the standpoint of employing many men and absorbing raw labor readily, is the jute mill. Considered from the standpoint of providing not only work but trade training, the most important industries are those operated under the State-use plan, including factories for the manufacture of furniture, tinware, clothing and flags. As a preparation for release, the road camps rank high, because a prerequisite to such assignment requires satisfactory conduct and industry in the prison employment, hard work and useful occupation, the getting of liberty gradually, the reduction of sentence by time-off credits, and the possibility of earning a small sum of money. At San Quentin there is reasonable opportunity for the employment of all able-bodied prisoners, either in the maintenance and upkeep, the jute mill, the State-use plan factories, and the road camps. At Folsom farming operations on a rather large scale with diversified crops has been a great aid in providing work and in supplying farm products and garden truck for the institution. The other forms of employment at Folsom are the quarry and rock crusher, institutional upkeep, and road camps.

Convict Road Camps.

The assignment of prisoners to the building of roads has been beneficial in many respects. The law under which the highway commissioners and the prison directors cooperate in the building of roads in more or less remote sections of the State by use of prison labor has been in effect since 1915. The results have been very good. Great care has been exercised in selecting prisoners for assignment to road camps. The possibility of this sort of assignment has aided discipline in the prisons, acting as an incentive to the prisoners to show themselves worthy of the trust involved in their selection for such work. It has relieved overcrowding in the prisons. It has enabled the State to build roads in some sections where otherwise the road building might be long deferred; but the greatest benefit is the results from the reformation and rehabilitation of the men who pass successfully this sort of training and testing. At the end of 1926 there were 173 prisoners in road camps. In December, 1928, there were 586 engaged in such work. At the present time, as shown above, a total of 660 are working out of eight road camps.

BUREAU OF CRIMINAL IDENTIFICATION.

Special Investigators.

Following the recommendations of the Crime Commission, the Legislature enlarged the field and added to the duties of the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation by providing for a statistical section, requiring regular reports from and to peace officers in solving major crime problems and apprehending offenders. The special investigators authorized were selected with very great care and the results secured have fully justified their employment. Many local peace officers, sheriffs and district attorneys have presented their puzzling problems to the State bureau, requesting the assistance of investigators; and, under the direction of the superintendent of the bureau, the three special investigators have been extremely active on assignments. They have had cases of various kinds in ten different counties of the State.

Growth of the Bureau.

I have referred above to the additional sections added to the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation in recognition of the fact that prevention of crime is closely related to the deterrent effect resulting from the early apprehension of the criminal and his punishment. This bureau operates as an aid to local peace officers. Its work has been efficiently organized under sections that secure identification through the reading of fingerprints, comparing handwriting and study of modus operandi. The work of the fingerprint section has grown amazingly. The installation of fingerprint departments by local peace officers, the development of departments already in existence, the growth over the years in the use of fingerprints have brought the total of prints on file in the State bureau up to 132,178 for the last fiscal year ending June 30, 1930. The modus operandi section studies the methods employed in the commission of offenses. Illustrative of the way in which habit takes hold of people, the criminal investigators find that criminals try certain methods repeatedly, and by studying the methods employed in particular crimes they are often able to determine who committed the crime. The handwriting section of the division has been responsible for the identification of many forgers and check passers, identifying them by their writing regardless of the many names they may use. The statistical section of the bureau is securing daily reports of felonies committed from peace officers' daily reports of arrests made and reports regarding stolen and pawned property; and is transmitting information by bulletins to all peace officers and making studies of records relating to parole violations of habitual offenders.

PARDONS AND COMMUTATIONS.

Origin and Purpose of the Board.

In establishing the Advisory Pardon Board, the original legislation of 1915 provided for the members to be the Lieutenant Governor as chairman, the Attorney General, and the wardens of the two State prisons—San Quentin and Folsom. In creating the Department of Penology, the director was made a member of the board. The purpose of the board has not changed but remains as originally intended, to investigate for the Governor such cases as may be submitted by him to the board. The board has no power to initiate action and no power to act independently. It is merely advisory, acting on the cases submitted by the Governor, securing information and making investigations in such cases, and then making its report to the Governor.

Cases Considered.

Although a great many applications for pardon or commutation have been received by me, I have referred to the Advisory Pardon Board only those cases in which the correspondence and reports and petitions were voluminous; in which the nature of the cases seemed especially needful of investigation; or in which I thought it would be of value to receive the advice of the board. Because we have wise and liberal parole laws in this State, I have felt that, except under extraordinary circumstances, parole should precede pardon or commutation. However, when a prisoner has been on parole, served his term creditably, received a final discharge and returned to an orderly and law-abiding way of living, I have felt he was more entitled to consideration for executive clemency than one who had not been tested on parole, and who sought to be released from the prison by executive action.

NARCOTIC DIVISION.

Prior to 1929 the duty of enforcing the narcotic poison laws devolved upon the Board of Pharmacy. New legislation relating to narcotics and narcotic users, affecting druggists as well as users, made it advisable to handle this work on a new plan. In the hope of stamping out, or at least minimizing the traffic in narcotics, the Division of Narcotic Enforcement was organized and made a part of the Department of Penology.

New Laws Relating to Narcotics.

Several measures relating to narcotics were adopted at the last session of the Legislature:

1. Bringing habitual users of narcotics within the purview of the vagrancy law, giving the judges of the police courts power to incarcerate for terms up to six months.
2. Strengthening the poison law by including veronal in the list of drugs that can not be sold except upon prescription of physicians.
3. Requiring physicians, who administer narcotic drugs, to make record of same and preserve the record for two years, making the same available for inspection by the Division of Narcotic Enforcement.
4. Providing that any addict, charged with a felony at the time of commitment to a State narcotic hospital, shall after the period of commitment, or upon discharge, be returned to court to answer for the felony, with further provision that any inmate of a State narcotic hospital who escapes therefrom is guilty of a felony.

Features of the Narcotic Problem.

The State is primarily concerned in what may be defined as the three major phases of narcotic problems: First, the apprehension of the criminal peddler of narcotics, who causes so much social danger by his illicit traffic; second, the cure and rehabilitation of such narcotic addicts as may be considered diseased victims, as distinguished from criminal peddlers; third, the prevention of the spread and increase of narcotic addiction. Nearly all persons who have studied the question consider the last named phase the most important, but all persons who have come to grips with this question, and who have had practical experience, know that little can be accomplished with the third phase unless the first and second are handled vigorously and intelligently.

Cooperation With Local Peace Officers.

The Narcotic Division does not pretend to succeed to the duties and responsibilities of the peace officers of the State. They have the duty and responsibility of suppressing drug addiction and apprehending the peddler in his nefarious traffic. Neither the chief of the division nor his inspectors consider themselves in competition with the peace officers in the work of apprehending violators of the narcotic laws. However, it is the aim and the purpose of the Narcotic Division to cooperate in every way possible with the local peace officers, federal authorities, and all agencies dealing with this problem. It is its province to assist, rather than to supplant, such officers in their duties. The relationship between the division and other agencies is one of cordial cooperation, and all have shown commendable energy in dealing with this terrible evil.

Operation of Narcotic Division.

This division has cooperated to the fullest extent with other officers—federal, State, and local. It has found the necessity, however, of maintaining its own force of inspectors, attorneys, and chemists, who have been actively engaged in the work of apprehension and prosecution.

Possibilities of Rehabilitation.

At one time it was thought there was a substantial number of drug addicts who desired to be relieved of the addiction. It was felt that they would avail themselves of opportunity to be cured and that they would volunteer for admission to an institution providing treatment. The State of California has made a real effort to lessen the amount of addiction by providing a narcotic hospital under the Department of Institutions. The superintendent and staff are expert, the facilities are excellent, the treatment humane and considerate. It was thought, and it is now thought, that results achieved would be worth the cost of the attempt to cure unfortunate victims of drug addiction before they drifted to degradation and resorted to crime. However, the experience of the division has indicated that the number of drug addicts who will cooperate in an effort to be relieved of their addiction, and who will volunteer for treatment in a hospital, is not very large. The truth is that most of those who appear to volunteer do not do so until there is imminent possibility of prosecution under the penal provision of the anti-narcotic laws.

DIVISION OF WOMEN'S INSTITUTION.

Institution for Women Offenders.

The California Institution for Women was established by the provisions of chapter 248 of the Statutes of 1929. The purpose was to provide custody, care, protection, industrial and vocational training, and reformatory help for women misdemeanants and women convicted of felonies. The law provides for committing women offenders direct from the court to this institution, also setting up an arrangement under which any woman of 18 years of age, or over, confined in any prison in the State may be transferred, under certain conditions, to the new institution.

Site for Institution Selected.

The act creating the institution provided for a board of trustees to select and purchase a site with all appurtenances for said institution. Acting under authority vested by statute, the trustees examined many sites in various sections of the State. They selected as a site for the institution property consisting of 1682 acres near Tehachapi, Kern County. They had preliminary architectural sketches made, and, after submitting these sketches to various persons familiar with the needs of such an institution and receiving suggestions, they have taken possession of the property and the State Architect is now at work on plans.

Organization for Institution.

The management and control of the institution will be under a board of five members. In organizing this board, I named three women and two men as a board of trustees. They have the duty under the law of supervising the institution, and they are also charged with the duty of determining the question of parole of women confined in the institution for misdemeanors; but, in accordance with provisions of the State constitution, the parole of any woman confined in the institution for a felony is under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Prison Directors.

DIVISION OF CRIMINOLOGY.

Work of Crime Commission.

During the 1927 legislative session many measures were adopted for the purpose of speeding up criminal procedure. A crime commission was also authorized to make a study of causes of crime and to suggest methods toward its prevention and cure. The report of the California Crime Commission submitted in 1929 was extremely interesting and important. Many of the recommendations made by the crime commission were adopted, and the commission was continued as a permanent division of the Department of Penology in order to have a continuous study of this serious problem. During the intervening time the commission has had many meetings and conferences with the officers of the law who daily deal with crime, and with the welfare agencies endeavoring to prevent crime. The commission has advised me that they think it most important now to study the effect of the many new laws we have passed in recent years, and to secure cooperation of the various agencies having to deal with them. In other words, they believe it more important to work for perfection of procedure and coordination of effort under present laws than to ask for the passage of many additional laws.

DEPARTMENT OF PROFESSIONAL AND VOCATIONAL STANDARDS.

DIRECTOR, JAMES F. COLLINS.

Following generally the suggestion offered in the first biennial message to the Legislature of 1929, there was created the new Department of Professional and Vocational Standards. The law creating this department of the State government provided for the grouping under one executive head, as the Director of the Department, the fourteen examining boards and a bureau for the registration and licensing of contractors. Hereby was created a businesslike arrangement for the direct supervision of the affairs of all of the professional and vocational licensing boards in the State government.

Functions of Licensing Boards.

The powers of each board, as created by the particular legislation affecting that board, have all been preserved as to the setting of standards and the maintaining of such standards through proper investigation and examination. The business organization of the board is placed under the supervision of the director of the department, who is made accountable to the Governor for the general supervision of the activities of all boards. He is given the right of investigation and access to the records of the boards, except that he is not permitted to review the acts of any board in so far as they affect the setting of standards and the giving of examinations. For purposes of economy and efficiency the director of the department may alter the organization of the boards in the administration of finance and business activities.

Coordination of Board Activities.

Through bringing together the general activities of all boards, a considerable degree of cooperation has developed that heretofore did not exist between the officers and representatives of the various boards. The department office has, in effect, become the clearing house for the financial and administrative problems of the boards. The board members have in the person of the director a direct representative in the executive branch of the State government. This is reflected in the monthly reports rendered by the director to the Governor's Council, and a closer contact is afforded with the Chief Executive through the director than would be possible otherwise.

PURPOSE OF STANDARDS.

Standards Important to Public Protection.

A review of the history of the activities of the examining and licensing boards affecting the professions and vocations under the supervision of the Department of Professional and Vocational Standards indicates very definitely that without the constant vigilance of such boards and their representatives the public at large would be very seriously menaced by a great number of irresponsible and unscrupulous practitioners, who are and would be a menace to the public health and safety. The records of many cases are available, emphasizing this situation very positively. California ranks high in the standards maintained by these boards under existing laws. It is essential that this rank be continued and gradually advanced, inasmuch as this State attracts not only the finest element of population from other states, but likewise draws undesirable elements, who would prey upon the public through false claims as professional practitioners if they were not stopped through the power granted the examining and licensing boards of the State.

Boards Created by Initiative Not Affected.

The Board of Chiropractic Examiners and the Board of Osteopathic Examiners were created by initiative legislation and are placed under the general supervision of the director of the department only through executive order. Consequently their status is not changed as to their powers and functions. While these boards can not be supervised to the extent the other boards are, there has been very helpful and harmonious cooperation carried out through the office of the department between the board officers and the director. Much beneficial exchange of ideas and information has been made possible through the existence of the department office acting as a clearing house.

New Laws—Civil Engineers' Registration.

The Legislature of 1929 enacted a law requiring the registration of civil engineers in California, and created the Board of Registration for Civil Engineers. This board was, by the act creating the department, placed under the direct supervision of the director.

Contractors' Registration.

The 1929 Legislature also enacted a law providing for the registration and licensing of all contractors, and by the provision of the law designated the director of the department as the Registrar of Contractors, charging him with the responsibility of organizing the registrar's office and carrying out the provisions of the act.

DEPARTMENTAL DIVISION NUMBER ONE.

Boards Represented.

The law creating the department provided that there should be at least two divisions in the department. Division No. 1 was fixed by law as being made up of the State Board of Medical Examiners, State Board of Dental Examiners, and the State Board of Pharmacy.

Board of Medical Examiners.

This board has continued to carry on its very constructive policies in the administration of the laws governing the practice of medicine and surgery. The high standards established since the law creating the board became effective have been maintained and advances made. The board has continued to work harmoniously with all institutions of the State that maintain departments for training men and women for the medical profession. Reciprocal relations with other states have been recognized and are operating satisfactorily. Strict adherence to the standards of the California board is required.

Enforcement. A long calendar list of trials before the board for various violations of the medical practice laws is shown in the records for this board, and there are pending a number of important cases. The protection of the people is assured through the prosecution of violators of the law through the rules and regulations of the board and the laws of the State. Greater interest in the problems presented by the violators of the laws governing the practice of the healing arts is being shown by the general public and by the law enforcement agencies of the political subdivisions of the State.

Fees. The fees charged for the renewing of licenses and for the examining of applicants are as low as is practical if a high standard of inspection and investigation work and enforcement of the law is to be maintained. The 50 per cent reduction in the annual renewal fee made in recent years has probably brought the fee to its lowest practical point. The department accounting section is handling the financial transactions of this board.

Board of Dental Examiners.

This board is one of the long-established examining boards and is functioning with a high degree of efficiency, maintaining standards that are as high as those of other leading states. That which is stated in reference to the activities of the Medical Board is also true of the Dental Board.

Fees. Since the organization of the department a careful analysis of the finances and budget requirements of this board has shown that an increase in the annual registration fee is necessary in order that the board may function properly and be enabled to carry out the provisions of the law through investigations and prosecutions of violators. The secretary's office, due to reorganization of the board, is now located in Los Angeles. All financial matters and much of the routine office work are handled through the departmental headquarters in Sacramento.

Board of Pharmacy.

The detail work of accounting has been transferred from the pharmacy board office in San Francisco to the departmental office in Sacramento. A very harmonious and cooperative attitude has been shown by this board in assisting in carrying out the intent of the law creating the department. The board has observed a consistent program of strict investigation and prosecution of violations of the laws affecting the practice of pharmacy and the sale of drugs in California. The fine record of this board in supervising the laws affecting pharmacy is one that is a credit to California and is being watched by other states having similar legislation.

DEPARTMENTAL DIVISION NUMBER TWO.

Boards Represented.

As the second division in the department provided for in the legislation, there are included the State Board of Optometry; State Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors; State Board of Cosmetology; State Board of Barber Examiners; State Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners; Board of Architecture (Northern District) and Board of Architecture (Southern District); and the State Board of Accountancy. The law also provides, however, that new divisions for the purposes of administration may be created by the director with the approval of the Governor. Due to the similarity of interests, a third division has been created, grouping therein the two Boards of Architecture (Northern and Southern Districts), the Board of Registration for Civil Engineers, the Board of Accountancy and the Bureau for the Registration of Contractors.

State Board of Optometry.

This board continues to function in the maintaining of high standards in the practice of optometry, and the rank of this profession in California is outstanding among the states. Rigid adherence to the California standards is demanded for applicants for admission to practice in California under reciprocal agreements. Much of the office detail and accounting work of this board is consolidated in the central office of the department at Sacramento.

Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors.

The last Legislature amended the law governing the licensing of embalmers so as to provide for the registration and licensing of both embalmers and funeral directors, and setting fees for such licenses. The board has carried out the provisions of the new sections of the law, and is functioning with credit to the business and as a protection to the public. A high standard is set by the board for embalmers and funeral directors in California, and all applicants for licenses are required to file their credentials showing both education and training. Within the limits of the finances of the board, strict attention is given to the investigation and prosecution of violators of the law.

Board of Cosmetology.

This board has been functioning under the new law passed by the 1927 Legislature. The number of licenses issued has increased from something over 10,000 licenses under the "blanketing" clause, to over 18,000 following the last examination. The board is now engaged in the establishment of definite standards which must be met by the schools for the training of students, and for the maintenance of the shops and service to the public after licenses are issued.

Amendments to Law. A number of minor amendments should be made to this law to clarify some sections. It is particularly important that in order that the most economical use of money may be had, the members of the board may be designated as committees for the purpose of correcting examination papers, and may draw per diems therefor without the necessity of maintaining the entire board in official session as is now required under the law. The office detail of this board is being absorbed by the departmental office at Sacramento, all accounting now being handled in the Sacramento office. Other economies are possible in the administration of the business of this board, making available the maximum sum for investigation, inspection and prosecution of violations of the law.

Expanded Budget Necessary. While a rather large surplus is in existence in the funds of the board, a reduction of fees should not be made until an expanded program of inspection and law enforcement has been studied and tested out. For the protection of both the general public and those wishing to enter the practice of cosmetology, rigid standards for teachers as well as for schools and shops must be established and maintained by this board.

Board of Barber Examiners.

This board is one of the more recently created boards and is functioning with a very high degree of efficiency in the supervision of over 18,000 barbers in California. A very excellent system of inspections and reports has been developed in the board office, and a consistent program of inspection and prosecution of violators is carried out under the supervision of the executive secretary and the other two members of the board. High standards of practices, as well as of schools, are insisted upon by this board. A very marked improvement may be noted in the sanitation of the shops of the State since the law creating this board went into effect. Much of the office detail and accounting work is centralized in the departmental office at Sacramento.

Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners.

This board is carrying out the provisions of the law and maintaining high standards for the practice of this profession. All applicants before examination are required to show prequalification in accredited schools approved by the board. Within the limit of the funds available from the small fee paid for annual registration, this board is carrying on investigations and law enforcement activities. Considerable service is rendered the board at minimum cost through coordinated activities and organization within the department both in Sacramento and in the field.

DEPARTMENTAL DIVISION NUMBER THREE.

Groups Represented.

Under authority of the law, the Director of the Department of Professional and Vocational Standards, with the approval of the Governor, has created Division No. 3 of this department and placed therein the Board of Accountancy, the two Boards of Architecture (Northern District and Southern District), the Board of Registration for Civil Engineers, and the Bureau of Contractors Registration.

Board of Accountancy.

This board is one that has been in operation for a number of years. It has very definite and high standards governing the practice of the profession. It is associated with other boards representing similar laws and a similar standing in the other states, and the standards of the California board are recognized as being equal to those of any other state.

Boards of Architecture.

The law governing the practice of architecture in California provides for the administration of its provisions by two boards: One, known as the California State Board of Architectural Examiners, Northern District, with headquarters in San

San Francisco; and the second, as the similar board for the Southern District, with headquarters in Los Angeles. Both boards function as separate organizations, but harmonize their work by frequent joint meetings of officers and board members. Amendments to the law at the 1929 Legislature have greatly advanced the work of these two boards in the maintaining of high standards of practice in California. The law by these amendments has been made much more effective, and considerable progress has been made by the boards in eliminating unqualified people from the practice of the profession. Much of the office detail and accounting work of these boards is now concentrated in the central office at Sacramento.

Board of Registration for Civil Engineers.

This board was created by the act of the Legislature of 1929. Since the appointment of this board it has been engaged in the examination of applications for registration and licenses in accordance with the so-called "blanketing" clause of the law, which permits the registration of all qualified civil engineers making application prior to July 1, 1930. Nearly twice as many applications have been received as were anticipated when this law was passed. Since all applications must be passed upon by the three members of the board, a considerable delay has resulted in the completion of the work. It is anticipated that there will be approximately 6000 registered civil engineers in California accepted by the board. The law provides that this board will hold examinations for registration of civil engineers applying subsequent to the July 1, 1930, limit of the blanketing provision.

Organization of the Board. The Board has organized itself thoroughly and has adopted very complete rules and regulations for procedure. The office detail and accounting of this board is handled in the central office of the department at Sacramento. The funds of the board show a rather large surplus at this time, but no reduction of the annual registration fee should be contemplated until the active program of field investigation and law enforcement has been thoroughly tried, in order that the amount of funds necessary for administering the law may be determined.

A NEW DEPARTMENTAL ACTIVITY.

Office of Registrar of Contractors.

The law providing for the licensing of contractors in California designated the Director of the Department of Professional and Vocational Standards as the registrar, and charged him with the responsibility of setting up the organization and administration of the provisions of the law. This act was passed at the 1929 Legislature and became effective August 14, 1929. On July 1, 1930, at the end of the first fiscal year over 21,000 contractors had been registered and licenses issued. The complaint section of this office has handled an average of three formal complaints each working day since its organization. A large number of informal complaints and office discussions have been held that have prevented the filing of formal complaints. Through the work of this section a large sum of money has been saved to small home owners and people who could not afford to suffer loss. A high and consistent standard of construction work is assured under this law. Under the law the registrar is authorized to suspend or cancel licenses upon evidence supporting the complaints filed under the provisions set forth in the act. A penalty of fine and imprisonment is provided for violation of the law for those who act as contractors without license. In addition to the number of licenses issued, the office records show that nearly 30,000 office contacts were made in the educational program since this law went into effect. This indicates widespread interest in the work of this office. A force of investigators is maintained in the various parts of the State. The central office is located in the department office in Sacramento; a branch office is maintained in San Francisco, and a branch office in Los Angeles.

Amendments. Amendments to this law at the next Legislature should provide for the administration of the finances through a revolving fund to simplify the office administration. The first section of the act should specify that one who proposes to act as a contractor or who proposes to engage in the business of contracting should require a license, so that those who offer bids on construction work may be definitely brought under the law. A definite provision should also be made to retain any surplus funds in the contractors' reserve fund. The exemption clause which provides that contractors taking contracts in a sum less than $200 do not need licenses should be eliminated, and the determination of work that is "casual and inconsequential" should be left to the discretion of the registrar.

Fees. For the proper administration of this law and in order that the supervision of the entire State be intensified, a fee of $10 instead of $5 for annual registration should be provided.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH.

DIRECTOR, DR. WALTER M. DICKIE.

The State Board of Public Health of California has been operating continuously in this State for a half century. Beginning as an organization without funds and without authority, it has grown, under the present administration of State government, into a full-fledged department which is receiving such complete support as enables it to enforce the necessary laws for safeguarding the public health in California. The reorganization of the State Board of Health into the State Department of Public Health in 1927 has brought added efficiency, growth and expansion; it has, in fact, introduced a new era in the public health supervision of this State.

SERIOUS AND UNUSUAL DISEASES.

Communicable Disease Control.

Together with the tremendous natural growth of population in California, there has come an unprecedented migration to this State. The migration factor alone has added many intricate and complex problems in the control of communicable diseases. This applies not only to migration from other states, but also to migration from foreign countries, chiefly Asiatic countries, where many severe and highly fatal communicable diseases are rampant. California faces, continually, acute problems in the prevention of plague, imported epidemic meningitis, virulent smallpox and other infectious diseases, which have, during the past two years, been imported into this State from foreign countries.

Precaution Necessary.

To be prepared against the invasions of these devastating diseases is of the utmost necessity, for the threat of many acute infections, uncommon to us but common in Asiatic countries, hangs over us continually. Through the maintenance of our present State public health organization we are able to offer resistance and provide safeguards against these menaces to our community health.

Epidemic Meningitis.

The year 1929 brought the largest number of cases of this disease that has ever occurred during any one year in our history. The situation in California was particularly complicated because of the direct importation of a large number of cases in Filipinos. The situation in June of that year became so serious that the President of the United States issued an official embargo, restricting the migration of certain individuals from oriental ports. The State Department of Public Health was active in applying control measures in this emergency, and played no small part in bringing the outbreak under control.

Plague.

This disease, which has been alternately sleeping and waking in California during the past 30 years, has lain dormant during the last biennial period. Only two human cases have occurred during the past two years, but the State Department of Public Health is working continually in the control of infection among rodents, chiefly ground squirrels, in order that the people of California may be protected against a flare-up of this highly fatal disease. Crews of men have been kept in the rural districts at all times for the purpose of gathering and examining ground squirrels for the presence of plague. Wherever infected rodents have been discovered, intensive campaigns of extermination have been carried on. The cooperation of many counties and cities has been secured in carrying on this work. In order to protect the State against the plague menace, rodent control work must be carried on at all future times, until no more infected rodents may be found.

Unusual Diseases.

The highly trained staff of the State Department of Public Health has been able to accomplish considerable work during the past two years in the control of several of the unusual but highly fatal and disastrous communicable diseases. The general public has little information relative to these diseases because of their unusual occurrence. They are highly important, however, and require careful attention in order that they may be kept within bounds. This applies particularly to diseases such as coccidioid granuloma, botulism, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, psittacosis, trichinosis, typhus fever, tularemia and other diseases.

IMPORTANT REDUCTIONS IN DEATH RATE.

Typhoid Fever.

The accomplishments of California in the control of typhoid fever are most outstanding. The typhoid fever mortality rate for 1929 was the lowest in the history of the State (only 1.7 persons out of every 100,000 of the population having died of this disease). There were but 95 such deaths within the State. During the past four years the death rate from this disease has been reduced 25 per cent. In 1906, 32 Californians out of every 100,000 in the population died of typhoid. Had the 1906 death rate prevailed in 1929, there would have been nearly 1800 deaths from typhoid fever instead of the 95 which actually occurred. The credit for this remarkable record is due to the provision of pure water supplies, the improvement in general sanitary conditions and the immunization of individuals against the disease. The achievement is the more remarkable because California is obliged to draw largely from surface streams for its public water supplies.

Tuberculosis.

The tuberculosis death rate has fallen from 127.7 per 100,000 population in 1925 to 106.3 in 1929. This is a reduction of almost 17 per cent. In 1906 the death rate for this disease was 235.7 per 100,000 population. The drop from this high rate to 106.8 per 100,000 in 1929 indicates the progress that has been made in tuberculosis control in California. The Bureau of Tuberculosis of the State Department of Public Health has been active in raising the standards of care in county hospitals by means of the State subsidy to approved institutions, such funds being appropriated from the State treasury and allocated to the counties for expenditure.

Imported Tuberculosis.

The problems related to the migration of tuberculosis cases in advanced stages to California, particularly to southern California, are very acute. This applies not only to migration from other states, but also to migration from Mexico. In 1928, 453 individuals who had lived in California less than a year died of tuberculosis, and 894 such deaths during that year occurred in individuals who had lived in California for periods varying from one to four years. About 20 per cent of all tuberculosis deaths in California are among Mexicans. Some of the counties of southern California are required to spend many thousands of dollars in the care and treatment of these foreign-born residents. If more satisfactory accomplishments in shutting off the tide of this immigration were made available, considerable might be accomplished in reducing the tuberculosis mortality rate of this State. It is doubtful if any other state in the Union makes such excellent efforts in the care and treatment of its indigent patients. This alone is an enormous factor in reducing the mortality rate. Continuation of this program will continue to lower the death rate of this disease still further.

CHILD WELFARE.

Crippled Children.

The State Department of Public Health began working in the interest of crippled children in October of 1928, the Legislature of 1927 having made provision for the treatment of physically handicapped individuals who are under 18 years of age. The department became empowered to make surveys and conduct clinics for the purpose of finding crippled children who might lack medical attention for the relief of their physical disabilities. Under this law parents of such children, upon certification by the judge of the superior court of the county within which they reside may secure, through the intercession of the State Department of Public Health, competent treatment under the direction of the department, but at the ultimate expense of the county within which the patient resides.

Extent of the Work.

Since October of 1928, nearly 200 crippled children have received treatment under the provisions of this act, and the surveys conducted by the department have located no less than 1485 crippled children within the State. These surveys have resulted in the provision of treatment by a wide variety of agencies without resorting to the use of the Crippled Child Act. Since work under this act has been carried on 2095 home visits or investigations of cases have been made in 51 counties of the State. Repeated visits to hospitals for crippled children and to convalescent homes, and a number of special surveys, particularly of paralyzed children, whose paralysis resulted from the widespread epidemic of infantile paralysis in 1927, have been made.

Reduction in Infant Mortality.

The past decade has been called the Golden Age for children. Every possible attribute for the development of child welfare has been brought into play. The result is shown in the reduced infant mortality rate which is regarded, generally, as the most sensitive index to public health conditions that we possess. This rate is established by the number of infant deaths per 1000 live births. The 1929 infant mortality rate for California was 63. The reduction in this rate during the past 10 years from 75 in 1920 to 63 in 1929 indicates the progress that has been made in the conservation of infant lives. Credit for the reduction may be given to the activities of child hygiene workers throughout the State. Under the State Bureau of Child Hygiene children in all parts of California, where adequate facilities are not available, may secure physical examinations for the purpose of discovering defects, and mothers may be given educational advice in the proper care and upbringing of their children. Conferences for well babies, physical examinations for children of preschool age, mothers' classes, lectures, instruction in child care, prenatal advice and other services constitute the bulk of the work of this bureau. There is significance in the fact that, through the reduction in the infant mortality rate, the lives of at least 3000 infants have been saved during the past two years.

Prevention of Maternal Deaths.

The Bureau of Child Hygiene, with its staff of women physicians, provides adequate prenatal advice to prospective mothers, particularly in the rural districts, where such advice is not readily available. Demonstrations are given in the technic of prenatal care, and literature upon allied subjects is distributed. During the past two years many consultations with expectant mothers have been conducted and more than 8200 sets of prenatal letters have been distributed. The bureau also conducts the inspection and licensing of maternity homes and hospitals. This, too, is a factor in the provision of better care at childbirth. The maternal death rate in California has fallen from 6.7 deaths per 1000 births in 1923 to 5.2 in 1929.

FOODS AND FOOD INSPECTION.

Cannery Inspection.

The California canneries which operate steam retorts for the cooking of vegetable, meat or fish products, are required to obtain licenses from the State Department of Public Health, and all of the products which they pack are placed under inspection, the cooking being under the regulations devised by the Department. There are 150 canneries in California which are so licensed. This service is maintained entirely through funds contributed by the canners themselves, who pay into the State treasury a self-imposed tax which is based upon the number of cans which they purchase. All commercially packed meat, fish or vegetable products from California canneries are given a code number by which the temperature and duration of cooking of every such can may be determined at any time and at any place that the container may be opened. Complete records are available by which these data may be traced through the code numbers on the can. Since the cannery inspection law went into effect in 1925 no outbreaks of food poisoning due to the use of commercially canned California products have occurred anywhere.

Other Inspections.

The Bureau of Foods and Drugs of the State Department of Public Health maintains a continuous inspection of food products and food-dispensing places within the State. Through this service many tons of foods which are unfit for human consumption are destroyed. There is an increasing evidence of a rise in food standards, however, and each year the amount of condemned food products grows less. In addition to this service, all foods which are consumed in the State hospitals and other State institutions are examined and analyzed, in order to make sure that they conform to the high standards of quality and food value which the State requires in foods which are consumed by its wards.

VARIOUS PUBLIC HEALTH SAFEGUARDS.

General Sanitation.

The development of sanitation everywhere throughout the State is conspicuous to even the untrained eye. Groceries, markets, creameries, restaurants, soft drink stands, and many other food dispensing places show particular advances in the provision of sanitary equipment and the use of sanitary methods in the manufacture and dispensing of their products. The sanitary inspection service of the State Department of Public Health has been largely instrumental in the carrying on of campaigns for the development of sanitation in such places. There is no way to measure the results in the prevention of disease that have been obtained through these methods, but the aesthetic values are highly important as well as the commercial aspects.

Water Supplies.

The provision of adequate water supplies for large centers of population becomes more acute as the large cities grow with a speed that is nothing short of miraculous. Public water supplies in California are of the highest purity. Since surface streams are used largely, all public water supplies must be treated in order to make certain of their potability. The State Department of Public Health has stimulated activity among communities which draw their water supplies from surface sources. Not a single epidemic of water-borne typhoid has occurred within California since 1924.

Sewage Disposal.

The rapid growth of population in all the cities of the State also, creates intricate problems in the provisions of proper sewage disposal. The State Department of Public Health provides technical assistance leading to the solution of such problems. It passes upon the design of sewage disposal systems, and, under the law, issues permission for their construction. The advance in the design of both large and small sewage disposal systems is conspicuous, and the State Department of Public Health is responsible in a large degree for the progress that has come in methods of sewage disposal. During the past two years, in addition, the State administration has made provision for research work along this line. This is of the utmost value in providing solutions to many problems which are baffling at the present time. With the development of the State's industries, the proper disposal of industrial wastes becomes increasingly important. The proper disposal of such wastes requires special studies because of their varied composition.

DISEASES WITH INCREASING DEATH RATE.

Mortality in Adults.

The increasing mortality from diseases of the heart and circulatory system, cancer, and other diseases of adult life, occupies the attention of the general public. Twenty-five per cent of all deaths in California are now due to diseases of the heart and circulatory system. The increase in the number of deaths from heart disease during the past ten years has been gradual, but persistent. Eventually man must, of necessity, die of some condition, and the truth of this statement is borne out by the fact that 60 per cent of all the deaths from heart disease in this State are in persons who are more than 65 years of age at the time of death. This would seem to indicate that direct effort in the prevention of heart disease would be hopeless. Nevertheless, the lives of many individuals who are suffering from this disease might be extended for many years if they were made aware of their physical limitations, and if they would follow sound advice relative to treatment and precautions.

Cancer.

Cancer deaths exceeded tuberculosis deaths in California for the first time in 1928, and the increase of cancer over tuberculosis mortality was even more conspicuous in 1929. The high cancer death rates in California are due, in a measure, to the migration of elderly adults who come here to spend their lives under our favorable climatic conditions. Increased facilities for diagnosis and improvement in methods of making diagnoses are also responsible for bringing many cases of this disease under treatment. There are certain public health aspects of both the cancer problem and of problems related to heart disease which are inescapable, and it is probable that during the future years health departments everywhere will exercise more direct supervision over these diseases which take such a heavy toll among adult lives. Public health in the past (and at the present) has concerned itself chiefly with the application of preventive methods among children and among young adults. It would seem now that in the future its field must of necessity be extended to provide similar service to all people of the State.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

DIRECTOR, B. B. MEEK.

Three policies of outstanding importance have characterized the administration of the Department of Public Works during the four years now coming to a close. These are (1) the boldness with which State highway problems have been attacked, (2) the far-reaching extent to which provision for future expansion has been made in road and institutional building programs of the present, and (3) the effective cooperation that has been secured for California from the federal government upon projects and undertakings in which both State and nation have a mutual interest. Inaugurated during the first two years of the administration, these policies have come to fruition in the present biennial period, and not only have they caught the imagination of our own people, but they have directed the attention of the nation and the eyes of the world to California.

Boldness of Attack.

The boldness with which highway problems have been attacked can be gleaned from the fact that California is now building highways through its high mountain ranges on practically a valley alignment; that the most ambitious program to be found in the United States for building safety into highways is now under way in California; that nowhere in the world are highways being built to higher standards of design and finish than here in this State.

Anticipating Future Needs.

The extent to which future needs have been anticipated in present programs is indicated in the ten-year building program developed for State institutions, and in the study of the water resources of the State, which has been expanded into the greatest investigation of its kind ever undertaken by any State in the Union. In the highway program it is to be seen in the fact that the right of way requirements have been stepped up to a width of 100 feet, and in the formulation of a definite policy for the orderly admission of highways into the State system. It is again to be seen in the development of a plan for financing major bridge revenue bonds, the cost of which would be too great to undertake from ordinary revenues. Without this plan the San Francisco Bay bridge, the construction of which now seems certain, would still remain in the realm of hopes and dreams. This same plan also sounds the death knell of privately owned toll bridges in the California State highway system, and assures the fact that bridges built or purchased under this plan will become free structures as soon as their first cost is repaid.

Federal Cooperation.

The effective cooperation that has been secured for California from the federal government in projects of mutual interest and concern is much more than mere moral support. In the study of the effective conservation and use of the water resources of our State, the United States has joined as a partner with California. Its engineers have participated in the study. The cost of some phases of the study has been paid from federal funds, and, more than this, responsible officials of the government have agreed to the principle, enunciated by the Department of Public Works in official conferences at Washington, that the United States should participate in defraying the cost of carrying this joint plan into execution. Again the same effective federal cooperation has been secured on the San Francisco Bay bridge project. Such cooperation is essential to the success of the projects.

DIVISION OF HIGHWAYS.

Fundamentals in Highway Building.

It can be safely asserted that no great civilization can be created or maintained where easy means of communication are not provided. Ideas as well as travel flow along the highways of a country. The interchange of these ideas is fully as important as the exchange of the goods that the highways carry. The latter makes possible a civilization replete with material comfort; the former makes possible an ever-expanding civilization of the mind. The effort of government should be to combine these values in one civilization, and to see that the combined values are both equitably distributed and widely apportioned among the masses of the people.

Major Accomplishments.

In California, during the past four years, these ideals have found expression in certain activities connected with the administration of the State highway system which it may be of interest to review briefly:

Resumption of Highway Building.

The free flow of travel depends upon an improved system of highways, reaching every part of California. This is being accomplished through the one-cent gasoline tax for new highway construction adopted in 1927. This tax made possible the resumption of State highway building in California on a scale commensurate with the needs of the State, and with the cost so equitably distributed that it has made possible the largest State highway building program in the history of the State without a burdensome charge upon any taxpayer.

Interstate Connections.

One of the matters to which the Department of Public Works very definitely set itself was the improvement and completion of California's interstate highway connections. Mountain ranges are no longer traffic barriers, because of the high standard of alignment adopted. Failure to complete highways across desert sections and mountain ranges of California had served to impede travel both in and into the State. During the past four years the work of improving the desert entrances of California has proceeded under rush orders. This has been done both that these highways will be in readiness to properly serve travel coming here for the Olympic games, and also that they will be in condition to serve the interstate travel arising from construction activities at Boulder Dam.

Orderly Additions to Highway.

There will be submitted to the Legislature the result of the study of the Department of Public Works and the California Highway Commission on highways recommended for inclusion in the State's secondary road system. The adoption of the report means that California will have for the first time a definite orderly policy controlling the growth of the State highway system.

Grade Crossing Elimination.

During the past two years, 27 grade crossings have been done away with through the construction of overpass and underpass structures and by the relocation of highways. Of the 330 remaining grade crossings on the State highway system, 175 are across main line and important branch line railroads. Of this latter number, 90 are considered dangerous, and should receive first attention in a program of constructing grade separations. The present program contemplates the elimination of grade crossings in the order of their danger to the public. The safety of remaining crossings has been greatly increased by the installation of better warning signals. At the present time no grade crossings are permitted on new highway construction. If this policy is continued, and the present program for the progressive removal of grade crossings is completed, ten years should see the California State highways system completely free from the grade crossing menace.

TOLL BRIDGES.

Toll Bridge Problem Solved.

During the past four years a plan has been set up and approved by the Legislature that will make it impossible for privately owned toll bridges to be fastened onto the State highway system, and has provided a means whereby the State may construct such bridges as can not be financed from ordinary funds, thus greatly reducing the toll charges during the repayment period, and making these bridges free structures when their cost has been repaid.

San Francisco Bay Bridge.

Another great barrier to travel has been the lack of bridge facilities between San Francisco and the continental shores of the San Francisco Bay. To solve this problem, which has faced the people of California for these many years, was a goal to which the Department of Public Works early set itself. In the attainment of this goal, it will be of interest to review some of the definite accomplishments of the past four years in making possible the realization of this project, dreamed of for years in California, and which in its importance to the northern part of the State ranks with the importance of the Colorado River project to the south. These accomplishments are as follows: First, for the first time a full, complete, careful and unbiased engineering study has been made of the bay bridge project. This study developed engineering, traffic and economic data, which fully justified enthusiastic support for the project and an aggressive demand for early construction of the bridge. Second, the full and favorable cooperation of representatives of the United States War and Navy Departments has been enlisted. Such cooperation is essential to the success of the project. Third, a method of financing the structure from revenues derived from tolls has been perfected and approved by the Legislature. This method assures the fact that the structure will be free to traffic as soon as its cost is repaid. The traffic study further shows that revenue from traffic will be sufficient to repay the cost and maintain the structure.

RELIEF FOR UNEMPLOYMENT.

Employment Relief Program.

Facing a period of critical unemployment, the Department of Public Works immediately recognized the large part that the highway program could play in bettering both business and unemployment conditions in the State. During the early stages of the depression, projects were offered to contractors in larger volume than first scheduled. With each contract signed, a personal letter was sent to the contractor asking him to use labor local to his contract and purchase supplies locally, as far as it was within his power so to do. The contractors of California responded most willingly to this request, and their effective cooperation was a large factor in the outstanding success of this program. As winter approached, the unemployment program was again expanded. Maintenance crews, working out of over 200 communities in California, were enlarged to take care of distress unemployment cases in these communities. The men thus employed were given work on a three-day-a-week basis and were paid at the rate of $4 a day.

Labor Camps Established.

To assist in relieving unemployment in the large cities, labor camps were established. The men in these camps were paid $3 a day and board. To assure the employment of bona fide residents of California, and that relief was being given only in cases where distress was acute, employment was made from lists furnished by the State employment agencies in the case of labor camps, and by local relief committees in the case of maintenance crews. The work assigned both to labor camps and maintenance crews is that which lends itself to the use of a maximum of hand labor and a minimum of machinery. The work has been successful both from the standpoint of unit costs and of labor furnished the unemployed. On December 15th, 3500 men were at work in the labor camps and in special maintenance crews. The California Highway Commission appropriated $1,000,000 to defray the cost of this work for additional unemployment relief.

IMPORTANT HIGHWAY ACHIEVEMENTS.

Typical Immediate Projects.

Reference has already been made to the bold manner in which State highway problems have been attacked, and to the exceptionally high standards of design and safety with which the Department of Public Works is now constructing State highways. A few typical projects furnish convincing evidence of these facts: The narrow, tortuous section of the Victory highway that carried travel through the town of New-castle is being eliminated by a tunnel beneath the town. The relocation of the Ridge Route, connecting northern and southern California, is being built on a new route that will reduce the curvature over the present location by 90 per cent as compared with the curvature on the present route. Not only have tangents been substituted for curves, but the maximum grade on this mountain highway is 6 per cent. The extension of the practice of striping highways, from the six miles so striped when the present administration took charge to the 1800 miles now striped, has enormously increased the traffic carrying capacity of our highways, and avoided the necessity for additional construction, the cost of which would have run far into the millions of dollars.

Settlements of Controversies.

The California Highway Commission and the Department of Public Works fell heir to a number of highway location controversies, some of them of years standing. Every such controversy has been decided and incoming officials will find a clean slate.

Cost of Building and Overhead Reduced.

The cost of highway building has been reduced by offering a large volume of work during a period of low building costs; by scheduling work in different sections of the State to take advantage of the most favorable weather periods; and by the progressive reduction of overhead costs from 5 per cent in January, 1927, to 3 per cent on November 1, 1930. Expressed in terms of money, this reduction in overhead has meant a saving of more than $1,000,000. It has made possible the construction of a number of important highway projects that otherwise could not have been undertaken.

Ten-Year Building Program.

To ascertain possible future costs of highway construction and reconstruction, the Division of Highways has completed a study of the probable requirements of the State highway system for the next ten years. The study shows the estimated cost to improve the present State highway system to an adequate standard for traffic for the ten-year period to be $313,565,906. If the new highways now proposed are added, the total will be $364,536,716. Many roads must receive stage construction and heavy maintenance while the increase in annual revenues accumulates to provide the necessary funds for a permanent type of improvement. The estimate of the total revenue available to the State for highway purposes in this same period (July 1, 1931, to June 30, 1940), is $422,015,300. This total revenue is for all purposes in connection with State highway construction, reconstruction and maintenance. There will be available for actual construction and reconstruction projects a total of $320,352,700, as compared with an estimated requirement for these purposes of $364,536,716. As for maintenance, administration and joint highway district aid, the sum of $101,622,600 will be available.

FUTURE OF OUR HIGHWAYS.

Financial Set-up Satisfactory.

It would seem that the present financial set-up of our State highway system is so satisfactory that any suggestion of change should be given most deliberate consideration and most careful scrutiny before its adoption. This is particularly true with reference to the amount of taxes levied for State highway purposes. Present revenues are adequate, but not excessive. Accordingly, these funds should neither be increased nor decreased. Judged by early standards of construction, present revenues may appear large. But to care for the tremendous and growing volume of traffic that the highways of today are called upon to serve, standards of construction, maintenance and safety, unthought of a few years ago, are now a necessity.

Allotment of Gasoline Funds.

Possibilities of unnecessary delay in highway building programs, through lack of funds in the State treasury to meet contract requirements, would be avoided if allotments of gasoline tax funds be made from the State treasury to the proper highway funds at bimonthly instead of six months periods.

Danger Points.

The figures developed in the ten-year building program clearly reveal the necessity for most careful safeguarding and husbanding State highway revenues to accomplish the purposes to which they are now devoted. Any serious impairment of the present set-up will completely wreck the State highway program. Danger to the State highway program through impairment of revenues looms chiefly from five sources. These are:

- First. The suggestion that gasoline taxes be diverted to other than highway uses.
- Second. The suggestion that major allotments of present revenues be made to improve and maintain through-travel streets in cities of the State larger than the village class. To undertake this would take at least $125,000,000, and obviously would completely wreck the State highway program.
- Third. The suggestion that there be a still larger division of highway funds for the elimination of railroad grade crossings on the State system. Reference has been made in previous paragraphs to the status of the grade-crossing situation and the manner in which this problem has been and is being met.
- Fourth. The inclusion in the secondary State highway system of roads not in the recommended list. Such ill-considered inclusions could increase mileage to the point that not only construction funds but maintenance moneys as well would be seriously endangered.

- Fifth. The undue enlargement of joint highway district programs.

The Goal in Sight.

Given assurance of the continuance of present revenues, California in a few years should have a system of highways unexcelled anywhere in the world. This can be accomplished without increasing the present sources of revenue. The people of California should realize that there is no surplus of highway revenue, when traffic and safety needs of the system are considered. And they should not allow the orderly construction of the system to be interfered with, or the proper maintenance of the roads to be jeopardized, by diverting to other uses the revenue that now goes to the State system, however great the temptation may be, or how worthy the particular cause may seem.

DIVISION OF WATER RESOURCES.

State Water Plan.

Water is a factor of vital importance in the building of California into a great world commonwealth. California is a semiarid State. Already the development of certain parts of the State is threatened by a receding water table. To meet this threat the Division of Water Resources has expanded the study of the water resources of California into the most exhaustive investigation of this character ever undertaken by any state in the Union. The efforts of this division have been directed toward finding and formulating such a State-wide coordinated plan of water resources and water utilization as will assure to California the greatest beneficial use of its water. During the past two years the engineering data and plans have been completed and the investigations extended to include a most thorough inquiry into the economic and legal phases of the various problems connected with the use of the water resources of the State.

Cooperation With Federal and State Boards.

The problem is so far reaching it was felt that the federal government had an immediate interest in its solution. Through conferences with President Hoover, an agreement has been made whereby the federal government is actively assisting in the studies and investigations now under way. The Department of Public Works, through the Division of Water Resources, has cooperated both with the Federal-State Water Resources Commission and the Joint Legislative Water Committee in the study of this problem of such momentous importance to the people of both the State and the nation. The findings of the Federal-State Water Resources Commission will be presented in a separate report on this subject. The conclusions reached by the Joint Legislative Committee will be transmitted directly to the Legislature.

A Place to Begin.

The report of the Division presents the major units of an ultimate plan for utilization of the waters of the State, and an initial plan which consists of a combination of the most economic and advantageous units to meet present requirements in the main areas of the State. The initial plan includes large storage on the upper Sacramento River at Kennett, a canal from the delta area into Contra Costa County, and storage on the San Joaquin River at Friant and canals north and south therefrom which will meet the present water shortages of the southern San Joaquin Valley.

Projects Included in Plan.

In southern California the aqueduct proposed by the Metropolitan Water District to import water from the Colorado River to this area is included, as is the Santa Ana Basin flood control and water conservation project. It has not been possible to include in the initial plan all areas of the State where water shortage exists, but the major deficient sections are reported upon with cost estimates and the principles laid down are capable of extension to other sections as needed.

Effect of Plan.

The effect of this initial unit of the plan would be to improve irrigation conditions in the Sacramento Valley, correct salinity in the delta area, supply water to industrial and agricultural sections of Contra Costa County and to areas in the San Joaquin Valley which will otherwise go back to pasture, and to provide a supply of water from the Colorado River for southern California. It is not proposed to bring new lands under irrigation at this time; hence, the need to transport water from the Sacramento Valley to the San Joaquin Valley can be postponed.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES OF DIVISION.

Dams—Safeguarding Life and Property.

It is gratifying to record the fact that during the present biennium, notable progress has been attained in securing increased protection for life and property, for the residents of this State, against the failure of dams. This has been secured through the enactment of legislation empowering the State Engineer to supervise all dams in this State over 15 feet in height or storing more than 10 acre-feet of water. Dams with dimensions less than these present practically no element of danger. The activities of the Division of Water Resources are being aggressively directed to an examination and critical review of some 650 existing dams, the approval of plans and specifications for and supervision of construction of 50 dams and the issuance of orders directing that the necessary work be done to make safe existing dams, at which unsatisfactory physical conditions obtain.

Irrigation Districts.

California's agricultural interests are inevitably dependent on irrigation. Fifty-one per cent of all the lands cultivated in California are irrigated. Our irrigated area represents almost 25 per cent of all lands irrigated in the United States. While irrigation activities were at a comparatively low ebb during the present biennium there was much accomplished in the State Engineer's office in advice and assistance given districts regarding their financial set-up and economic operation. The study that has been made in California during the past two years of methods of financing irrigation districts has attracted national attention.

Localized Water Investigations.

Striking evidence of the public confidence reposed in the Division of Water Resources as a competent, reliable and helpful scientific agency for the investigation of water problems will be found not only in the frequent resort to the division by groups of water users to establish their respective rights on particular streams, but also in the repeated appeals which are made by counties, cities, districts and other public agencies to undertake investigations of water problems which require the peculiar technical and legal background of experience afforded by the work of the division.

Consolidation of Divisions.

By an act of the 1929 Legislature the former departmental divisions of Water Rights and of Engineering and Irrigation were consolidated as the new Division of Water Resources under the direction of the State Engineer. Thus all administrative activities of the State pertaining to water rights, water investigations, flood control, dams, water districts and similar matters were grouped in a single office in accord with the reorganization program designed to reduce the number of offices, eliminate duplication and centralize authority on a given subject. This consolidation has been successful from the outset, both in effecting economies and affording the public much better service.

DIVISION OF MOTOR VEHICLES.

Unification of Traffic Control.

The outstanding development in this division was the creation of the California Highway Patrol which made possible the transfer of control over highway traffic from the various counties into a centralized organization functioning under the State. While the California Highway Patrol has only just come into being, evidence gleaned from hundreds of letters written voluntarily by motorists living in all parts of the State show conclusively that the change already has more than justified itself.

Development of New Policies.

When the change to unified traffic control was made, certain ideals and principles were presented to traffic as fundamental. Briefly, these ideals and principles can be outlined as follows: The primary function of the traffic officer should be to expedite traffic with safety; arrests should be made only as a last resort to accomplish this; the gas station traffic officer and the one who lurks behind a tree, pouncing out to arrest the unwary, must go; the traffic officer should be the friend of the well-meaning motorist, aiding him in distress and making his travel safe and pleasant, but the implacable foe of the intentionally reckless or the drunken driver. In a word, a traffic officer, helpful, dignified, friendly, firm, should be substituted for the traffic "cop." The response of traffic officers to these ideals and principles has been magnificent. To assist the men in attaining these ideals, schools have been conducted where the men have been instructed in the duties of their offices.

Growth of Traffic.

The growth of highway traffic in California can be seen in the following registration figures including passenger automobiles and solid and pneumatic trucks:

Registration December 31, 1926.....	1,600,475
Registration December 31, 1928.....	1,812,807
Registration December 31, 1930 (estimated).....	2,041,690

These figures tally closely with increases noted in traffic-count figures and indicate that in 1940 California may expect a volume of highway traffic approximately double that of today.

DIVISION OF ARCHITECTURE.

Ten-Year Building Program.

The basic policy of the Department of Public Works, that of present planning for future growth, finds no better exemplification than in the ten-year building program developed during the past two years by the Division of Architecture. While such a program of necessity is subject to some measure of change in succeeding bienniums, yet it provides a definite basis for an orderly building program, having regard to both present needs and future requirements of these institutions. This tentative ten-year program has made necessary on the part of the Division of Architecture the preparation of plot plans for 26 different institutions.

Appropriations Based on Cost Estimates.

A change in procedure that is worthy of particular mention is the practice that has been introduced of basing requests for appropriations for State buildings on cost estimates prepared in advance of the appropriation request. This has substituted actual facts for guess work in the initiatory stages of the State's building program, and has made it possible to complete buildings within estimated costs, and without the delays usual in the past and occasioned by the necessity of returning to succeeding Legislatures for additional appropriations.

State Building Program and Employment.

The facts cited in the above paragraphs, together with the general administration policy of advancing building programs to meet business and unemployment conditions, has resulted in a program of construction for the 1929-1931 biennium which is now six months ahead of schedule.

STATE HARBOR COMMISSION.

Although the State Harbor Commission is not organized under the Department of Public Works, nevertheless its activities are of such a nature that they may be appropriately outlined in this place. I am pleased to report that the past two years have been marked by an increased tonnage over the previous biennium. Notwithstanding the fact that the volume of business in most United States ports fell off to a marked extent during the last year, the tonnage of the port of San Francisco was greater for the fiscal biennium ending June 30, 1930, than for the previous two-year period. Cargo passing over the piers from July 1, 1926, to June 30, 1928, amounted to 21,985,937 tons and from July 1, 1928, to June 30, 1930, 22,346,955 tons, an increase of 361,018 tons.

Increased Revenue.

The net operating revenue for the biennial period from July 1, 1928, to June 30, 1930, exceeded that of the previous two years by $285,502.86, despite the fact that additional expenditures were made for the maintenance of run-down structures and the operation of new facilities. Furthermore, wage increases have been allowed to over 480 harbor employees during the last four years.

Modern Accounting System Installed.

The former inadequate methods of recording the transactions of the harbor have been completely replaced by a modern accounting system, devised and installed with the cooperation of the State Department of Finance. Much of the accounting work is now accomplished by the use of up-to-date tabulating and bookkeeping machines. This new system has made readily available more comprehensive and accurate accounting records and statistical data, so essential to the proper management of any large business.

Improvements Constructed and Under Way.

Expenditures for permanent improvements from July 1, 1928, to June 30, 1930, amounted to $2,780,912.46 and exceeded those of the previous biennium by $364,666.58. Major projects covered by these expenditures included the completion of piers 45 and 48, extensions to piers 30 and 32, a connecting wharf between piers 26 and 28, extension to the Islais Grain Terminal, a large new dredger, and two new mud scows. Aside from these improvements, the present biennium has also witnessed the construction of pier 1, the construction of a refrigeration terminal, the illumination of the Ferry Building tower, the installation of numerous first aid stations on the piers, the reconstruction of pier 15, which will be in service early in 1931, and the purchase of a parcel of land at the foot of Clay street to permit of the widening of The Embarcadero at that point.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS.

Refrigeration Terminal.

In compliance with the growing demands for a ship-side refrigeration terminal for precooled perishable farm products for export, such a plant, modern in every particular, was constructed in the State Products Terminal Building at China Basin, and was placed in operation in May, 1930. Many farmers throughout the State have taken advantage of this facility to dispose of their surplus fruit crops; and, as a result, a steady stream of perishable products has passed through the plant to foreign ports. This facility promises to become an important factor in the development of foreign markets for California fruit. This plant can be doubled in capacity within a very short time and at a relatively small expense.

First Aid Stations.

During the past year first aid stations have been installed on the principal piers along the water-front. Formerly, water-front workers injured on the wharves were compelled to lie on the wind-swept docks, and received inadequate, if any, attention, while awaiting the arrival of an ambulance. The installation of these stations, fully equipped, will result in the saving of lives and the elimination of unnecessary suffering.

Contemplated Improvements.

The revenue and facilities of the port have been more than doubled during the last fifteen years, and there are many indications that there will be an even greater increase in business, and, therefore, the necessity for more rapid expansion in the future. To meet the anticipated demands of more and larger ships and greater cargoes, plans are in progress for the construction of many additional modern facilities at the earliest possible date. Among the most important of these projects are eight modern, reinforced concrete piers, capable of accommodating the largest vessels afloat, to be located north of the Ferry Building in the most accessible part of the water front. These will replace ten small wooden piers, built in the days of the sailing vessel, and now obsolete and of little value. There will also be one new concrete pier south of Channel street, an addition to the Islais Grain Terminal, practically doubling the capacity; a lumber terminal with bulkhead wharves at China Basin, a seawall and additional wharves at Islais Creek, and the extension of the Belt Railroad to the southern end of the water front, which includes participation with the city of San Francisco in the construction of a new bridge over the Channel at Third street and the widening of Illinois street.

Ten-Million-Dollar Bond Issue.

In order to finance this extensive program more rapidly than can be done from port revenues, a ten-million-dollar bond issue for harbor improvements was passed by the Legislature in 1929 to be approved by the voters of the State on November 4, 1930. The harbor has always been self-supporting under State management, and all expenses in connection with this bond issue, including interest and redemption requirements will be met from harbor revenues. There will, therefore, never be any taxation required for this purpose. The voters in all parts of the State gave a most hearty endorsement to the bond issue, the election results showing $08,293 favorable as against 257,700 opposed, or a majority of more than three to one. To show the State-wide interest in the State's harbor, it is only necessary to point out that of California's fifty-eight counties, not a single one voted against these bonds, while in fifty-five counties the vote ranged from more than two to one to more than seven to one.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL WELFARE.

DIRECTOR, ANNA L. SAYLOR.

Fifty years ago the giving of alms was the chief end and aim of social work. Today the prevention of crime, delinquency, mental defectiveness, dependency, social maladjustment, and the rehabilitation of those who are in distress or out of step with the normal population is the ultimate goal of social work. In the light of the foregoing, the State has set up certain machinery to carry out a preventive program.

State and County Cooperation.

The aim of social welfare is to release the potential powers of the local community for development from within. Under our law the counties are responsible for the care of the sick, the incapacitated and the indigent. Each county has the skeleton machinery for local welfare work, and in addition there are many fine leaders who are able to carry on local work, provided they are helped to understand the use of their own machinery and are given such assistance and guidance as they desire. The county is concerned with the individual, while the State's main function lies in the field of education, study and analysis of social problems, establishing standards, collecting and distributing information. To this end the State Department of Social Welfare during the past four years has devoted a great deal of time to assisting local officials and lay groups in the performance of their duties in accordance with the most enlightened development in this field of work. This has been done largely through community demonstrations, surveys, publications, reports, newspaper articles, addresses, group conferences, correspondence, news letters, and by improving standards, clarifying procedure, promoting better organization and programs for county welfare and relief work.

STATE AID TO NEEDY CHILDREN.

A State and County Responsibility.

The granting of State aid to needy children is a joint obligation of the State and county. There is no maximum or minimum amount which the county can grant, but the maximum amount which the State can grant is limited. At the present time about 16,000 needy children are receiving State aid. These are orphans, half-orphans, abandoned children, and children whose fathers are incapacitated by tuberculosis or permanent disabilities. This system of aid to children was put into effect in the early eighties.

Children Cared For in Own Homes.

Aid was first granted to children in orphanages, but the numbers in institutions have steadily decreased, until at the present time nearly 90 per cent of the children on aid are being cared for by their own mothers or relatives, and are thus being given the opportunity of growing up in that normal family life which is still our best apprenticeship for useful citizens. The amount of State aid granted to needy children is about $1,750,000 a year.

Financial Aid Only a Part of State's Concern.

Meeting the financial needs of children is only a part of the State's concern. For that small army of 12,000 children with their own mothers, the State wishes to be assured that the income in each home is adequate, that the health of each member is protected, that the housing and living conditions are suitable, that the children are being supervised properly if the mother is employed; in short, that the State and county are safeguarding their joint investment in future citizens.

Licensed Orphanages and Boarding Homes.

There is at present capacity for about 6000 children in orphanages and approximately 10,000 in family boarding homes, all of which are licensed and supervised by the Department of Social Welfare or its accredited agencies. A considerable number of this group of children receive State aid. The task of the department in this field has been to establish adequate standards for the care of these children who are deprived of their normal family protection. This has been accomplished through the enforcement of standards, educational conferences and the cooperation of local health and welfare departments. Extensive health service has been made available to these children. In the past four years the department has stressed the need of social case studies of children before they are admitted to institutions, so that whenever possible plans may be made for the reestablishment of these children with their own mothers or relatives.

ADOPTIONS.

The Old Law.

For a number of years prior to the new adoption law in 1927, the child placement agencies of California had placed children for adoption. However, the great bulk of the work consisted of independent adoptions carried on without reference to standards of good social work. Under such conditions, the judge was often compelled to complete adoptions on insufficient evidence, or practically no evidence, of the fitness of the petitioners or the eligibility of the child in question.

The New Law.

The purpose of the new law was to prevent the promiscuous placing of children, since experience had proven that great unhappiness and suffering was the result of the hasty and unsupervised methods which had formerly prevailed. Through proper investigation such as the 1927 law provides, the judge is given sufficient information to enable him to safeguard children against unfit foster parents and to prevent foster parents from adopting children who are physically, mentally or otherwise unfit for adoption. In any adoption program, it must always be understood that there are always more good prospective homes than there are children eligible for adoption. The child's interests are the State's first and chief concern, and the department has done its utmost to secure to every child the best home obtainable.

Proper Investigations Made.

During the past three years, 3419 cases have been investigated, either directly by this department or by its licensed child-placing agencies. Of those investigated by the State department, 15 per cent have been recommended for denial and some other plan has been made for the child. Los Angeles County has had about 49 per cent of all the adoptions in the State.

Need for Change in the Law.

The actual administration of the law has disclosed some very interesting facts which could not possibly have been known until such time as the department assumed the responsibility for this particular phase of work. The necessity of amending the law in the light of these facts is apparent. As an important example, we note that about 50 per cent of the adoptions in California each year are by relatives, and more than one-half of these are by step-parents. It is interesting to see the number of cases where a woman remarries and her husband adopts her children by a former marriage. The department realizes that such an adoption requires a different type of investigation than that of a child by a nonrelative.

Experts Favor the California Law.

It is interesting to note that social planning experts all over the country are strong in their approval of such a law as California now has. Certain amendments to simplify and clarify the law are being prepared by a committee appointed for that purpose, and a bill designed to make the law more workable will be presented to the next Legislature. It is recommended that in the interest of children who are deprived of a natural parent or parents, the State should improve the present law, as it is necessary to further safeguard the interests of children and foster parents, but under no circumstances should the law be repealed. Three years' operation of the law has demonstrated its fundamental soundness and has placed California well to the front in this field of child welfare.

DIVISION OF PROBATION AND DELINQUENCY.

Object of State Participation.

This division was created to meet the requirements of an amendment to the law in 1929, by placing in this department responsibility for the general supervision of adult and juvenile delinquency. The object of State participation in probation is to give delinquents and potential delinquents an opportunity to be kept out of the criminal class, or if they find themselves in that class to help them out of it if possible, regardless of the remoteness of the communities in which they live or the lack of social understanding by local authorities.

Minimum Standards and Uniform Records.

Under State supervision, every county has at least minimum standards of probation for meeting the individual needs of those who are in danger of becoming delinquents and criminals, and a system for uniform keeping of records. It must be understood that absence of records or inadequate records of the activities of law violators break down the whole theory of probation and render it useless, while complete and uniform records make possible the scientific and human understanding of the various complex problems arising in the courts of the State and the interpretation of recorded statistics. Where no records are kept, the past history of the most dangerous and habitual criminals may not be known, and habitual offenders who make a good appearance are often placed on probation.

Activities.

The work of this new division includes general supervision of adult and juvenile probation, the securing of uniform methods of social accounting, the inspection of jails, prisons, detention homes, and reformatories. During the past year the Supervisor of Probation has been engaged in collecting and interpreting statistics, holding conferences with judges, probation committees and probation officers, and reviewing and passing upon all plans for the construction of jails, prisons, correctional institutions and detention homes. In addition, a number of regional institutes were held during 1929 and 1930 for probation officers, probation committees and interested citizens, with representatives from all counties present.

Findings.

From the statistics collected, it was found that in 1929, 237 probation officers of the State and the individual counties supervised a total of 18,228 adult and juvenile probationers, with a total expense of maintaining this work amounting to $678,304.44. The total collections for restitution and family support from those on probation averaged over $60,000 per month, which is more than the entire cost of maintaining the probation system of California for one year. Had this large group been cared for in correctional and penal institutions, the cost of keeping them in idleness would have been approximately $11,000,000. This estimate is made on the basis of $2 per day for the care and schooling of juveniles in State correctional schools, and $1 per day for the maintenance of adults in jails and prisons. Inasmuch as it is only the very small minority who fail on probation, it would seem that more and better probation might well be considered as a proper substitute for prison care, where wards of the State are kept in idleness at the expense of taxpayers and under demoralizing influences at best.

Recommendations.

It is recommended (1) that probation officers be appointed only because of their special fitness and training for the work and that they be given salaries commensurate with service rendered; (2) that probation officers be given such a reasonable number of cases that they can render a maximum of service to their probationers; (3) that the State raise the standard of probation work by paying one-half the salaries of chief probation officers who may meet certain qualifications and standards of service; (4) that the smaller counties that are unable to provide adequate service to probationers be given the legal authority to establish and maintain joint probation offices.

MENTAL HYGIENE SURVEY.

Object of Survey.

In 1927 the State Conference of Social Work took the first steps looking toward a mental hygiene survey of California by stating in concise terms the apparent need for such service. The object of study was to take an inventory of conditions relating to delinquency, mental defects and disorders, to build a constructive program for improving conditions, and most important of all, to develop preventive measures which will basically reduce the causes of vast misery and suffering as well as the great financial burden to the taxpaying public. The work has already been done by a national authority on mental health and disease, and a very valuable report of his findings and recommendations will be released to the public at an early date.

Modernization of State's Institutional Program.

The survey includes the modernization of the whole State hospital system in line with the systems now used in the most forward looking states. The work of all the State hospitals has been carefully studied, with emphasis on the quality of clinical work. It has been the desire of the committee in charge of the survey to get an accurate estimate of the aids and obstacles to the development of the best psychiatric standards in mental hospitals. Readjusting mental cases back to community life following parole requires close cooperation between State hospitals and local agencies. The survey tells how such cooperation can be brought about. The survey also includes the modernization of an institutional program for the feeble-minded. An extensive study was made of delinquency and antisocial behavior, with particular emphasis upon prevention, recognition and treatment. An extensive inquiry has been made into education in its relation to mental hygiene and the establishment and development of thorough courses in mental hygiene in schools and colleges.

Extent of Problems.

The extent of the problems falling into the purview of the mental hygiene survey can best be comprehended by glancing at the following figures compiled on October 1, 1930:

Population in county hospitals-----	110,000
Population in State hospitals-----	14,965
Population in State homes for feeble-minded-----	2,705
Population in county jails-----	3,300
Population in State prisons-----	7,101
Population in State correctional schools-----	1,095
Number of adults and juveniles on probation-----	18,228

Survey and Inventory.

The survey should be regarded as an inventory of the quality and quantity of work which is now being done in California for the care, treatment and prevention of the various forms of maladjustment. It is the hub from which needed developments can radiate to give the State a more economical program with larger humanitarian results. It is an intelligent, comprehensive and modern program in which all agencies should unite, concentrating on prevention, and outstanding results should be achieved in a comparatively short time. California can not ignore this factual study and its consequent recommendations if she desires to lessen her tax bill and discharge her moral and legal obligations to the aged, blind and crippled; to prevent and cure mental disorders; to prevent delinquency and rehabilitate delinquents. This survey presents a program which should not be relegated to a place of unimportance in the State's future social planning because it spells humanity in terms of economy.

STATE AID TO THE NEEDY AGED.

Survey.

In 1927 the Legislature authorized the department to make a survey of the living conditions of the needy aged in California to determine the size of the problem, to study old age dependency in other countries and to recommend legislation, if such were found to be necessary or desirable. In the progress of the survey, a number of counties were visited, each typical of the various parts of the State and the widely differing industrial and agricultural conditions. Thus the north and the south, metropolitan, agricultural, mining and lumbering counties were carefully studied at first hand, in addition to the study of records of social agencies, both public and private.

Law Enacted.

In 1929 the State Legislature enacted a law providing State aid to the needy aged living outside of State and county institutions. The purpose of this act was to enable needy old people to live in their own homes, or the homes of friends or relatives, instead of being placed in institutions, and to make it possible for old couples to remain together. The measure was not intended to provide a pension for any citizen simply because he had reached the age of 70 years and had been a resident of California for 15 years, but was intended to give assistance to those actually in need. Under the law the State and counties share equally in giving the aid, the maximum of which is $1 per day per person. Here, again, the maximum is not necessarily given to each recipient, as income from all sources is considered in estimating the amount to which aid may be added to bring the budget up to a total of $1 per day per person.

Procedure in Administration of the Law.

The application for aid is made to the county board of supervisors or their accredited agency, and the eligibility of the applicant for aid is established by means of family case work investigation made by the county. If the county deems the applicant eligible for aid, the application is approved by the county and forwarded to the State. The State then reviews the case, and if the applicant meets all the requirements the county is notified that State aid will be granted. The county advances the aid to the applicant, and every six months files a claim with the State for half of the aid which has been advanced by the counties during that period. The United States Department of Labor, the National Committee for Old Age Security, and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, which has been fostering old age security systems in the various states of the Union, have characterized the California plan as one of the best and soundest methods of assuring security to the aged yet established.

Applications.

Under this law, three times the number of aged meeting the necessary requirements of age, citizenship and residence are receiving aid, and in a larger amount, than had formerly received county aid. There is no doubt that this law has relieved much hardship among the aged. December 1, 1930, 8498 applications had been received for aid. Of this number, 5582 had been acted upon; 5184 applications had been approved, and 397 denied by this department or withdrawn by the counties, leaving a balance of 2916 applications in the pending file at the end of November.

Recommendation.

In order to establish the administration of the act on a more uniform basis, it is recommended that the law be so amended as to clarify certain points which have frequently required the services of the Attorney General's office for interpretation.

STATE AID TO THE NEEDY BLIND.

Survey.

In 1928 three State departments, namely, Education, Institutions, and Social Welfare, were authorized by the Governor to investigate the condition of the needy blind in California and to make such recommendations as they jointly deemed necessary. Upon investigation it was found that the program under which the State was operating was some forty years old, and did not adequately meet the needs of the blind in this rapidly growing State. The survey brought out the fact that the majority of needy blind are more anxious to help themselves than to accept aid from any source, and they themselves asked for workshops or industrial schools where they could be trained in occupations suitable to the blind. As a result, a very splendid workshop and salesroom has been established by the Department of Institutions in Los Angeles, and a salesroom has been established in connection with the Industrial Home for the Adult Blind in Oakland.

Aid Authorized by Legislature.

In 1927 a constitutional amendment was voted on by the people, permitting the Legislature to grant State aid to the needy blind living outside of State or county institutions. In 1929 the Legislature passed an act which fixes $25 as the maximum amount that can be legally granted by the State to a needy blind person, provided the county grants an equal amount. The amount granted in each case is based entirely upon the applicant's need, and the procedure is identical with that of granting State aid to the needy aged. The survey estimated that the maximum number of applicants for aid would be close to 2000, but only 1412 have applied up to December 1, 1930. Of this number 1224 applications have received final action.

Aid Varies With Age of Applicant.

A study of our group of applicants shows that the largest number have become blind in later life; 63.35 per cent are sixty years of age or over. Our duty to this group is to see that they receive adequate care in comfortable surroundings. Of the younger group of blind coming to the attention of the State department, not only is provision made for care, but every effort is also made to place them in touch with opportunities leading to self-support or partial self-support. After training is received, this group in most cases will need assistance while becoming established as self-supporting members of society, and it is the aim of the department to step in again and provide this assistance without which the training in many instances would fall far short of its purpose. Fortunately today, through medical science and legislation designed to provide safeguards against industrial hazards, great reduction is being made in the prevalence of this handicap. We may all look forward to the day when the number of blind will be very materially lessened. In the meantime the State of California is making an outstanding effort to care for its needy blind.

RAISING STANDARDS IN COUNTY HOSPITALS.

Scope of County Hospital Service.

The largest unit of public welfare service in California, both in amount of public expenditures and number of persons affected, is the county hospitals. In the past year over 110,000 persons received care in county hospitals, in addition to thousands of out-patients attending the clinics, and the total expenditure for county hospitals was over $16,000,000. Aside from the State subsidy for the care of the tubercular, these expenditures represent county funds.

Relation of Department to County Hospitals.

The supervision and inspection of county hospitals is a duty of the Department of Social Welfare, since over 95 per cent of the costs are paid from tax funds and constitute the outstanding public charity of the State. The department, being a lay department, has not concerned itself with the medical aspects of the hospitals, but only with the matters which relate to the service of the hospitals as public charities.

Uniformity Helpful.

With the vast differences in size of our counties, the hospitals vary correspondingly. Some of our larger hospitals rank with the best in the country, and in some of the smaller counties the hospitals give nothing but custodial care for the aged. Certain problems, however, affect all the hospitals, and the establishment of standards and the adoption of policies will help all the hospitals to meet the needs of the communities which they desire to serve. For this purpose the department has taken steps to assist the hospitals by organizing committees which will serve as a central clearing house of information and will bring together the superintendents for consideration of their problems.

CONCLUSION.

In concluding this message I would call your attention to what I said in the beginning, that it attempts rather fully to follow the constitutional mandate that the Governor "shall communicate, by message to the Legislature at every session, the condition of the State, and recommend such matters as he may deem appropriate." Through constant touch with our State departments, as month by month they have reported their activities to the Governor's Council, I have been privileged to gain a very complete and exhaustive knowledge of California's governmental activities. This has been of immense value to me, and I have thought it wise to hand down in this message a somewhat complete report of these activities.

To indicate the continuity of the policies underlying State government, I think I can not do better than quote two paragraphs from my message of two years ago:

May I again express my conviction that the dominant public policy in the minds of all the people at this time is one of long-time planning? The facts and conditions reported to you in this biennial message are data upon which plans will be laid by you and by those who will follow you, for the progressive development of our State through many years to come. A careful analysis of true conditions is somewhat tedious to write as well as read, but such a careful analysis guarantees that our progress shall be sane and constant rather than spasmodic.

We are enjoying in California the privileges and blessings of a government which is the outgrowth of an era of progressivism that had its beginning twenty years ago. By a marshaling of facts, by an analysis of needs, and by surveys of our resources, we have before us an opportunity to launch a program of constructive progress which, without regard to persons or politics, will influence the history of California for a generation to come.

And now the time has come to say good-bye to those who have so generously aided me in all my endeavors in behalf of the State. Whatever measure of success my administration may have had has been made possible through the cooperation of these friends and friends of good government in California. I can think of no better wish for my successor than to trust that the men and women who shall serve in his administration will be as loyal and faithful and hard-working as those who have been with me during the past four years.

Respectfully submitted,

January 5, 1931.

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

Also:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of California.

I am submitting herewith copies of my message regarding acts of executive clemency during the years 1929 and 1930, in accordance with the provisions of article VII, of the State constitution, and section 1419 of the Penal Code.

Yours very respectfully,

January 5, 1931.

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

MESSAGE OF GOVERNOR C. C. YOUNG REGARDING ACTS OF EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY DURING THE YEARS 1929 AND 1930.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, January 5, 1931.

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of California.

In accordance with the provisions of Article VII of the State constitution, and of section 1419 of the Penal Code, I am hereby communicating to you each case of reprieve, commutation or pardon issued by me since my previous report two years ago. In this I am complying with the mandate of the constitution by "stating the name of the convict, the crime for which he was convicted, the sentence, its date, the date of the pardon or reprieve, and the reasons for granting the same."

In order that the record may show all the facts in each case, as well as my reasons for exercising executive clemency therein, in issuing each order I made a very detailed statement of the case; and for those who are interested in any particular case, I am transmitting the entire text of each executive order as an appendix to this communication.

NUMBER OF INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY.

I have exercised executive clemency in the cases of eighteen individuals during the past two years. There have been but two pardons from prison; but those cases involved, first: three individuals who were codefendants in a proceeding which apparently involved mistaken identity, and second, two others who were convicted on testimony later discredited. In addition to these, nine individuals have been pardoned, most of them to restore citizenship after their paroles had long since expired, or to enable them to acquire citizenship. There were two commutations from the death sentence to life imprisonment, both of them having been preceded by reprieves, as well as one other commutation of life sentence to the time served. There was one additional reprieve, following an attempt at suicide by the prisoner, who afterward recovered and was executed. As stated in my report of two years ago, I have not felt it wise to take action in misdemeanor cases or cases involving contempt of court.

ADVISORY PARDON BOARD.

I wish to give especial acknowledgment to the work of the Advisory Pardon Board, consisting of the Lieutenant Governor as chairman, the Attorney General, the Director of the Department of Penology, and the wardens of the two State prisons. This board has made a careful examination of all cases which I have submitted, and has presented to me exceedingly valuable reports of their investigations. Special mention is due Lieutenant Governor Carnahan, chairman of the board, who to my knowledge has personally spent many days in looking into cases where particular attention was required.

In all 45 cases have been referred to the board during the past two years, of which 28 have been given an unfavorable report and 17 have been recommended for pardon. Except in capital cases, it has been my uniform policy to await a recommendation from the Pardon Board before taking final action on any application for executive clemency. This board is invaluable in investigating matters for a Governor which he could not work out for himself owing to the pressure of other duties.

PRINCIPLES UNDERLYING EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY.

In my report of two years ago, I attempted to set forth certain principles which might well be a guide as to the bestowal of executive clemency. I have kept these principles before me during my entire administration, and believe that I can not do better than to repeat in this report four of them which seem particularly important. They are as follows:

1. In consideration of any case, it is necessary to keep in mind not only the individual but society as a whole. It goes without saying that there are within our prisons hundreds of individuals who have transgressed our laws, but who happily possess so many pleasing traits and appealing qualities that it would be very easy to wish to exercise clemency in their behalf. On the other hand, I believe that we must always keep in mind the inevitable effect upon society as a whole if it should appear an easy thing to avoid the penalty of the law through excess of sympathy for the individual on the part of a Governor. Too great exercise of the pardoning power has been tried in a few states, with very disastrous results.

2. In a number of cases I have had occasion to stress the point that, in the absence of new facts not brought to light at the trial, I should be extremely loath to overturn the verdicts of our juries and the judgment of our courts. If any new evidence is discovered that was not available to the jury, it is of course entitled to great consideration. But I do not believe a Governor should sit as a thirteenth juror, as it were, since he obviously can not have the advantages and opportunities of the twelve members of the panel who weighed the evidence and who saw and heard the living, speaking witnesses. A jury's verdict, therefore, must be normally regarded as conclusive, and to justify subsequent pardon in advance of parole, either innocence should be proven beyond all reasonable doubt, or it must be very clear that further punishment would involve a serious miscarriage of justice.

3. Under the very liberal parole laws which prevail in California, the first clemency to be shown a prisoner should normally be through action of the Parole Board. During the thirty-six years since parole was first established in this State, only about 18 per cent of those paroled have found their way back into the prisons, and the majority of these have gone back, not through the commission of a new crime, but for the breaking of parole regulations. During this period, of somewhat more than 12,000 paroled, over 10,000 have been restored to normal, law-abiding lives. Parole is extended to those unquestionably guilty of the crime for which they were convicted, but whose past history and whose prison behavior makes it probable that they can be rehabilitated, as well as to those concerning whom there is a doubt as to their guilt or the propriety of their conviction, but not a sufficient certainty of innocence to warrant an absolute pardon. It is clearly an erroneous assumption that acceptance of parole implies admission of guilt.

4. During the period of parole the former prisoner is bound to conduct himself properly, for to do so is a condition of the necessarily rather rigid parole regulations. He must be industrious, temperate, law-abiding, and in other ways justify the freedom which has been accorded him. As soon as the period of parole has expired, however, and conditions of parole no longer compel him to observe a course of good conduct as the price of freedom from prison restraint, I believe the State should give him assurance that he may look forward to ultimate pardon and restoration to citizenship, provided after a reasonable length of time he can show that he has proved himself worthy of such recognition.

EXECUTIONS DURING PAST TWO YEARS.

During the past two years 27 men have been executed at the two prisons in this State, as follows:

Name	Executed	Prison
Kuryla, George	Jan. 25, 1929	Folsom
Randolph, H. H.	Feb. 8, 1929	Folsom
Lapierre, Edgar	Feb. 15, 1929	San Quentin

In each of these cases appeals were made for a commutation of sentence from death to imprisonment for life. In each instance I personally read every word of the transcript of testimony taken at the trial and all letters and documents relating to the cases that reached this office, and also talked with all who came to see me.

ACTS OF EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY.

The several acts of executive clemency during the last two years are treated briefly in the following paragraphs, according to the classifications of reprieves, commutations, pardons, and restorations, the last named being pardons either to restore citizenship and civil rights after parole and discharge, or to permit aliens to obtain citizenship or escape enforced deportation. The full text of all the executive orders appear in the appendix chronologically just as they are found in the records.

A. REPRIEVES.

1. Allen Ellis was sentenced to be hanged at San Quentin on May 17, 1929. Affidavits were presented to me which raised a possibility of his having been under eighteen years of age at the time of the murder. To allow time for a full examination into the case he was reprieved until July 19, 1929. On July 17, 1929, his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

2. George Costello was sentenced to be hanged at San Quentin on October 17, 1929. On October 14th he attempted suicide, and was so badly injured that in the opinion of the warden and the prison physician he would have been unable to mount the scaffold on the day set. To allow an opportunity for recovery his execution was postponed to December 13, 1929, on which date he was executed.

3. Joe Troche was sentenced to be hanged at San Quentin on April 18, 1930. His execution was postponed to April 25th, to avoid an execution on Good Friday. During the intervening week I received a letter signed by six justices of the State Supreme Court and a Presiding Justice of the District Court of Appeals expressing the opinion that the case was one calling for executive clemency. To give time for the investigation required, the execution was again postponed to May 23, 1930. On May 20th I commuted his sentence to life imprisonment.

B. COMMUTATIONS.

1. Allen Ellis, sentence commuted July 17, 1929, from death to life imprisonment without parole. Convicted in Fresno County of murder in the first degree. There was no question as to his guilt. However, if he was under the age of eighteen at the time of the murder the law would not permit his hanging. The evidence was somewhat conflicting at the trial, but the jury believed he was eighteen years three months old when the crime was committed. After the trial I received a number of affidavits from persons who did not testify at the trial, which created a reasonable possibility that Ellis was only seventeen years three months old at the time. For this reason alone I commuted his sentence to life imprisonment, without parole.

2. Joe Troche, sentence commuted May 20, 1930, from death to life imprisonment. Convicted in El Dorado County of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hanged at San Quentin on April 18, 1930. There were two reprieves, one because the date originally set fell on Good Friday, and the other to allow time to study the case. Six justices of the State Supreme Court and a Presiding Justice of the District Court of Appeal joined in a letter stating that the case presented a situation where executive clemency should be applied. A question as to Troche's mental condition at the time of the crime, and a possibility that the girl who was killed met her death by a bullet which first entered Troche's head in an attempt at suicide, there having been only one empty shell found, warranted this commutation.

3. Horace Magee, sentence commuted January 2, 1931, from life imprisonment to that portion of his term which has now elapsed. Convicted in Riverside County of first degree murder and sentenced to life imprisonment at Folsom February 29, 1908. Served twelve years; on parole since 1920. Good conduct during parole period. Crime was the result of a quarrel and really equivalent to manslaughter, maximum penalty for which is ten years. The judge who tried the case is dead; the then district attorney recommended clemency; the Advisory Pardon Board recommended commutation as granted.

C. PARDONS.

1. Mike Garvey, Harvey Leshner and Phil Rohan, pardoned June 20, 1930. Convicted in Los Angeles County on January 11, 1928, of burglary and murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment. Pardons recommended by the district attorney of Los Angeles County, Hon. W. T. Aggeler, the judge who presided at the trial, and all of the members of the Advisory Pardon Board. The convictions in these cases were based almost entirely upon the testimony of a ten-year old boy, which has been discredited, and that of a confessed bootlegger, who has since entirely repudiated his own testimony.

2. Miles K. Ledbetter and Walter E. Evans. Pardoned January 5, 1931. Convicted in Los Angeles County of bribery. Sentenced to one to fourteen years in San Quentin. Received there July 2, 1930. Now there. Full statement in Appendix.

D. RESTORATIONS.

1. Frank Gleichauf, pardoned January 29, 1929. Convicted in San Francisco October 27, 1886, of murder in the first degree. Sentenced to life imprisonment. Paroled September 8, 1908. Violated parole; recommitted September 7, 1911. Paroled again September 1, 1912. The original records in this case were destroyed in the San Francisco fire in 1906. Judge D. J. Murphy who tried the case, in recommending parole in 1908, wrote that he would have been satisfied with a lighter sentence, because of somewhat extenuating circumstances. The parole violation in 1908 was that of leaving the county after a quarrel, and failing to report. Gleichauf had been steadily employed since 1912, had a good reputation and was well recommended. The Advisory Pardon Board were unanimous in recommending executive clemency. Twenty years of imprisonment followed by over sixteen years of parole, with exemplary conduct, would seem to entitle this man to a restoration to citizenship.

2. John Vidovich, pardoned August 14, 1929. Plead guilty to grand larceny in Los Angeles County. Sentenced April 4, 1927. Paroled April 28, 1928. Parole expired August 9, 1929. Unless he was pardoned at this time he was subject to deportation as an alien convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude. The criminal offense seemed to have been mingled with a civil action by some of his fellow countrymen, and probably was brought about by them in order to enforce settlement. The Advisory Pardon Board recommended a pardon on the grounds that the crime was probably only petty larceny; that Vidovich would not be an undesirable citizen if allowed to remain in this country, and that if he were deported his family would be without support and would become public charges. The judge who tried the case expressed grave doubt that grand larceny had been committed. The sheriff of Los Angeles County, the assistant probation officer and other responsible people testified as to the good character of Vidovich, before and after the alleged crime was committed.

3. Edith Marjorie Davidson (nee Truell), pardoned September 16, 1929. Plead guilty to four charges of forgery in Los Angeles County. Sentenced on one charge July 27, 1926; placed on probation on other three. Paroled from San Quentin September 17, 1927, discharged from parole December 11, 1928, and from probation on July 16, 1929. While on parole, with consent of the Prison Board she married an American citizen, she being a Canadian. This pardon was necessary if her deportation was to be prevented. It was recommended by the Advisory Pardon Board. This offense was evidently the one false step in her life. Her husband is a responsible business man. The pardon had the approval of the judge who tried the case, the district attorney, the chief probation officer of the county, and many prominent citizens of Los Angeles. Her repentance, her good conduct before and after the offense, warranted a removal of her civil disabilities so that she might become a citizen of this country.

4. Frank L. Vandusen, pardoned June 26, 1930, convicted in Humboldt County of fraudulent registration and voting, in May, 1927. On May 26, 1927, the time fixed for sentence, the court granted probation, to continue for two years, without the customary restrictions. The probationary period has expired, the man has received a severe lesson, and has led an exemplary life except for this one offense, which did not involve moral turpitude and was very probably committed through a mistaken interpretation of a technical law.

5. Ted Lynch, pardoned July 8, 1930. Convicted of involuntary manslaughter in Ventura County. Probation denied. Sentenced to San Quentin November 12, 1923, paroled November 2, 1924, discharged from parole March 12, 1926. Driving on the wrong side of the road while intoxicated he ran into and killed an elderly lady. Realizing the gravity of his offense he did not testify in his own behalf and accepted his sentence as just and merited. Upon his return from San Quentin his employers gave him a better position than the one he had left. The judge who presided at his trial, the then district attorney, the present one, a majority of the jurors in the case, the legislators from that district, together with many other fellow citizens joined in recommending his pardon. In view of his fine spirit and his determination to be a useful citizen, it was granted.

6. Clifton R. Ticknor, pardoned October 14, 1930. On September 19, 1919, Ticknor plead guilty in Orange County to a violation of section 284, Penal Code (knowingly and wilfully marrying the wife of another). His indeterminate sentence was fixed by the Prison Board at one year; shortened to ten months for good behavior. He was released July 19, 1920. There seems to have been some doubt as to the degree of his guilt. Moreover, his good conduct for over ten years since his release was testified to by his employers, who wished to aid him in securing a business of his own. A pardon was recommended by the Advisory Pardon Board.

7. Andrew O'Keefe, pardoned October 14, 1930. Convicted in San Francisco of second degree burglary, March 28, 1914. Released September 5, 1917. He had been previously convicted on a like charge and was in San Quentin from 1909 to 1913. At the time of his conviction he was a heavy drinker and committed both crimes while under the influence of liquor. While in San Quentin the last time he learned to read books, gained a new outlook on life, and since his release has completely rehabilitated himself. Since he was a second term, it was necessary for the justices of the Supreme Court to approve his pardon, which was done. It also has the approval of the Advisory Pardon Board, as well as his employers and other responsible people who have watched with interest his complete reformation.

8. A. G. Halastik, pardoned January 2, 1930. Convicted in Sacramento County of violation of section 288, Penal Code. Sentenced to six years at San Quentin on July 9, 1924. Paroled May 22, 1926. Parole expired December 20, 1928. Good record during and after parole. Affidavits of complaining witness, eleven years old at time of trial, upon whose testimony conviction was based, and of her father and mother, a statement and recommendation by ten jurors in the case, and a letter from Hon. John F. Pullen, the judge who tried the case, raised considerable doubt as to the justice of the conviction. The Advisory Pardon Board recommended this action.

9. Wm. J. O'Bryan, pardoned January 5, 1931. Convicted in San Luis Obispo of first degree murder. Sentenced to life imprisonment in San Quentin in 1911 and released on parole in 1921; returned to Baltimore on release; good conduct; steady employment. All parole restrictions observed; mitigating circumstances. Recommended by Advisory Pardon Board.

THE CASE OF BILLINGS AND MOONEY.

In my previous report on Reprieves, Commutations and Pardons submitted to the Legislature on January 10, 1929, I made reference to the case of Thomas J. Mooney, who had presented to me a petition for executive clemency. So much has been written during the past two years with reference to Billings and Mooney that a brief recital of the occurrences since my last report will probably be sufficient to bring the case down to date.

Article VII of the State constitution provides that "Neither the Governor nor the Legislature shall have power to grant pardons, or commutations of sentence, in any case where the convict has been twice convicted of a felony, unless upon the written recommendation of a majority of the judges of the Supreme Court." Owing to the fact that Warren K. Billings had been convicted of a prior felony, it was accordingly necessary for his case to be favorably considered by the court before any executive action could be taken.

Accordingly, on November 7, 1929, Billings applied to the justices of the Supreme Court for a pardon recommendation. The members of the court gave long and careful consideration of this petition, and in a communication to me, dated July 2, 1930, six of the seven justices made a lengthy report, stating that they were unable to recommend a consideration of the Billings application. Within a very few days thereafter I made the following statement, denying Thomas J. Mooney's application for a pardon:

I have before me an application for pardon in the case of Thomas J. Mooney, now undergoing life imprisonment in San Quentin Prison, together with a communication from the State Supreme Court in which six of its seven members refuse to recommend a pardon for Warren K. Billings, convicted of the same crime though at a separate trial. Mooney was tried during January and February of 1917 and convicted for guilty participation in a bomb explosion in San Francisco on July 22, 1916, an explosion which took a toll of ten lives and maimed and wounded many more. The original sentence of death imposed upon the defendant was a year and a half later commuted to imprisonment for life.

Although two previous Governors had refused to pardon Mooney, I have nevertheless given his application most thorough and exceedingly careful consideration. I have been in receipt of many hundreds of communications from all portions of the world, most of them evidencing a sincere belief in the prisoner's innocence and urging his pardon, though in practically every instance with no first-hand knowledge of the case except what they have been told by others, or have read either in the press or in literature sent out by the Mooney Defense Committee. There has been no propaganda or pressure of any kind directed to the keeping of Mooney in prison.

In making my study of the case, I have done so with absolutely no prejudice against Tom Mooney for any social theories he may hold or for any other crimes with which he may have been charged, or may have been capable of committing. If he was innocent of this particular crime, to keep him in prison would be an ineffaceable blot upon the good name of the State. On the other hand, if he was not innocent, he was guilty of one of the most uncalculated and atrocious crimes ever committed—the wanton murder of unsuspecting men, women and children, gathered upon a public street to witness a patriotic demonstration of San Francisco's citizens.

Coupled with the case of Mooney was the parallel case of Warren K. Billings, who several months before had been convicted of participation in the same crime, and who had already served a term in prison for another offense. The constitution of California expressly forbids a Governor to grant executive clemency to a twice-convicted felon except upon recommendation by a majority of the justices of the Supreme Court; and on November 7, 1929, Billings applied to the court for such a recommendation. In order to secure all possible assistance and advice as to the case of Mooney, I referred it to the Advisory Pardon Board, which is regularly constituted by law to assist in investigating applications for executive clemency. Their report is now before me, and is hereby made a part of this statement.

Although I had spent many months in studying these cases and had carefully read the transcripts of the trials, as well as the thousands of pages of the briefs, petitions, affidavits and other documents filed with me, as continuously stated during my investigations I had not been able to convince myself of the innocence of the prisoners; but I had been convinced that innocence or guilt of the one implied corresponding innocence or guilt of the other, and that whatever treatment was accorded the one should in all fairness apply to the other.

Accordingly, it was with much satisfaction that I learned that Billings had applied to the justices of the Supreme Court for a pardon recommendation, for I realized that this would mean an independent and unbiased study by the highest judicial body of the State, composed of men of specialized training and outstanding ability; and I sincerely welcomed this assistance in a case which I had found exceedingly difficult and baffling. Early in November, 1929, I expressed myself on this matter as follows:

"In all the maze of conflicting testimony at the trials, and in all the doubts raised since that time, one thing stands out clearly, and is conceded equally by those who favor and those who oppose a pardon—that both men are guilty or that neither is. Although they were tried separately for the same offense, the evidence at both trials in all essential particulars applies to one as well as to the other. Therefore, whatever recommendation the Supreme Court makes or refuses to make in the Billings case must apply with equal force to the case of Mooney."

I have quoted this statement which I made when Billings first made application to the Supreme Court justices, for I would not have it thought that I have changed my attitude in this matter in any particular. In fact, I have consistently stated that the justices' decision, after their independent and unbiased study, would of necessity be conclusive; and in order to insure this independent study, I have scrupulously refrained from discussing the matter with the members of the court. In fact, until their recent communication of July 2d was sent to me, I had not received the slightest intimation as to what their recommendation would be.

In denying Billings' application for a favorable recommendation, the justices lay particular stress upon the witness, John McDonald, who identified both Billings and Mooney as the men who placed the bomb which caused the loss of life. Both Billings and Mooney now contend that McDonald's original testimony was wiped out by an affidavit made four years later in New York City, in which he repudiated his original testimony. The question naturally arises as to how this repudiation was secured, and on what basis it is entitled to more credit than the testimony given on oath at the trials, testimony which might easily have led to a death sentence for both defendants.

For various reasons which are set forth at length, the justices distrusted this affidavit; but in order to give Billings the benefit of the doubt determined that "some effort should be made to locate John McDonald, with a view to such further questions as might serve to shed light upon the circumstances and motives attending and animating the making of the affidavit in question." This was the wisest and fairest action the member of the court could have taken, for if it could be shown that such witnesses as John McDonald had issued false affidavits through improper motives, obviously no pardon or commutation could be recommended; while if it could be shown that the repudiating affidavits were true and dependable, the case against Billings would be materially weakened.

Right here comes an action on the part of Billings that seems to admit of no explanation, namely a letter under date of May 4, 1930, addressed to the court protesting against any such outside investigation as they were proposing, and stating his belief that neither the constitution nor the Penal Code conferred upon the Supreme Court the right to make such investigation. Upon the receipt of this letter the justices abandoned any attempts to secure the presence of McDonald. Meanwhile, there is no escaping the fact that Billings threw himself open to suspicion through his apparent fear to have McDonald come before the members of the court, where the circumstances surrounding his affidavit might be investigated.

In the case of Mooney, there were two witnesses who testified to seeing Billings and Mooney at the scene of the explosion. One of these was McDonald, who also testified in the Billings case, and the other was the cattle dealer, F. C. Oxman, who did not testify in that case. I have made a special study of Oxman's testimony, and desire to say that I thoroughly discredit it. I have personally and at great length interviewed both Mr. and Mrs. Hatcher of Woodland, where Oxman visited on the morning of July 22d, and am convinced that he did not arrive in San Francisco until hours after the explosion took place. I believe that Oxman was nothing more or less than a publicity-seeking romancer, though I do not believe that his connection with the case was through any connivance or conspiracy with the prosecuting officials. I can not agree, however, that the case against Mooney falls with the discrediting of Oxman, for the testimony of John McDonald is as strong a factor in that case as in the case of Billings.

I think there would be general agreement with the concurring opinion of Associate Justice Shenk, who, though conceding that the showing now made by the applicant does not warrant a recommendation for pardon, nevertheless insists that "The means should be made available, as occasion might require, to disclose the circumstances and conditions under which a witness, thoroughly examined and cross-examined at a public trial, has later cast reflections upon or repudiated his former testimony given under oath in open court. * * * The important thing is to arrive at the truth of the matter, and in order to do so we should have the power to employ any appropriate means to satisfy ourselves of the truth or falsity of the repudiation, especially in the absence of any statute or rule governing the procedure in the premises. If we should exercise that power it might be that the truth would be satisfactorily brought to light, either for or against the application."

In view of Justice Shenk's observation in this regard, I would most respectfully suggest to the members of the Supreme Court that, should McDonald or any other material witness who has repudiated his former testimony appear before them for the purpose of proving that such repudiations are trustworthy, and that their former testimony was perjured, it may be only just and right to consider the propriety of giving a hearing to such witnesses in the case of Billings, just as I should desire to do in the case of Mooney.

Until the truth of the repudiating affidavits can be definitely established, no one can question the decision of the Supreme Court or the reasoning of the Advisory Pardon Board, for there are certainly some portions of McDonald's affidavit which appear patently untrustworthy. For instance in his affidavit McDonald alleges that no proper identification of either Mooney or Billings was made by him, that Lieutenant Goff took him to the door of Mooney's cell and said "This is your man; this is Mooney"; and that he subsequently took him to Billings' cell, "asked a turnkey to open the door, and said, 'Come out here, Billings.'" Upon careful investigation I am convinced that nothing of this kind occurred; nor can any one believe that Billings and Mooney and their attorneys knew of such a spurious identification without calling attention to the matter in either of the trials.

In view of what has been said above, and in view of the fact that from the very first I have considered the cases of Billings and Mooney as parallel, and in common with all others have recognized that both must be guilty or both innocent, until some further light is shed upon the case which I do not now possess I manifestly must accept the conclusions of the Supreme Court and the Advisory Pardon Board, and accordingly must at this time deny a pardon to Thomas J. Mooney. I am aware that this decision will be disappointing to many, particularly to those who have come to feel strongly on this subject without having had the opportunity to study the case at first hand; but in a matter like this I must be guided by a conscientious regard for my oath of office, rather than a willingness to respond to popular appeal.

Along this line I possibly can do no better than to quote from a letter written in December of last year to Mr. Fremont Older, who has from the beginning taken such an earnest and sincere interest in these cases:

"Although I realize just as well as you that whatever decision I reach may be seized upon by political opponents, even though they themselves through similar study would have reached exactly the same conclusions as I, nevertheless the proper disposition of these cases is a duty too sacred to justify attack by those who would seek to use it as a political football. The good name of the State demands that this whole matter be removed entirely from the realm of politics; and I trust that it is not necessary to pledge you my word that, whether I am in a position to decide these cases before a campaign or during a campaign or after a campaign, my final decision will not depend one iota upon when it is made."

That this "final decision" has been made at the present time rather than six months ago is due to my feeling that out of deference to the Supreme Court I could not properly act upon the case of Mooney until the members of the court, in accordance with the constitution, had acted on the parallel case of Billings. I am announcing my decision at the earliest possible moment after receiving the communication from the court.

As will be noted, in this statement I called attention to the fact that the justices had expressed their desire to secure the presence of John McDonald, a material witness in the case, but abandoned any attempts in this direction after receiving a letter from Billings protesting against any such outside investigation. Nevertheless in my statement I referred as follows to the observation of Associate Justice Shenk, who expressed himself as believing that such investigation should be welcomed:

"In view of Justice Shenk's observation in this regard, I would most respectfully suggest to the members of the Supreme Court that, should McDonald or any other material witness who has repudiated his former testimony appear before them for the purpose of proving that such repudiations are trustworthy, and that the former testimony was perjured, it may be only just and right to consider the propriety of giving a hearing to such witness."

It was almost immediately after this that McDonald was produced in the city of Baltimore. A new petition for a favorable recommendation was made by Billings, in which it was declared that he now wished the whole case thoroughly investigated. The justices gave their consent, and agreed to open up the matter to the fullest possible extent with the purpose of hearing McDonald or any other witnesses who might appear before them, a proposal which was speedily carried out.

This hearing occupied several weeks of the justices' time during the months of July and August. Every one who cared to put in an appearance was welcomed to do so and there was probably the nearest approach to a rehearing of the case which could be possible at this late date. The justices even went so far as to go to Folsom Prison in order to listen to the testimony of Billings himself. The transcript of all these proceedings occupies three large volumes, and was made available both to the members of the court and to the Advisory Pardon Board.

This hearing undoubtedly served a very useful purpose, since it brought vividly before the people facts which had been forgotten and cleared up many misconceptions on both sides of the case. On December 1, 1930, six of the seven justices again presented an adverse report on the Billings petition, and to a considerably greater length than in their report of five months before.

Near the close of the hearings before the Supreme Court justices, Mr. Frank P. Walsh and Mr. Cyrus B. King, attorneys for Thomas J. Mooney, requested Lieutenant Governor Carnahan, as chairman of the Advisory Pardon Board, and myself, to call John McDonald before the Pardon Board in order that his testimony might be secured before he departed for his home in Baltimore. This request was granted, and on August 2, 1930, McDonald testified before the board and myself at the State Capitol in Sacramento in the presence of the attorneys for both Billings and Mooney. The examination was largely conducted by the Lieutenant Governor, but all of the attorneys were permitted to take whatever part, and bring out whatever facts, they might desire. A full transcript of the hearing was also taken and preserved.

At the close of this hearing, in view of Mr. Walsh's contemplated departure for the East, an agreement was entered into between himself, Mr. King, and the chairman of the Pardon Board that further consideration of the Mooney application by the board should be deferred until after the decision in the Billings case. It was understood that after the justices had rendered this decision, the Pardon Board would hear any further evidence which Mooney's attorneys might wish to present on his behalf, and that meanwhile no consideration would be given by the board, either to the record then before it, or to the additional record in the Billings case.

On October 22, 1930, while the case was still in the hands of the Supreme Court justices, Mr. Cyrus B. King, who with Mr. Frank P. Walsh is attorney for Mooney, appeared before the chairman of the Advisory Pardon Board, Lieutenant Governor

Carnahan, and myself, to ask if, after the decision was rendered with respect to Billings, a hearing would be granted on the separate petition of Mooney, in which they might bring forward facts not presented in the recent case of Billings. Recognizing the fairness of this request, we readily gave the desired permission, as is shown in the following letter from Mr. King, which he sent me on October 25th as a memorandum of our interview:

"October 25, 1930.

*His Excellency C. C. Young,
Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, California.*

Dear Sir:

Following our conference last Wednesday, I wrote Mr. Walsh, advising him of the points upon which we had agreed, so that he may be guided in his future activities in the Mooney case by these agreements.

So that there may be no possibility of a misunderstanding which might prejudice our rights, I list herein the points which I mentioned to Mr. Walsh. If I am incorrect in any of my conclusions or if you understood any of the agreements differently, I would greatly appreciate your so advising me at your earliest convenience, so that I may communicate to Mr. Walsh our true understandings in the matter.

The points which I advised Mr. Walsh we had agreed upon are as follows:

1. Neither you nor the Pardon Board have given any extensive consideration to the renewed application of Thomas Mooney and will not do so until after the decision by the Supreme Court in the Billings matter.

2. The members of the Pardon Board have ordered copies of the transcript of the Billings hearing for their use.

3. After the decision by the Supreme Court we are to have a hearing before you and the Pardon Board to present such new matter or such arguments as may be deemed relevant.

4. I am to present to Lieutenant Governor Carnahan and the members of the Advisory Pardon Board in writing our arguments in favor of the hearing of Mooney as a witness in his own behalf.

5. The only contingency that may prevent a decision on the application by yourself and the present Pardon Board would be a decision on the Billings matter by the Supreme Court too late in the year to enable us to present such matters as are deemed necessary for a full and complete hearing before yourself and the board.

6. We are to have the opportunity to present a brief in support of the application after the decision in the Billings matter by the Supreme Court.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Lieutenant Governor Carnahan, as some of the points involved concern the Advisory Pardon Board.

May I take this opportunity of thanking you for the interview accorded me last Wednesday, and for the courteous manner in which I was treated by both you and the Lieutenant Governor.

Very respectfully yours,

(Signed)

CYRUS B. KING."

On December 1st, the day the report was issued by the Supreme Court justices, Mr. King wired me, stating that he expected Mr. Walsh to arrive in California about December 15th, and asking that the hearing agreed upon might take place shortly after that date. I immediately transmitted this message to Lieutenant Governor Carnahan and wired Mr. King to that effect. Mr. Carnahan on December 5th wrote to Mr. King, acknowledging this telegram, and concluding with a request that he be at once advised as to the latter's wishes in the matter. "So that if you desire to take the matter up during December, I will have time to give the members reasonable notice of the date of hearing." Not having received any word from Mr. King in response to this letter, several days before the December meeting of the board the board's secretary wired him to inform him as to the date and place of the meeting.

Mr. King appeared at this meeting of the Advisory Pardon Board, and requested that certain matters hereinafter noted be placed in the record of proceedings upon the renewed application of Mooney.

He called to the attention of the board the fact that during the proceedings before the justices of the Supreme Court in the Billings case, John McDonald appeared as a witness before the justices; that, at the request of counsel for Mooney, the Governor and the members of the Pardon Board met in Sacramento on the second day of August, 1930, for the purpose of hearing McDonald's testimony in regard to the Mooney application; that at the conclusion of that testimony it was agreed by the Governor, the chairman of the board and Mooney's counsel that no further action should be taken by the Pardon Board in regard to the Mooney application until the justices of the Supreme Court had rendered their opinion on the Billings case; that sometime thereafter counsel for Mooney filed with the Governor and the members of the board a petition that Mooney be heard as a witness in his own behalf.

Mr. King further recited the facts already mentioned; namely, that the opinion of the justices was made public on December 1, 1930; that he immediately wired the Governor and the chairman of the board asking them to grant a hearing about December 15th, when Mr. Walsh was expected to arrive in California; that the Governor at once replied that he had referred the matter to the chairman, Lieutenant Governor Carnahan; that the chairman asked that he be advised if there was a desire to take the matter up during December, in order that the board members might have reasonable notice of a hearing; that the counsel for Mooney, recognizing the fact that there was but a short time remaining before certain members of the board retired from office, did not press their application for a hearing before the present board.

Because of these facts, Mr. King requested that the board report to the Governor that except for hearing McDonald's testimony it had taken no action upon the application of Mooney, nor upon the petition to have him heard as a witness; and further requested that the entire matter, together with the transcript of McDonald's testimony and other records, be referred back to the Governor without recommendation.

Accordingly, except for the thoroughly unsatisfactory testimony of McDonald, and subsequently the justices' recent report on the Billings case, there has been nothing brought before me in this matter since July 8th, when in the case of Thomas J. Mooney I rendered my decision as printed above, denying a pardon. I have therefore manifestly no grounds for altering that decision.

Respectfully submitted.

January 5, 1931.

APPENDIX.

PARDON.

Frank Gleichauf was convicted of the crime of murder, first degree, and was sentenced on the twenty-seventh day of October, 1886, by the superior court in and for the City and County of San Francisco, Hon. D. J. Murphy, Judge, presiding, to be imprisoned for life at the State Prison at San Quentin, where he was received on October 31, 1886, and given No. 12302. After serving some twenty-two years of his term, he was paroled September 8, 1908. Subsequently he violated the terms of his parole and was returned to San Quentin September 7, 1911. Nearly a year later he was paroled a second time, on September 1, 1912, which second parole has continued in full force and effect up to the present time. His age is some seventy years.

I have recently received an application from Frank Gleichauf asking that executive clemency be exercised by me in his behalf. I referred the matter to the Advisory Pardon Board for consideration, and that board, after a thorough and exhaustive study of the case, recommended to me "that executive clemency be granted."

A review of the facts and attendant circumstances is necessary to a complete understanding of this case. The records in the case were destroyed in the San Francisco fire of 1906, and it is necessary to set forth at length certain statements by Judge D. J. Murphy, who presided at the trial, contained in a letter from him to the State Board of Prison Directors at the time of Gleichauf's first parole:

"The main circumstances, as I remember them, and which have been recalled by the statement of General Solomon, who defended him, are as follows: Said prisoner was employed in the Chicago Brewery in this city. On the fourth of July, I think it was, the employees of said brewery, among whom was the deceased, Richter, who was foreman in the brewery, were celebrating the brewing of steam beer for the first time. They were all drinking freely and became affected by their potations. While in this condition a quarrel arose between the deceased and prisoner, in which the deceased used harsh and insulting language to the prisoner. I remember that there was evidence that the prisoner went to his room and that the deceased followed him, continuing the use of abusive language. Soon after the prisoner went down to the brewery proper, having put his pistol in his pocket, and, I think, went to work. The quarrel was renewed by the deceased using other offensive language, and a scuffle took place between them. It was claimed at the trial that the deceased was in the habit of carrying a knife, but my recollection is there was no evidence that he drew such knife on that occasion.

During the scuffle the prisoner drew his pistol and fired the shot which caused the death of the deceased. As I now recollect the prisoner proved a good character, and that he had never been in trouble before.

Such are briefly the facts as I remember them. I remember very well saying to the district attorney and to the prisoner's counsel that I would have been better satisfied if the verdict had been for a lesser degree, as then I would be able to fix the term of imprisonment; and I now believe that I would not have fixed the term for more than fifteen or twenty years.

If my memory serves me, at the time of the homicide there were a great many acts of serious violence being committed in our city, and courts and juries felt called upon to do what they could to restore peace and order; and this might, I don't say it did, have helped cause the severe verdict.

The prisoner having served twenty years of imprisonment, and during that term having behaved himself, and having earned the good opinion of the officers of the prison, as I am informed, and having been of previous good character, I cheerfully join in his request for a parole, and recommend that the same be granted."

There was at this time on file in the warden's office at San Quentin a certificate of conduct, as follows:

"His conduct at all times has been most exemplary and entitles him to the maximum percentage of credits as required by Parole Rule No. 1."

The circumstances attendant upon Gleichauf's violation of his first parole are best explained by the statements of his attorney, Sylvester J. McAtee of San Francisco, to the Advisory Pardon Board. They are as follows:

"Upon his parole in 1908, Gleichauf was given employment by one John Strom at Jackson, Amador County, where he worked for one and one-half years. * * * There was employed with him a man of French nationality. * * * This other man resented the action of Gleichauf in calling his attention to an obvious neglect of duty in a minor particular. Thereupon, this other man, who knew that Gleichauf was a paroled prisoner, called Gleichauf vile and indecent names, particularly referring to his nationality and to the fact that he was a paroled prisoner. A quarrel ensued, ending in a fight when the other man made an attack upon him. In the encounter the other man was injured by a blow on the head, and immediately thereafter sought vengeance by declaring that he would have Gleichauf arrested and returned to State prison. Gleichauf in a panic at the prospect of returning to prison, and knowing this disadvantage due to the fact that he was a convicted murderer upon parole, did the unwise thing of leaving Jackson, Amador County, and failed thereafter to report to the Parole Office as he was required to do. Thereafter, he went successively to Los Angeles, to the San Francisco Bay district, and later to the state of Oregon, where he was arrested and returned to San Quentin Prison as a parole violator for failing to report as required in September, 1911."

Gleichauf's attorney assures me that the following is a statement as to his employment since his second parole:

"Since parole, he has been employed as janitor by Famous Players Lasky Corporation, 201 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, California, Herman Wobber, manager, since January 9, 1922. Prior to that time, and since parole, he was employed for six months at the Jewish Home on Silver Avenue in San Francisco, and prior to that time was employed variously as stableman, watchman and general laborer."

It has been my settled policy that a parole should normally precede a pardon, and that, before an applicant should merit a restoration of citizenship and civil rights, a reasonable length of time after final discharge must elapse for him to demonstrate, with the conditions and restrictions of parole no longer compelling him to observe a course of proper conduct as the price of his freedom from prison restraint, that he is honestly and sincerely endeavoring to rehabilitate himself and lead a useful and law-abiding life.

Obviously this policy can not be followed in those cases where life sentence was imposed prior to the enactment of the indeterminate sentence law, as there can be no expiration of parole and no final discharge.

I have concluded, therefore, that in such cases at least ten years on parole should be served before consideration should be given to an application for restoration of citizenship. After that time, if the applicant can show, as in this case, that he has been honest, industrious and loyal in the performance of his duties, and that he has inspired the confidence and respect of his employers and others with whom he has been in daily association, I believe he is entitled to consideration at the hands of the State and that he should be afforded the opportunity of regaining his position in society as a free man.

Gleichauf has met all of these requirements, and, for more than sixteen years, has labored patiently and industriously in the hope of recognition and help.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, and in consideration of the fact that for nearly twenty-two years Gleichauf paid the penalty for his crime in prison; that his conduct during that period was exemplary; that for the past sixteen years, while on parole, he has demonstrated that he intends to live a peaceful, industrious and law-abiding life, and is, therefore, entitled to such recognition and help from the State as may be given him by the granting of this pardon, and in view of the recommendations of the Advisory Pardon Board and others hereinbefore referred to, do hereby pardon Frank Gleichauf of the crime of murder, first degree.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this twenty-ninth day of January, 1929.

REPRIEVE.

I am today granting a two-months' reprieve in the case of Allen Ellis, now in San Quentin, and sentenced for execution tomorrow. This was a particularly atrocious murder where three boys of about eighteen years of age held up for purposes of robbery the hard-working head of a family and father of four small children. Upon his refusal to halt, Ellis shot and killed him.

The age of the defendant was the only issue before the jury and is the only question before me now. A California law, enacted in 1921, provides that capital punishment shall not be imposed for a crime committed by any one under the age of eighteen. The prosecution contends that, at the time of the murder, Ellis was nine days past his eighteenth birthday. Until after he was arrested for this murder, every statement made by him and his parents respecting his age was to this effect. Subsequently, at the trial and ever since, they have insisted he was one year younger.

Since the trial there has been found the woman who attended the mother of Ellis at the time of his birth, and who makes affidavit to the fact that he is one year younger than was apparently shown by the evidence. The judge who presided at the trial and the district attorney discredit this affidavit, which is very probably colored by friendship for the family. The attorney for Ellis, however, believes that the facts set forth in the affidavit may be substantiated if time is given for that purpose.

The principal reason, however, which leads me to grant this reprieve is the fact that, owing to my being occupied every day and evening with work incident to the legislative session, I have not been able to give the time to a study of this case which its importance should require. In every other capital case I have read the transcript of testimony, often two or three times, together with all other material which may have been accumulated relating to the case. In the present instance I have not done this, and I feel unwilling that the judgment of the law should be carried out until I have made my usual study. I can not find time for this study until after the strenuous days of the bill-signing period are over, and I have accordingly granted a longer reprieve than I would under ordinary circumstances.

During this time I trust that the facts regarding this question of age may be thoroughly established. As in all such cases, after a trial, I must assume that the burden of proof rests with the defense, but I desire to give full opportunity to establish whatever facts may be adduced. Meanwhile, as said above, I would repeat that this crime was an atrocious one, and deserves no mitigation of punishment unless it can be clearly shown that Ellis actually comes under the eighteen-year law.

Accordingly, to give myself adequate time for a more thorough study of the case, and also to afford to the defense opportunity for making a more conclusive showing as to this question of age than has yet been brought forward, I am granting a reprieve until July 19, 1929.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this tenth day of May, 1929.

COMMUTATION.

In the case of Allen Ellis, now in San Quentin and sentenced for execution on Friday, July 19, 1929, I am hereby commuting the sentence of death to imprisonment for life without parole. On May 16th last I issued a two-months' reprieve in this case, in order that I might have opportunity for further studying it; and in the interim I have devoted a great deal of time to that study.

As to the crime itself there are no extenuating circumstances, unless the youth of the defendant and the effect of association with two other bad boys may be considered such. The three boys, all residents of Sanger, Fresno County, had for a number of weeks been engaged in a career of petty banditry which finally, on June 13, 1928, resulted in the unprovoked murder of Francis O. Weisert, a citizen of Fresno, who was returning home after an evening of overtime work in the place of his employment.

Ellis, together with Bill Krieger and Lowell Davis, about ten o'clock in the evening, had seen their victim alight from a street car, and determined to hold him up. Ellis and Davis got out of the automobile in which the three were riding, while Krieger drove around the block to be ready to pick up the others after the robbery had been accomplished. Ellis demanded that Weisert throw up his hands and, upon his refusal, shot him twice, one bullet entering the back and inflicting a fatal wound.

In the eyes of the law, all three boys, of course, were equally culpable. Davis pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Krieger, undoubtedly the ringleader, stood trial; but probably due to the fact that his father was in San Quentin and his mother in a hospital for the insane, he too was recommended by the jury for life imprisonment. Ellis, who fired the shot with a pistol he had procured from Krieger, was sentenced to be hanged, although he was the youngest of the three.

As a matter of fact, the entire defense of Ellis centered upon the question of his age, since the three boys all confessed, and there was no doubt concerning the facts of the murder. According to a California law, enacted in 1921, no one can be hanged for a crime committed before he is eighteen years of age; and the question in this case is whether Ellis was or was not eighteen on June 13, 1928, the night when the shooting took place. Both prosecution and defense agreed upon June 4th as the day of his birth; but the prosecution fixed upon 1910 as the year when he was born, which would make him just nine days over eighteen years old when the crime was committed. The defense, on the other hand, claimed that the year of birth was 1911 instead of 1910, and that the defendant was only seventeen years and nine days old at the time of the murder.

At the trial the prosecution made a very good case in proof of its contention that Ellis had passed his eighteenth birthday. It seems that no vital statistics had been kept in the Missouri county where the defendant was born; but in Texas, where the family afterward moved, he was enrolled in the public schools with the day and year of his birth stated as June 4, 1910. This date was given on an enrolled blank purported to be signed in 1923 by A. R. Ellis, his father; and subsequently, in 1926, on another enrollment blank from data furnished by the boy himself. Moreover, on another school census blank signed by the mother in Sanger, Fresno County, in 1927, Goldie Ellis, the sister of Allen Ellis, is registered as having been born February 22, 1911. This, of course, would have made it impossible for the brother to have been born on June 4th of the same year, and helped the prosecution establish the birth year of Allen Ellis as 1910. Finally, it was shown at the trial that immediately upon his arrest the boy asserted that he was eighteen years of age.

To offset this evidence on the part of the prosecution, the defense produced no direct testimony except that of the mother and the father. The former testified that she had seven children, one, Ethel, by a former marriage, born 1896; and six children of A. R. Ellis, with years of birth as follows: John, 1902; May, 1905; Zella, 1907; Allen, 1911; Goldie, 1913; and Dorothy, 1916; giving the birthdays of Allen and Goldie as June 4, 1911, and February 22, 1913, respectively, instead of 1910 and 1911 as shown by the prosecution. She further declared that she had not signed the school registration card giving 1911 as the year of Goldie's birth. She also stated that upon the birth of Allen no one was present except her husband and a neighbor, Sarah Butler, who acted as midwife.

A. R. Ellis, the father, testified that Allen Ellis was seventeen years old, having been born June 4, 1911. He denied having signed any school card in Texas, and in fact showed that he was unable to write. He attempted to explain that upon coming to Texas he had been prevailed upon to give the ages of Allen and Goldie as one year older than they were, in order that Goldie might come within the legal age limit, thus providing sufficient pupils to organize a little country school district where they first resided. This testimony was offered by the defense attorney but was ruled out by the court.

Allen Ellis testified that when arrested he had said he was eighteen years old, since that was the age he had been giving in order to be permitted to play pool at the Sanger pool hall without violating a local ordinance. He showed that he had presented a written certificate to the proprietor of the pool hall, stating his age as eighteen. He denied that he had given the year of his birth as 1910 in the Texas school enrollment, although Miss Goldberg, secretary to the superintendent, afterward reiterated that such was the fact.

Taken as a whole, the evidence at the trial respecting the age of Allen Ellis was distinctly in favor of the contention of the prosecution. The only direct testimony showing the later year of birth was given by the parents; and under the circumstances, with the life of their son at stake, they could hardly have been expected to testify otherwise. Certainly such testimony could not outweigh the documentary evidence to the contrary; and no criticism whatever can be directed toward the verdict of the jury, or the certainty on the part of judge and district attorney that Allen Ellis was nine days beyond his eighteenth birthday when the murder was committed.

Although nine days may seem a small margin in determining a question of capital punishment, in view of the provisions of the law and the atrocity of the crime I do not believe I could have interfered with the execution of this sentence, had subsequent investigations not brought to light new evidence which I feel satisfied, if it had been previously discovered and produced at the trial, must of necessity have influenced the verdict of the jury. This new evidence is in the form of letters and affidavits; but I shall consider only the latter, as the nearest approach to sworn testimony which can be offered at this time. I have selected and arranged these affidavits from the mass of unorganized material which has been sent in to me, and believe that when considered as a whole their weight must be recognized.

The first, from the father, A. R. Ellis, would probably be discounted for the reasons given respecting his direct testimony, except as it relates to matters he was not permitted to testify to.

"A. R. Ellis, being first duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is the father of Allen Ellis, San Quentin, No. 45798, who was convicted of murder in the first degree on the twenty-sixth day of July, 1928, in the county of Fresno, State of California. That the said Allen Ellis was born on June 4, 1911, on a farm belonging to John Oliver near Mountain Grove, Missouri; that the only persons present at the birth of Allen Ellis, besides himself and his wife, was a Mrs. Sarah Butler, who acted as midwife.

That in 1918, he moved to Texas, near the town of Marshall. That their first home was in a negro settlement and that there was no school in that district. The school authorities came to his home and told him that they were desirous of forming a school in the district; that his daughter was not old enough to go to school at that time; that the school authorities suggested raising her age one year and raising his son Allen's age one year, so that they could increase the enrollment of the school; that the school was subsequently formed and Allen's birth date was put down by the school authorities as June 4th, 1910, when in truth and in fact, said birth date was June 4th, 1911.

That he endeavored to tell the above facts in the court at the time of the trial of the People of the State of California vs. Allen Ellis, in the county of Fresno, State of California, but that on objection of the district attorney the court refused to allow him to tell them.

The second affidavit, corroborative of the first, is from one living in the school district referred to above:

"Mrs. Pearl Williams, being first duly sworn on oath, deposes and says:

That she lived in or near Marshall, Texas, during the years 1918 to 1923, inclusive; that she knew Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Ellis who lived in or near Marshall, Texas, during that period; that she knew Allen Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Ellis, and Goldie Ellis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Ellis; that she knows that when said Allen Ellis and said Goldie Ellis started to school in Texas, that the age of both Allen Ellis and Goldie Ellis was raised one year in order that the said Goldie Ellis might attend school; that they first attended the school near Marshall, Texas, and said affiant lived near said school at that time.

MRS. PEARL WILLIAMS.

(Signed) MRS. MARY SHEARRON.

The third affidavit is by Robert Gaddis, who lived near the Ellis family in Missouri, and who has also written two very strong letters concerning the age of Allen Ellis:

"Robert Gaddis, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he is a resident of the state of Missouri, and during the years 1910 and 1911 resided near Mountain Grove, Missouri; that he was acquainted with the family of A. R. Ellis, who resided on the John Oliver farm near Mountain Grove, Missouri, in 1910 and 1911; that affiant knows that in the summer of 1911, a boy was born to the wife of A. R. Ellis, and that Mrs. Sarah Butler acted as midwife for Mrs. Ellis at that time; that affiant talked to Mrs. Sarah Butler shortly after the birth of this boy; that affiant later ascertained that the boy was named Allen.

Affiant further states that in March, 1910, he had a son born; that his boy and the boy named Allen Ellis grew up together, and he saw the boy named Allen Ellis as he was going to school; that affiant states that his boy was one year older than Allen Ellis and that his boy was eighteen in March, 1928.

ROBERT GADDIS.

The fourth affidavit is by a Mrs. Julia Sullens, sister of Sarah Butler (now Sarah Bradfield), who acted as midwife at the birth of Allen Ellis and of his sister, Goldie:

"Mrs. Julia Sullens, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, upon her oath deposes and says: That she is now 53 years of age; that she has resided in Wright County, Missouri, her entire life.

That during the year 1911 she resided within about one mile of A. R. Ellis and wife, in Wright County, Mo.; that during said year 1911 the wife of said A. R. Ellis gave birth to a son, the exact date she does not now remember; that she is a sister of one Sarah Butler who was at that time a resident of the same neighborhood of this affiant and the family of said A. R. Ellis; that her said sister, Sarah Butler, informed her, the next day after the birth of said child, that she, the said Sarah Butler, had been present at the birth of said child, and acted as midwife.

Affiant further states that she is able to fix the year of the birth of said child by reason of the fact that she gave birth to a child in the spring of the year 1910, and she positively knows that said child was born the year following the birth of her own child.

Affiant further states that she resided in the same neighborhood as the family of said A. R. Ellis for at least one year after the birth of the child aforesaid, and that the child was called and went by the name of Allen Ellis.

The fifth affidavit is a very important one. The testimony at the trial showed that one Sarah Butler, a neighbor of the Ellis family, was, besides the parents, the only one present at the birth of Allen Ellis. The prosecution sent an investigator to Missouri to interview Mrs. Butler, but no trace of her could be found, and the search was abandoned. It afterward appeared that she could not be located, owing to the fact that, unknown to the prosecution or to the Ellis family, her husband had died and she had remarried, and as Sarah Bradfield she had removed to Oklahoma.

"Sarah Bradfield, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That her name was formerly Sarah Butler; that during the year 1911 she lived in Wright County, Missouri; that during that year she acted as midwife for several women in that locality;

That during the year 1911 she knew the family of A. R. Ellis, living near Mountain Grove, Missouri; that on June 4, 1911, she attended Mrs. A. R. Ellis as midwife; that on that date a boy was born to Mrs. Ellis, who was later named Allen Ellis;

Affiant further states that she recalls the date of June 4, 1911, as the birth date of said Allen Ellis by reason of the fact that she herself was pregnant at that time; that on December 29, 1911, a child was born to her;

Affiant further states that if called upon to do so that she will testify in any court to any and all of the above facts.

SARAH BRADFIELD.

(Signed) E. F. DIXON, Notary Public."

The sixth affidavit concerns the reputation of Sarah Bradfield for truth, honesty and integrity.

"Mrs. Frank Dunn, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That I am a resident of Sand Springs, Oklahoma; that I have known Mrs. Sarah Bradfield for four years; that I am acquainted in the community in which she lives, and that I know her reputation in the community in which she lives.

That the reputation of the said Sarah Bradfield in the community in which she lives for truth, honesty and integrity is very good.

MRS. FRANK DUNN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 15th day of March, 1929.

(Signed) E. F. DIXON, Notary Public."

The next series of affidavits has to do with the age of Goldie Ellis, who, as already shown, would have been born within three and a half months of her brother, Allen, had his birth date been June 4, 1911, as contended by the defense, and hers February 22, 1911, as shown by the Sanger school records. The prosecution naturally made much of this fact and, accepting the school record as true, showed that under this assumption Allen Ellis could not have been born in 1911, and therefore argued this fact as corroborative of the date of June 4, 1910.

This very argument of the prosecution has given me more concern than any other single element in the testimony since, by the very dates shown in the trial, only eight and one-half months would have elapsed between the births of Allen and Goldie. This might have been barely possible, but very improbable, particularly in view of the fact, as already shown by testimony of Mrs. Ellis, that her other children were born at intervals of two or three years. Accordingly, the fixing of the birth of Goldie Ellis in 1913 would make possible the contention of the defense that Allen Ellis was born in 1911. This probably explains the large number of affidavits presented to prove this date of the sister's birth.

The first of these is affidavit number seven, also by Mrs. Bradfield:

"Mrs. Sarah Bradfield, being first duly sworn on oath deposes and says:

That during the years 1910, 1911, 1912 and 1913, she lived near the town of Mountain Grove, Wright County, Missouri. During said time she knew the family of A. R. Ellis. That during said years, she acted as midwife for various people in that locality, including Mrs. A. R. Ellis; that on the twenty-second day of February, 1913, she attended Mrs. Ellis as a midwife and on that day, a daughter was born to Mrs. A. R. Ellis; that said daughter was later named Goldie; that during the years she lived at Mountain Grove, her name was Sarah Butler; that since that time, she has remarried and her name is now Sarah Bradfield.

(Signed)

SARAH BRADFIELD.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this twenty-ninth day of April, 1929.

(Signed) E. F. DIXON, Notary Public."

The eighth affidavit is by Ethel Clark, the half-sister of Goldie Ellis, who fixes the year as the same as that of her marriage:

"Ethel Clark, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That she is a sister of Goldie Ellis and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Ellis. That she lived with her parents in Wright County, Missouri, in the year 1913, at the time of the birth of said Goldie Ellis; that the said Goldie Ellis was born on the twenty-second day of February in the year 1913.

That affiant recalls the birth date of her sister, Goldie Ellis, as being in the year 1913, because of the fact that affiant was married to Leonard Clark in that same year.

(Signed)

ETHEL CLARK.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this sixth day of April, 1929.

(Signed) WILLIAM A. WHITE, Notary Public."

The ninth is by Leonard Clark, husband of this half-sister, who fixes the very date by an event in his own life:

"Leonard Clark, being first duly sworn, deposes and says:

That he is the husband of Ethel Clark, and brother-in-law of Goldie Ellis.

That he lived in Wright County, Missouri, in the year 1913 and that he knows that Goldie Ellis was born on the twenty-second day of February, 1913.

Affiant particularly recalls the said birth date of Goldie Ellis, because of the fact that he was baptized in the church on said twenty-second day of February, 1913, at Mountain Grove, Missouri.

Affiant further recalls the fact that Goldie Ellis was born on February 22, 1913, because of the fact that he was married to Ethel Bell, sister of said Goldie Ellis, in the year 1913.

(Signed)

LEONARD CLARK.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this sixth day of April, 1929.

(Signed) WILLIAM A. WHITE, Notary Public."

The tenth affidavit is by E. C. Deering, superintendent of public schools of Marshall, Texas, where the Ellis family resided for a number of years before coming to California. This affidavit would apparently largely counteract the evidence presented by the Sanger school registration certificate.

"E. C. Deering, having presented himself, declares that he is superintendent of the Marshall public schools of Marshall, Texas, and that Goldie Ellis and Dorothy Nevada Ellis were enrolled in the Marshall public schools and that their enrollment cards contain the following information:

Pupil, Ellis, Dorothy Nevada. Date of birth, July 21, 1916. Name of father, A. R. Ellis. Name of mother, Della Ellis. Parents' address, Standpipe road (Route 4, later changed to 3). Town, Marshall. School assignment, R. E. Lee, later changed to West, later changed to Van Zandt. Date, September 14, 1925. Rubber stamp signature of E. C. Deering, superintendent.

Pupil, Ellis, Goldie. Date of birth, February 22, 1913. Name of father, A. R. Ellis. Name of mother, Della Ellis. Parents' address, route 3. Town, Marshall. School assignment, West, later changed to Van Zandt. Date, December 14, 1925. Rubber stamp signature of E. C. Deering, superintendent.

He further declares that he gave the original enrollment card of Goldie Ellis and Dorothy Nevada Ellis to Mr. Jesse Flowers on the twenty-ninth day of August, 1928 A. D.

(Signed)

E. C. DEERING.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this twenty-ninth day of August, 1928, A. D.

(Signed) ROSE GOLDBERG, Notary Public in and for Harrison County."

These last four affidavits, together with a number not here given, would seem to indicate a strong possibility that Goldie Ellis was born in 1913. Although this would, of course, not fix her brother's year of birth as 1911, any more than 1910, it would at least remove the strong argument at the trial that Allen Ellis could not have been born in June, 1911, since his sister was born in February of the same year.

I am fully aware that these and the other affidavits presented to me, together with the dozen or more supporting letters from the same sources, carry no such weight as actual evidence in a trial, where cross-examination might very possibly break down the effect of the testimony. It is also very probable that one or more of them might have been made through sympathy for the Ellis family, and hence would be of little value. It is, of course, understood that all these affidavits have been produced since the time of the trial and too late to have been considered by the jury. I can not believe, however, that when taken together they can be utterly disregarded, or would not have produced some effect on the minds of a jury.

In view of the atrocious nature of this murder and the necessity of sternly suppressing such acts of banditry as these boys committed, I do not find it easy to grant this commutation. I feel that very severe punishment should be meted out to Allen Ellis, despite the fact that the extreme penalty was not given to his two older companions, one of whom, at least, was more hardened than himself. I am further moved by the fact that the jury, the judge, and the district attorney, all believed in the wisdom and justice of the death penalty in this case.

I am not moved as much as some others may be by the fact that had the crime been committed ten days earlier the death penalty could not have been invoked; for, in view of the different degrees of mentality of individuals at any given age, I am not sure that this law of 1921 is a wise one. Nevertheless, it is the law, and in view of the law I can not take the responsibility of permitting this boy to hang if there is a reasonable possibility that he was only a few days more than seventeen years old at the time of his crime. The affidavits are not an absolute proof of this, for like any similar affidavits they are open to question. However, they do present to my mind a reasonable possibility of truth, and hence I have no other alternative than to grant this commutation.

In any case where capital punishment is deserved, as it certainly is in this case, except for consideration of age, I believe that the alternative should consist of the next severest form of punishment. I feel confident that the strongest argument for capital punishment is the fact that life imprisonment too often carries with it the possibility of parole in a comparatively few years, and that the deterrent effect of punishment for crime is thereby lost. Accordingly, as I have done in two previous cases, I am granting this commutation with the provision that Ellis spend the remainder of his life in prison where he may never again become a menace to society.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, do hereby commute the sentence of death imposed upon Allen Ellis in the superior court of the State of California in and for the county of Fresno, upon condition that he be imprisoned during the term of his natural life in the State Prison at San Quentin, without parole.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this seventeenth day of July, 1929.

[SEAL]

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

Attest: FRANK C. JORDAN, Secretary of State.

PARDON.

There has been presented to me an application for the pardon of John Vidovich who plead guilty to the crime of grand larceny, a felony, and was sentenced on the fourth day of April, 1927, by the superior court in and for the county of Los Angeles, Hon. Albert Lee Stephens, judge, presiding, to be imprisoned in the State Prison at San Quentin for an indeterminate term of one to ten years. He was received at the State Prison at San Quentin on April 9, 1927, and given number 43478. Thereafter, on April 28, 1928, the State Board of Prison Directors fixed his sentence at three years and he was paroled the same day. With the application of good-time credits, his parole expired and he was discharged on the ninth day of the current month.

Vidovich was born in Komiza, Island of Lissac, Jugoslavia, about thirty-four years ago and came to this country at the age of 19. He resided in the United States continuously for ten years and, some time during the year 1922 he obtained permission to go to Europe and married a girl there in his native town. He returned to the United States within the necessary time and his wife followed as soon as the quota law permitted. Two children have been born here since and I understand that a third is soon expected.

Unless pardoned, Vidovich is therefore subject to deportation under the provisions of section 4289½ (j. j.) United States Compiled Statutes, which reads, in part, as follows:

"* * * except as herein provided, any alien who is hereafter sentenced to imprisonment for a term of one year or more because of conviction in this country, of a crime involving moral turpitude committed within five years after entry of the alien to the United States, or who is hereafter sentenced more than once to such term of imprisonment because of conviction in this country of any crime involving moral turpitude, shall upon the warrant of the Secretary of Labor, be taken into custody and deported. * * * provided further that the provision of this section respecting deportation of aliens convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude shall not apply to one who has been pardoned."

Pursuant to the foregoing and the provisions of General Order No. 96, U. S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Immigration, Washington, D. C., September 24, 1927, a warrant of deportation was issued under date of October 10, 1928, the execution of which was suspended upon the posting by Vidovich of a bond in the sum of $1,000. This warrant, in the opinion of the United States Attorney for the southern district of California, will be canceled if the alien is pardoned, and U. S. ex rel Palermo vs. Smith, Director of Immigration, 17 Fed. (2d) 533, is cited as authority. The following excerpt is quoted from that decision:

"That the pardon of an alien's crime is of assistance to him and will prevent deportation only when the crime of which he is pardoned was committed within five years after his entry into this country."

On May 8, 1929, I referred this case to the Advisory Pardon Board for an investigation and recommendations and, under date of July 5, 1928, Lieutenant Governor H. L. Carnahan, chairman of the board, reports as follows:

"The applicant is 34 years old. He is a native of Yugoslavia. He emigrated to the United States in 1914, arriving at New York, and going thence to San Pedro, where he has lived ever since. He received his first citizenship papers in 1923 in Los Angeles.

While at San Pedro he has been a fisherman. He married Miss Katti Kusich, age 18, in 1922. They have two children living and another about to be born. He has always properly supported his family, except while he was in San Quentin, during which period it received some State aid.

He was first arrested about November 19, 1926, on a charge of burglarizing a warehouse at Los Angeles Harbor. This charge was dismissed.

He was again arrested in December, 1926, on a criminal complaint sworn to by Toni Devlahovich, charging that he stole from Devlahovich and George Zuban fishing net and corks worth $348.50. After a preliminary examination he was held to answer. In the superior court he pleaded guilty and asked for probation. After a report from the probation officer, probation was refused by Judge Albert Lee Stephens.

He served one year and nineteen days in San Quentin and was paroled April 28, 1928. His prison and parole records are good.

December 16, 1926—about a week after he was arrested the second time—Devlahovich sued him for $900, the alleged value of about 1300 pounds of fish net. The same day George Zuban also sued him for $160, the alleged value of 700 fish net corks. These nets and corks included the nets and corks mentioned in the criminal complaint upon which he was arrested. Vidovich defaulted in each case, judgments were entered against him, and he paid both in full February 23, 1927.

He denies the criminal charge, and claims that he pleaded guilty to it and failed to contest the civil suits on the advice of his attorney, who assured him that thereby he would secure probation. He also claims that this attorney, and another attorney called in by this attorney, collected from him in these cases fees amounting to about $4,000. Only a part of the property that he was charged with stealing was found in his possession. It consisted of a part of a four-inch fishing net, commonly used in Washington and Alaska and useless about San Pedro. The piece was worth about $150. There is no evidence that he ever had any other part of the net or the corks. The maximum crime, if any, of which there is evidence is, therefore, only petit larceny, for which the maximum penalty is six months imprisonment and a $500 fine.

It appears probable that his arrest was inspired by Devlahovich and Zuban with the purpose to force payment more easily on the amounts they sued for. The attorney's fee charged him is grossly exorbitant. Its amount, plus the seeming indifference of his attorney to his fate after sentence, indicate a mercenary purpose on the part of the attorney to profit by the fright of Vidovich naturally resulting from his general ignorance, and tend to support the claim of Vidovich that he was not properly advised by his counsel, and was improperly induced to plead guilty.

These facts and other circumstances now cause Judge Stephens (who sentenced Vidovich), to doubt the wisdom of his plea of guilty, and now to be of the opinion that he should be pardoned.

Vidovich's business associates and acquaintances report that he is an industrious and hard-working fisherman; that he is a good father; that he is honest in his business affairs; and that otherwise he conducts himself as a good citizen should.

Proceedings by the federal government are pending under United States Compiled Statutes, section 4289 (j. j.) to deport him. This act provides for the deportation after termination of imprisonment of aliens sentenced to imprisonment for a year or more for crimes involving moral turpitude. Vidovich desires specially to avoid this consequence. The act expressly excepts from its effect aliens pardoned for such offenses.

Because the facts above reported indicate:

1. That the crime, if any, of which Vidovich was guilty was petit larceny, an offense that would not subject him to deportation;

2. That if permitted to remain here he will not become an undesirable citizen, and will properly support and care for his family; and

3. That if deported he probably will be unable to maintain his family either here or in Europe, and it will be thrown upon the State for support;

We respectfully advise that he be pardoned."

Attorney General U. S. Webb, a member of the board, concurs in the recommendation, although he does not entirely agree with the views expressed by Mr. Carnahan. His letter, in part, is as follows:

"The application of John Vidovich, San Quentin No. 43478, for executive clemency was heretofore referred to the Advisory Pardon Board and an investigation of this case by it has been made. A report under date of July 5 has been prepared by the secretary of the board and was signed by the chairman of the board and forwarded to this office for approval if found satisfactory. I have examined the record in this case and the report but am not inclined to sign the report because of recitals therein of conclusions which I deem unsupported by the record.

This man served something more than one year at San Quentin, sustaining while there a good record, and was paroled April 28, 1928, and his conduct since then has been good. He has a wife and children and the record supports at least the hope that, if pardoned, hereafter he would take care of them and refrain from a criminal course. Upon these grounds it is my view that a pardon should be granted.

The portion of the report with which I can not agree is framed upon the theory that the defendant was not guilty of the crime to which he pleaded guilty and hence that the judgment was improper. I see nothing in the record to justify such conclusion nor am I at all in sympathy with the thought that, in order to justify executive clemency, doubt and discredit must be thrown upon the judgment or proceedings prior thereto. It is my belief, based upon this record, that the proceedings were regular, that the judgment was properly rendered and that there is nothing to support the intimation that there was or is a miscarriage of justice. I think this man should be pardoned not solely because, after the rendition of a proper judgment his conduct, coupled with his past life, and taken in connection with his domestic relations combined, indicate that the issuance of a pardon may result in advantage to society and to the petitioner.

The innocent against whom judgment of conviction has been rendered should be pardoned, of course, but instances of this character are exceedingly rare. Nothing is more harmful than official intimation or suggestion that the conviction was improper when such is not the fact. I concur in the conclusions reached in the official report of the Advisory Board but not in the reasons given therefor. I am having this letter attached to the formal report to the board."

The district attorney of Los Angeles County, under date of November 26, 1927, writes as follows:

"I wish to submit herewith statement of facts in the above case, pursuant to section 1420 of the Penal Code, which statement appears in the record:

"A summary history of the crime of which the defendant was convicted, and the facts and circumstances of its commission are: Defendant entered a building at San Pedro and took a valuable fish net.

A statement of all other charges pending against the defendant and information as to whether these charges will be prosecuted; all charges that have been dismissed; and whether the defendant is sentenced on a reduced charge, together with the reasons therefor. No other charges pending.

The cause, motive and provocation for the crime were, to realize on the fish net.

My views and recommendations as to length of sentence and granting of a parole in this case are: Trial judge in this case recommended the minimum term of punishment. We know of no reason why we can not concur in this."

It appears that this defendant is an ignorant fisherman, and was advised by his counsel to plead guilty, upon representations that he would probably receive probation. The facts have developed that there was a civil action pending in regard to the fish net, which was the subject of the alleged larceny. Defendant had made civil settlement of the matter prior to the sentence in this case.

It will be noted that the judge recommended the minimum term of imprisonment, which term I am informed has practically elapsed at this time if the usual good time be allowed.

Any disposition of this matter will be satisfactory to this office."

Warden Court Smith of Folsom, another member of the board, writes as follows:

"I thoroughly concur with the letter of Attorney General Webb, and as set forth in his letter believe it advisable to grant a pardon in this instance."

And Warden Jas. B. Holohan of San Quentin, the remaining member, also writes:

"I have gone very carefully through the file of John Vidovich, S. Q. No. 43478, and, under all the circumstances as contained in the file, I feel very favorably toward a pardon being granted to John Vidovich."

The trial judge, Hon. Albert Lee Stephens, on July 8, 1929, wrote:

*"Mr. Lawrence Hall, Care Advisory Pardon Board,
Ninth Floor, Farmers and Merchants Bldg., Long Beach, California.*

DEAR MR. HALL: Permit me to advise you that I very clearly recall the case of People vs. John Vidovich, who pleaded guilty in my court to grand larceny. Certain information received by me since his sentence leads me to believe that he was the victim of a sort of conspiracy to get rid of him, and I have very grave doubts as to his ever having been actually guilty of grand larceny. More likely he was guilty of petty larceny.

You have advised me that he will be deported unless he receives a pardon from the Governor, and my information both as to him and his family would lead me to strongly recommend that he be the subject of a pardon.

Yours very truly,

ALS:EMF:G (Signed)

And the sheriff of Los Angeles County, on November 28, 1927, wrote me:

"Mr. John Vidovich, now serving in San Quentin, with a possible expiration of term December 15, or thereabouts, is applying to you for pardon. While this case was handled by the Police Department of this city, and no record of it being in my office, I know some of the people interested. This office does not oppose the granting of executive clemency, while I, personally, recommend that it be granted."

The assistant probation officer has also expressed himself as strongly in favor of pardon. I quote from his letter to me, dated November 28, 1927:

"It has just been called to my attention that John Vidovich, who pled guilty to a charge of grand larceny, and who was thereafter sentenced to San Quentin, through his friends, has made application for a pardon.

In view of the fact that I was the investigating officer in this matter, and without doubt had an insight to this case that no one else had, I would be glad to recommend at this time that a pardon be granted John Vidovich.

If my report is perused, the following quotation will be found:

'Since my last conversation with the defendant, taking into consideration some of the statements he made, I do not feel that I could make a recommendation without a further investigation. His statements are so in conflict with those made at the preliminary hearing. I would therefore respectfully suggest in the event that the court believes further information should be obtained, that the case be continued for a period of time to give this department time to carry out the investigation.'

It was my plan at that time to check up further on the history of the defendant, and also to endeavor to ascertain whether or not there was a feeling between the fishermen at San Pedro, some wishing to sentence him to prison on one side, and others wishing to obtain his release on probation.

For the information of your honor, will state if I was to make a recommendation at this time, in view of the facts at my disposal, I would recommend probation with the understanding that defendant return to his wife and two children at San Pedro, or be allowed to go to Seattle where he had an opportunity to engage in the fishing business.

I believe that should the Governor pardon John Vidovich that no mistake would be made and the ends of justice would be best subserved thereby."

The attorney for Tony Devlahovich and George Zuban, complainants in the civil action brought against Vidovich to recover the value of the nets and corks, a part of which he was convicted of stealing, writes as follows:

"This will confirm our telephone conversation of this day.

Relative to what I know concerning the above named individual, will say that in December, 1926, I was employed by Tony Devlahovich and George Zuban to bring suit against Vidovich for the value of certain nets and corks, alleged to have been stolen by John Vidovich from the said Devlahovich and Zuban.

I brought two suits in the municipal court, one for Devlahovich and one for Zuban, numbered respectively 32498 and 32497.

As I understand the facts, these nets and corks were stolen from a fishing vessel while she was tied to the dock at San Pedro, and an investigation was made by Officers Fred Wessel and an assistant. As the result of the investigation, a complaint was asked for and obtained against Vidovich, and after his arrest on the charge of burglary, I believe, he employed an attorney by the name of Angelo Baldwin, formerly a deputy city prosecutor. At the preliminary hearing, which was held before the judge at San Pedro, the complaint was dismissed. It was in the stage of the criminal proceeding that Devlahovich and Zuban came to me. I advised them that I could not give them any assistance in the matter of the criminal proceedings, but told them that I would be willing to take the case of trying to collect the value of the nets. Hence, the suits hereinbefore referred to.

I also told them, as well as Mr. Wessel and the other officer, that if necessary I would go with all parties to the district attorney's office and try to secure another complaint. This was agreeable, and I did thereupon accompany Zuban, Wessel and Devlahovich to the district attorney's office and Mr. Lিকেley, now Judge Lিকেley of the municipal bench, ordered a complaint issued and thereafter the defendant, Vidovich, was again arrested.

Pending the outcome of this last criminal proceeding, I started the municipal court actions hereinbefore referred to for the recovery of the value of the property stolen. If I remember right, the defendant suffered a default to be taken against him, and thereafter through his counsel, Mr. Baldwin, we effected a compromise and settlement whereby we received, I believe, the sum of $900 in full settlement of both suits. At this time my clients signed a statement, which was also witnessed by the arresting officers, Wessel and Schubert, stating that they (my clients) had no objection to the proper county officers giving probation to the said John Vidovich.

This summarizes about all I know of the case, but I can say that I believe my clients have no objection to the Governor, or anyone else, taking such action as might be necessary in order to have Vidovich remain in the United States.

At the time of this trouble, of course, my clients felt rather angry toward Vidovich and expressed themselves in a hostile manner toward him, but I feel certain that they would not want to see him deported.

If there is any other or additional information which I can give you, kindly call upon me."

That Vidovich bore a good reputation prior to the time of his arrest is borne out by letters from:

John Lopizich, Bank of Italy, Los Angeles, California.

E. M. Toscanini, Bank of Italy, San Pedro, California.

Robert C. Baly, vice president and cashier, Bank of San Pedro, San Pedro, Cal.

F. E. Booth Co., by O. Weissich, manager, Fisherman's Wharf, San Pedro, Cal.

A. J. Musanti, Gilbert C. Van Camp, agent, Marine, Fire and General Insurance, Municipal Fish Wharf, San Pedro, California.

George Shapro, Great Western Sea Food Co., San Pedro, California.

His conduct in prison and on parole has been beyond reproach, according to the warden and the State Parole Officer, and in addition I have received letters from the following, all testifying to his good character:

Dr. Josephine M. Fernald, D.C., 6636 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, Cal.

Miss Effie M. Diederich, president, Woman's Club of Local 47, American Federation of Musicians, 1417-1419 South Georgia Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

A. J. Musante, Gilbert C. Van Camp, agent, San Pedro, Cal.

G. G. Mullia, Slavic American Citizens' League, 401 Hibernian Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, and in consideration of the fact that while on parole he has demonstrated that he intends to live a peaceful, industrious, and law-abiding life and is, therefore, entitled to such recognition and help from the State as may be given him by the granting of this pardon, and in view of the recommendations of the Advisory Pardon Board and others hereinbefore referred to, do hereby pardon John Vidovich of the crime of grand larceny.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this fourteenth day of August, 1929.

[SEAL]

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

Attest: FRANK C. JORDAN, Secretary of State.

By FRANK H. CORY, Deputy.

PARDON.

There has been presented to me an application for the pardon of Edith Marjorie Davidson (nee Truell), who was convicted of the crime of forgery, a felony, and was sentenced on the twenty-seventh day of July, 1926, by the superior court in and for the county of Los Angeles (Hon. Edwin F. Hahn, judge, presiding), to be imprisoned in the State Prison at San Quentin for an indeterminate term of one to fourteen years. She was received at the State Prison at San Quentin on the eleventh day of August, 1926, and given number 42540. Thereafter, on the seventeenth day of September, 1927, she was paroled, and, on the eleventh day of December, 1928, she was given a final discharge.

She plead guilty to four counts of forgery, was granted probation on three, and was sentenced on the remaining count as above noted. On the sixteenth day of July, 1929, she was discharged from probation and the case dismissed.

Carl L. May, supervisor adult probation department, of the superior court, county of Los Angeles, in recommending that the case be dismissed, reported to the court as follows:

*"Hon. Edwin Hahn,
Judge of Superior Court, Dept. No. 13,
Los Angeles, California.*

I would like to call your attention to the fact that on July 27, 1926, subject, Edith Marjorie Truell, was sentenced to San Quentin for the period prescribed by law. It was further ordered by the court after she was released from San Quentin, that she was to report to this office.

On September 22, 1927, she was released from San Quentin and immediately reported to this department, and since that time has reported regularly each month in compliance with the order of the court.

For the further information of your honor, will state that Miss Truell has since married, that her husband is an American citizen and her reformation has been complete.

Due to the fact that she is not a citizen of the United States, there is a movement under way to deport her, which would mean that she would be returned to Canada, incidentally breaking up her home.

At present her father, Newton T. Truell, 938 N. Spalding avenue, is making an appeal to the Governor for an outright pardon, which if granted with a dismissal of this case, would allow said Edith Marjorie Truell to remain in this country with her husband.

It is therefore respectfully recommended in view of the fact that subject has been faithful in her reports since the date of her release from San Quentin and her rehabilitation has been perfected, that the case be dismissed.

Respectfully,
(Signed)

CARL L. MAY,
Supervisor Adult Probation Department."

The father of this young woman, Newton T. Truell, first presented an application for executive clemency to me in her behalf in July, 1927. At that time she had about served the minimum sentence; and, upon investigation, the State Board of Prison Directors found sufficient merit in her case to justify her release on parole and, later, to modify the parole order to prevent deportation and to permit her to marry.

After serving her term in prison and on parole, or at least upon being discharged from probation, she again became subject to deportation. Accordingly, I referred the case to the Advisory Pardon Board somewhat sooner than I would have done had deportation not been imminent. The board has recommended that a pardon be granted. I quote in part from the board's report to me, dated September 9, 1929:

"She is a Canadian, admitted to this country less than five years prior to her conviction, and is therefore subject to deportation unless she is pardoned. Her mother died in 1915. Before coming to California she graduated from high school and attended the University of Quebec for one year. She was employed in the trust department of the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles from January 15, 1924, to June 15, 1926.

For some months prior to her arrest she was under the care of a physician for ear and throat trouble, and her doctor bills were heavy. She became engaged to marry O. W. Davidson. In preparing for her marriage she purchased on credit a substantial trousseau. When the bills fell due she could not meet the payments, and in her embarrassment issued the checks upon which she was arrested. Most of the bills have been paid by her father.

Except for this incident her conduct has always been exemplary. Since her release on parole she has married Davidson. He has a good business reputation, and is sales manager of a real estate project called 'Roosevelt Farms.' Her discharge from probation was ordered by Judge Hahn upon the report of Carl L. May, supervisor of the Adult Probation Department of the Superior Court of Los Angeles County that her rehabilitation had been perfected, and that the case should be dismissed.

It is respectfully recommended that a pardon be granted.

Yours very sincerely,

ADVISORY PARDON BOARD.
By H. L. CAENAHAN, Chairman."

More than two years ago at the time the application was first presented to me, the trial judge, Hon. Edwin F. Hahn, wrote as follows:

"June 20, 1927.

*Hon. C. C. Young,
Governor of California,
Sacramento, California.*

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: I have been advised by Newton T. Truell that application is about to be made to you for a pardon for his daughter, Marjorie Truell, who pled guilty in my court on July 27, 1926, to the crime of forgery and upon which plea of guilty I sentenced her to the penitentiary.

I have been requested to write this letter to indicate to you whether or not I was opposed to the granting of this pardon. May I say that I have no opposition in the event that you should decide to grant the petition for a pardon to her.

Yours truly,

(Signed)

EDWIN F. HAHN."

He again wrote me under date of August 9, 1929:

"MY DEAR GOVERNOR: Mr. Truell, the father of one Edith M. Truell, who was convicted in my court of issuing checks without sufficient funds in July of 1926, has recently requested that I indicate to you my attitude with regard to her application for a pardon. Subsequent to her commitment, her father, as well as several of her father's friends, interviewed me with regard to the plan of the federal authorities to deport her to Canada from whence she came. I wrote a letter at that time stating that I had made careful investigation into her character and history at the time she appeared before me, and while I felt, in consideration of the treatment of others appearing in our criminal courts, that I could not grant her probation, I was convinced that she was a woman of good character, and that her check raising had been caused by being unable to resist the temptation to secure clothes and other luxuries. Further I felt that she would benefit by the lesson she had learned, and in my opinion that she would make a good citizen.

I understand the proceeding now before you is motivated by the desire to establish a record that will aid in resisting the deportation proceeding.

The parole officer reported to me that her conduct since being paroled from the penitentiary had been without reproach. Assuming that there has been nothing in her conduct since she appeared before me that would militate against her, I would feel disposed to aid, so far as would be consistent with my duties, any measure that would enable her to remain in this country.

Very cordially yours,

(Signed)

EDWIN F. HAHN."

And from the Los Angeles district attorney's office under date of July 16, 1927, I received the following:

"Miss Truell was sentenced from Los Angeles County about a year ago for the crime of forgery; prior to being sentenced she made application to the court for probation and after a thorough investigation the probation officer of this county recommended to the court that probation be granted; however, the court for reasons of his own sentenced the young lady to San Quentin.

She has now served one year in the penitentiary. I have examined the facts of the case and feel satisfied that there would be no miscarriage of justice in this case were she to be granted a pardon, and am therefore writing to advise you that there is no opposition to such action by me. Furthermore, I believe this defendant has received a very severe lesson by her incarceration on this charge and that if she were released she would again resume her place in society and not cause any trouble in the future."

The probation officer of Los Angeles County also wrote:

"The case of Marjorie Truell is being brought to your attention by her many friends, with the request that you grant executive clemency in her case.

In my opinion the ends of justice will be met if a pardon is granted her at this time. The circumstances shown at the time she was sent to the penitentiary have been carefully gone into by this office and it is one of the very few cases that have come to my attention for which I have ever requested any executive clemency. This is one of the cases which I believe would be entirely worthy and for whom such action on your part would meet the ends of justice, and at the same time release to a life of usefulness this young woman, who has undoubtedly suffered enough for the crime she has committed.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed)

W. H. HOLLAND,

A letter from the man she was engaged to marry, now her husband, dated July 31, 1927, reads as follows:

"MY DEAR GOVERNOR: A petition for pardon has this day been forwarded to you for your consideration in the case of Miss Marjorie Truell, an inmate of San Quentin for the past year.

Many letters testifying to the character of all concerned in this case have been forwarded to you, a large percentage from well-known and highly respected citizens of this part of the State, which makes it unnecessary for me to further elaborate on that point.

When Miss Truell made this unfortunate mistake I was engaged to be married to her and still am. Since that time I have continuously been part and parcel of everything pertaining to her welfare and have participated in every act and move. Immediately upon Miss Truell's move to San Quentin, I moved to her father's home in order that I might in some small way take the place of the little lady who has been the very essence of his life. He and I at all times in the case have acted the part befitting real citizens.

In considering this petition, Your Excellency, I respectfully request that you regard the future of the three of us. She, as well as her father and I, are Canadian citizens, and should you not see fit to grant this pardon, it means the severing of business connections established over a period of five years, as we are informed she is subject to deportation to Canada for her acts. This works a severe injustice on her father and myself, and to her, too, as she is paying now very dearly for her misstep. Also her sentence calls for a number of years of parole which are stinging reminders which she will be trying to forget. Certainly for a lady of her education and culture one year in San Quentin is more than sufficient punishment, not only for herself, but for us as well.

I sincerely hope you will give this petition your most thorough investigation and see fit to exercise your official prerogative of complete pardon on the four offenses on which she was sentenced.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed)

O. W. DAVIDSON,
Sales Manager Roosevelt Farms."

Mr. N. T. Truell, the father, first wrote to me on June 1, 1927, portions of his letter being as follows:

"In July, 1926, my daughter, Marjorie Truell, pleaded guilty to four charges of forgery and was sentenced by Judge Hahn to from one to fourteen years at San Quentin Penitentiary on one charge and was given six years probation on the other three charges. I am aware that a request for a pardon has been made to you, but I am sure will allow me, as her father, to add a word in support of that request.

Marjorie issued several checks signing fictitious names and thereby secured several articles for her trousseau. She obtained no money on any check. The total amount she was accused of obtaining on all checks was less than six hundred dollars in goods. The amount she really obtained was far less than that.

Previous to this series of misdemeanors, there was not a stain of any kind against the girl or against any member of her family.

I lost my wife when Marjorie was quite young and I placed her in St. Mary's Academy at Winnipeg, where she remained eight years. After her graduation I bought a home and she has since lived with me. We came to Los Angeles four years ago for my health, and a little later Marjorie took a position in the Security Trust and Savings Bank in the department presided over by Mr. Ralph Hardacre, senior vice president of the bank and president of the State Bankers Association. She was still in his office when this trouble came upon her.

When she appeared for sentence we asked for probation. The Los Angeles Kiwanis Club of which I am a member and many leading citizens, including Mr. Hardacre, urged that probation be granted. Mr. W. H. Holland, the probation officer, strongly recommended it, but Judge Hahn felt that because of numerous forgeries that had taken place about that time, he must decline to grant probation. We took our punishment as befits good citizens. Marjorie has now been in San Quentin nearly ten months and if we felt that the terrible punishment which we have endured was commensurate with the punishment meted out to others for similar offenses, we would not ask for executive clemency.

We are real citizens as is evidenced by the thirty or forty letters filed in Mr. Holland's office asking for probation, and we do not cry over punishment, but we honestly feel that in this case the claims of society have been satisfied—more than satisfied—and that the cure has been fully effected. We therefore ask that you give this case the fullest investigation.

On behalf of my daughter, and of her fiance, Mr. O. W. Davidson, and of myself, I ask your favorable consideration of the petition for pardon for the four offenses on which she was sentenced.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed)

H. T. TRUELL."

Many respected and prominent citizens and officials of Los Angeles have also written me strongly recommending a pardon, including:

Hon. John G. Porter, now Mayor of Los Angeles, then chairman, Civic Affairs Committee, United Church Brotherhood.

Hon. George N. Cryer, then Mayor of Los Angeles.

Hon. Frank P. Flint, now deceased, a former U. S. Senator from California.

Hon. Dell A. Schweitzer, a former chairman, Board of Police Commissioners, Los Angeles.

Dr. Edwin P. Ryland, general secretary, Los Angeles Church Federation.

Dr. John R. Haynes, member Los Angeles Board of Public Utilities.

Mathew Walker, southern California manager, Central Life Insurance Company of Illinois.

Frederic H. Blair, superintendent, Good-Will Industries of Southern California.
T. S. Hooper, a former Crown prosecutor, British Columbia.

B. C. Wright, manager public relations, Southern California Telephone Co.

W. Bertrand Stevens, Bishop Coadjutor, Diocese of Los Angeles.

Rev. James N. Lash, pastor of Hollywood Congregational Church.

Rev. Wilsie Martin, pastor of First Methodist Episcopal Church of Hollywood.

Mrs. Orville L. Routh, president Women's Club of Hollywood.

Mrs. Frank E. Rising, Mrs. Ira W. Richardson, Mrs. T. R. Booth, president, secretary and treasurer, respectively, Hollywood Church Federation of Mothers' Clubs.

Mrs. S. R. Orr, president, Mothers' Club of West Hollywood.

Mrs. F. R. Schalch, president, Mothers' Club of West Hollywood Congregational Church.

Mrs. F. C. Van, president, Mothers' Club of West Hollywood M. E. Church.

Dr. Chas. F. Nelson, a former president, United Church Brotherhood of Los Angeles.

Sheldon Shepard, director of the Hollywood Forum.

Louis Thurber Guild, superintendent of M. E. Church, Los Angeles District.

The following letter from Hon. John C. Porter, now mayor of Los Angeles, furnishes a fair sample of all the letters from the list of citizens named above:

"Many church leaders of this city have brought to our attention the case of Miss Marjorie Truell who was sentenced about a year ago to San Quentin for forgery.

A member of the United Church Brotherhood Civic Affairs Committee has very carefully investigated Miss Truell's case. We are convinced that the majesty of the law, the sanctity of her present and future home, the welfare of society and the personal future of Miss Truell will all best be served by your granting an unconditional pardon after the completion of one year of her indeterminate sentence.

We, therefore, urge that you take this action as early as possible.

Assuring you of the support of our brotherhood in your efforts to give this State a clean moral administration, we remain,

Sincerely yours,

(Signed)

J. C. PORTER.

Chairman for the Civic Affairs Committee."

H. B. Hardacre, vice president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank where she was employed, now executive vice president of the Security First National Trust and Savings Bank, writes as follows:

"I have been requested to address you with respect to the record, while in our employ, of Marjorie Truell, who I understand is making application for pardon.

Miss Truell was employed by this bank from January 15, 1924, to June 15, 1926. During that period she performed clerical work of a responsible nature to our entire satisfaction. This work at times involved the handling of valuable securities all of which were accounted for and her record here was satisfactory in all respects.

Her father, who is a business man of some responsibility, advises me that in case of her release from the State Prison he expects to give her proper supervision and that if and when she is released she will be married to a worthy young man to whom she was affianced prior to her incarceration.

My personal impression is that if she is released she is likely, under these circumstances, to become a useful member of society and I should personally be glad if you should find it desirable to grant the pardon requested.

Yours very truly,

(Signed)

R. B. HARDACRE."

It will be noted that all those named above presented their appeals for executive clemency in this case during the year 1927, most of the letters having been received more than two years ago. However, as I told the father and others who made personal application to me, I am very anxious to establish in this State the principle that under all ordinary circumstances, where no new evidence has been brought forward to indicate a miscarriage of justice, parole and the completion of the parole period, should precede pardon by a Governor. I have attempted a statement of this principle in my message to the Legislature on Reprieves, Commutations and Pardons, under date of January 10, 1929, from which I quote, in part, as follows:

"Under the very liberal parole laws which prevail in California, the first clemency to be shown a prisoner should normally be through action of the Parole Board. During the period of parole the former prisoner is bound to conduct himself properly, for to do so is a condition of the necessarily rather rigid parole regulations. He must be industrious, temperate, law-abiding, and in other ways justify the freedom which has been accorded him. As soon as the period of parole has expired, however, and conditions of parole no longer compel him to observe a course of good conduct as the price of freedom from prison restraint. I believe the State should give him assurance that he may look forward to ultimate pardon and restoration to citizenship, provided after a reasonable length of time he can show that he has proved himself worthy of such recognition."

The father of Marjorie Truell, and others interested in the case showed a very fine spirit of willingness to accept my views expressed above as to the proper time for issuing a pardon. Indeed, I should have preferred a somewhat longer period after the expiration of parole, were it not for the fact that under federal law this young woman is now subject to deportation. She was actually ordered deported on July 16th of this year, but a sixty days' stay was granted which expires this morning. Accordingly action must now be taken if this deportation is to be prevented; and I am satisfied that the ends of justice do not require that the family be disrupted as would be the case if pardon were now refused.

The very evident contrition on the part of this former offender against the law is manifest in a letter I received from her some two months ago. In this letter she shows very clearly how great a blow her deportation would be to her father and her husband. The letter, I think is worthy of preservation, as showing the state of mind of one to whom I believe pardon may safely and justly be granted.

"4034 West 63d Street,

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, July 14, 1929.

Governor C. C. Young,
Los Angeles, California.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: Unknown to either my father, or my husband, may I trespass upon your time long enough to submit a heartfelt plea in their behalf far more than in my own?

I believe you kindly granted my father, Mr. Truell, an interview yesterday. I think I can safely say that it is a matter of life or death to him, whether or not I receive a pardon from you as the sole means of avoiding deportation. My father is an elderly gentleman over 63 years of age, and came to California primarily on account of rheumatism which he could never be free of in Canada. Since that time he has never had even a twinge of it and he enjoys perfect health. He can not return to Canada should I be obliged to go, because he can not stand the rigors of our Canadian climate, either east or west; and he is too old to be uprooted and have to start all over again. My father brought me up alone ever since I was eight years old, taking great pride in my university successes, and his whole life centers on me. He has nobody but my husband and me with whom he makes his home, and his business interests are all in Los Angeles. Any Kiwanian or member of the Masonic Club of Los Angeles, to say nothing of a host of others, will tell you how much he is respected and admired.

My husband, as many of your State officers will vouch for, is a splendid type of young manhood. He married me upon my return from San Quentin, refusing to accept my proffered release. It would certainly mean ruin to him should I be deported, because as you know, it is quite a problem to dispose of one's home and other property, to say nothing of one's business and start all over again at the bottom.

I can not offer you an excuse for my act which caused all this trouble—I think I must have been crazy—but ever since the day of my arrest I can truthfully say I have made every effort to make up to all concerned for the trouble I caused them. However, that is now a thing of the past. I served my sentence and my parole, and I did and am still doing all I know how to make up for the trouble and to prove to the world in general that I really am sincere in my regrets.

Thank you so much, Governor Young, for your courtesies past and present. Mr. Carlin also has been so splendid, and please believe how much we do appreciate them and if you can only see your way clear to grant me this clemency you will earn our heartfelt gratitude and save two very wonderful gentlemen a world of trouble. They are the innocent victims, and there isn't a thing in the world I wouldn't do if I could save them this pending deportation. I know I don't deserve your kindness and all their love, but they do deserve everything in the world, and if additional parole could help, I would gladly submit to it to prove my gratitude.

Thanking you again and earnestly hoping for your favorable consideration, I beg to remain,

Gratefully yours,
(Signed)

(MRS.) MARJORIE TRUELL DAVIDSON."

The last letter I received upon this case is from the deputy district attorney who prosecuted, and who reiterates the recommendation of the district attorney's office as made two years before. This letter, in conjunction with the other recent letter of the presiding judge, already reproduced, fittingly concludes the correspondence on the case.

"I am writing this at the request of Mr. Newton D. Truell, who resides at No. 14034 West 63d Street, this city.

Mrs. Edith M. Davidson, formerly Miss Edith Marjorie Truell, daughter of Mr. Newton D. Truell, was charged in an information filed in the superior court of the State of California, in and for the county of Los Angeles, on July 2, 1926, with four counts of forgery, felonies. On the thirteenth day of July, 1926, the above named defendant pleaded guilty to the four counts as charged in the information. The court, on July 27, 1926, sentenced said defendant to San Quentin for the term prescribed by law on count one of the information and granted probation on counts two, three and four.

I was deputy district attorney in charge of the prosecution of the case.

I have been advised that the aforementioned defendant served her term in San Quentin and was released this year. The records also show that the period of probation as to counts two, three and four has been terminated, pleas of not guilty entered, and the charges have been dismissed.

It has been called to my attention that under a federal provision an alien convicted of a felony is subject to deportation. Mrs. Edith M. Davidson is a Canadian, and hence subject to the above provision.

Taking into consideration all of the circumstances in this case, including the report to me that since her release from the penitentiary she has married and is now leading an upright life, I believe that in the interests of justice a pardon should be granted to Mrs. Edith M. Davidson.

With kindest personal regards, I remain,

Very sincerely yours,

(Signed)

LEO AGGELER."

September 11, 1929.

I believe that Marjorie Truell Davidson has demonstrated herself to be worthy of consideration and entitled to recognition from society and the people of this State to the extent of a removal of the disabilities incident to the conviction of a felony, one of which—deportation—is about to be felt.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, in consideration of the extenuating and mitigating circumstances surrounding the commission of the crime, and of the good character which she previously bore and which she now bears, and particularly of the fact that since her final discharge she has shown that she intends to lead a peaceful, law abiding, honest, clean life, and is, therefore, now entitled to a removal of the disabilities incident to the conviction of a felony, including the restoration of civil rights, the making possible of the acquisition of United States citizenship, and the prevention of deportation, and in view of the recommendations of the Advisory Pardon Board and others hereinbefore referred to, do hereby pardon Edith Marjorie Davidson, nee Truell, of the said crime of forgery.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this sixteenth day of September, A. D. 1929.

Governor of the State of California.

REPRIEVE.

Upon a showing of facts presented to me by Warden James B. Holohan and Dr. W. P. Goddard, acting resident physician at San Quentin Prison, I am hereby issuing a reprieve of sixty days to George Costello, whose execution was heretofore set for Thursday, October 17, 1929.

On August 25, 1928, Costello, together with Louis Lazarus and William O'Brien, was duly convicted of the crime of murder.

The prisoner, on the morning of October 14, 1929, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor blade, and I am today in receipt of report from Warden Holohan, as well as Dr. W. P. Goddard, acting resident physician at San Quentin, to the effect that the wound will not be sufficiently healed to permit the defendant, Costello, to go to the gallows on Thursday, October 17th, unassisted. Their letters are as follows:

"October 15, 1929.

Hon. C. C. Young,

Governor of California,

Sacramento, California.

DEAR GOVERNOR: I herewith enclose a letter from Dr. W. P. Goddard, our assistant resident physician, regarding one Costello, the condemned man, who is sentenced to be executed on next Thursday. In view of this man's condition and the doctor's report on him, I am thoroughly convinced that a reprieve of say sixty days would be desirable. I believe it would be the wise thing to do—the humane thing to do. I trust that you may be able to see your way clear to grant this man a reprieve.

Yours very sincerely,

(Signed)

JAS. B. HOLOHAN, Warden."

Re: Costello—45873.

"October 15, 1929.

Hon. J. B. Holohan, Warden.

DEAR SIR: This man's condition today is such that he will be able to mount the scaffold Thursday. The wound is such, however, that it will be opened when he drops, and there will be considerable hemorrhage at that time. The wound will not be healed firmly enough in the next six weeks or two months to withstand the shock of the drop without opening.

It is our opinion that the neck will not be completely severed, but it is impossible to make this statement as a certainty. He will be very weak on Thursday, but with slight assistance he should be able to walk.

Yours very truly,

(Signed)

W. P. GODDARD, M.D.,
Assistant Resident Physician."

Accordingly and for this reason alone, acting upon the recommendation of the Warden, I do hereby reprieve George Costello, under sentence to be hanged in the State Prison at San Quentin on the seventeenth day of October, 1929, until and to Friday, December 13, 1929.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this sixteenth day of October, A. D. 1929.

[SEAL]

C. C. YOUNG,

Governor of the State of California.

Attest: FRANK C. JORDAN, Secretary of State.

By FRANK H. COBY, Deputy.

REPRIEVE.

Because the day on which Joe Troche is sentenced to be executed for murder in the first degree falls on Good Friday, a day which has always been avoided in California for the execution of criminals, I do hereby reprieve the said Joe Troche, sentenced to be hanged in the State Prison at San Quentin on the eighteenth day of April, 1930, until and to Friday, April 25, 1930.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this eleventh day of April, 1930.

[SEAL]

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

Attest: FRANK C. JORDAN, Secretary of State.

REPRIEVE.

I am hereby granting to Joseph Troche, otherwise known as Joe Troche, whose execution at San Quentin is set for Friday, April 25th, a reprieve from said date of April 25th, to Friday, May 23, 1930.

On April 11th a reprieve of one week was granted to Troche from April 18th to April 25th, but was granted solely to avoid an execution on good Friday, a practice which has always been avoided in California. At that time no additional clemency for the condemned man was considered possible, or was under contemplation.

Within the past few days, however, certain representations and pleas have been made for the commutation of Troche's sentence, which seem to throw a new light on the case, and which I deem worthy to be considered and investigated. To weigh properly the new material which has been adduced, it seems necessary that I reread the transcript of the trial, which I read very carefully several months ago, but which, in some of its details, has passed from my memory.

I am particularly impressed by a communication I have just received, signed by six justices of the State Supreme Court, and by Presiding Justice Tyler of the Appellate Court, in which the opinion is strongly expressed that "the situation presents a case where executive clemency should be applied."

The member of the court who transmitted this communication to me points out that in the Supreme Court's previous consideration of the case, the members were necessarily confined to a consideration of law alone, but that if an application to the court for a reduction of the sentence had been presented, it would very possibly have met with favorable consideration.

I have always felt it to be unfortunate that the Supreme Court, which more than any other agency is qualified to weigh the merits of evidence in such matters, whether presented at a trial or subsequently, is of necessity restricted in its powers; and I shall always welcome the advice of its members as individuals in cases where their study has convinced them that executive clemency would be in the interest of justice.

To give to this case the additional consideration and study which it apparently requires, the two or three days intervening between this date and April 25th is obviously not sufficient. Accordingly, I do hereby reprieve the said Joseph or Joe Troche, sentenced to be hanged in the State Prison at San Quentin on the twenty-fifth day of April, 1930, until and to Friday, May 23, 1930.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this twenty-third day of April, 1930.

[SEAL]

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

Attest: FRANK C. JORDAN, Secretary of State.

COMMUTATION.

I am hereby commuting the sentence of Joseph Troche, otherwise known as Joe Troche, sentenced to be executed on May 23, 1930, from capital punishment to imprisonment for life. This is a case in which there have been two reprieves, the first to avoid an execution on Good Friday, and the second to admit further study of the case owing to a recommendation for executive clemency by members of the State Supreme Court. In granting the latter reprieve I expressed myself as follows:

"I am particularly impressed by a communication I have just received, signed by six justices of the State Supreme Court and by Presiding Justice Tyler of the Appellate Court, in which the opinion is strongly expressed that 'the situation presents a case where executive clemency should be applied.'

The member of the court who transmitted this communication to me points out that, in the Supreme Court's previous consideration of the case, the members were necessarily confined to a consideration of law alone, but that, if an application to the court for a reduction of the sentence had been presented, it would very possibly have met with favorable consideration.

I have always felt it to be unfortunate that the Supreme Court, which more than any other agency is qualified to weigh the merits of evidence in such matters, whether presented at a trial or subsequently, is of necessity restricted in its powers; and I shall always welcome the advice of its members as individuals in cases where their study has convinced them that executive clemency would be in the interest of justice."

Several days before I had received this communication from the Supreme Court, I had heard from Superior Judge George H. Thompson, who presided at the trial at which Troche was convicted, and from District Attorney Henry S. Lyon, who prosecuted the case, both of whom expressed the opinion that the verdict was a proper one, and that they were unable to assign any reason why the sentence should be mitigated. It is my impression that these same views are still held by both these officials.

In view of this fact, and in view of the fact that no distinctly new evidence has entered into the case since the trial, the precedent ordinarily followed in previous cases would seem to indicate that the original sentence should be carried out. However, the voluntary letter of recommendation by practically the entire membership of the Supreme Court introduces an element which can not be disregarded, particularly in view of the fact that the court has authority to reduce a sentence by reducing the degree of the crime. It is now too late for this to be done as a matter of ordinary procedure, and it can be accomplished only by recommendation for executive clemency.

I have ascertained by personal investigation and interview that the members of the court, all of whom have studied this case with very especial care, are sincerely troubled by the conviction that under the circumstances attending this crime the penalty of death is too severe. As expressed in their letter to me, they seem to be of the opinion that in the verdict carrying the extreme penalty insufficient weight was given to Troche's mental condition, or even to the possibility, owing to the finding of only one empty shell at the scene, that the bullet which entered Troche's head in his suicide attempt was the same bullet which killed his companion.

Following is the letter of recommendation as written by Presiding Justice Tyler of the Appellate Court while sitting as a pro tempore member of the Supreme Court, and concurred in by the other justices:

"April 21, 1930.

Hon. C. C. Young,
Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, California.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: At the time of the first hearing of the case of People vs. Troche, I was a pro tempore member of the Supreme Court. At the conclusion of the presentation of the case it seemed to me, and it still does, that the verdict carrying the extreme penalty was, under all the circumstances of the case, a very severe one.

The defendant at the trial had interposed two pleas, a general one of not guilty and also one of not guilty by reason of insanity. He was found guilty of both without recommendation. It appears in evidence at the trial that the defendant was afflicted with a form of epilepsy, and during the time he was suffering spells incident to the disease he had no recollection of what had transpired or of any act he might have committed. There was medical testimony to the effect that he was insane at the time he committed the act of which he was convicted.

While it is true he admitted at the time he was found wounded in the automobile with his dead companion that he had shot her, he subsequently and at the trial denied all knowledge of the affair. When discovered he was in a practically dying condition; his blood and particles of his brain were oozing from his wound. Then again there is a possibility that only one shot was fired by him, which resulted in the infliction of his own injuries, the bullet then passing on through his head and killing his companion, as but one exploded cartridge was found at the scene of the unfortunate affair.

Considering his former good character, his extreme youth, the insanity of his mother, his affection for his intended bride, his lack of motive, and the other facts and circumstances with which you are of course familiar, it seems to me that the situation presents just such a case where executive clemency should be applied. I am, therefore, suggesting that you commute the sentence to life imprisonment. With kindest personal regards,

Very truly yours,

(Signed)

JOHN F. TYLER."

"We, the undersigned, members of the Supreme Court of California, concur in the statement of the facts of this case as above set forth, and unite with Mr. Justice Tyler in the recommendation that the sentence of Joseph Troche be commuted to imprisonment for life.

(Signed)

JOHN E. RICHARDS,
JNO. W. PRESTON.
JESSE W. CURTIS,
EMMETT SEAWELL,
JOHN W. SHENK,
W. H. LANGDON.
By JOHN W. PRESTON."

In explaining the form of the last signature, Justice Preston writes me as follows:

"You will observe that six of the seven members of the Supreme Court have endorsed the recommendation of Justice Tyler, petitioning you to grant executive clemency to Troche. Mr. Justice Langdon was ill at his home, but I called him on the telephone and explained the situation to him with respect to our endorsement; he then authorized me to sign his name, thus joining in the request that you grant executive clemency to this man."

I have reproduced the above letter from the members of the Supreme Court, not because I desire to evade any responsibility in the matter, for I realize that such responsibility is mine alone; but because of the clear and concise statements expressed, as well as the very earnest recommendation on the part of the justices. Incidentally, I have never known another capital case in which there has been less popular clamor than has been expressed at this time. Instead of the scores of letters and telegrams ordinarily received, practically nothing has come in except this one voluntary and unsolicited letter from the Supreme Court. The action of the court shows what unexpected help may come to a man, poor, without influence of any kind, and apparently friendless and forgotten.

When I take into consideration the legal power of the court under other circumstances to reduce the degree of offenses, as well as their specialized training and ability, which enables them to weigh evidence and reach just conclusions more surely than a layman is able to do, I feel that I have no other alternative than to follow their recommendation; and I have so expressed myself to District Attorney Lyon, who, in the course of his official duty, has devoted much earnest effort to the prosecution of this case. If any mistake is possible in such a matter, I feel that it should be made on the side of mercy, and I wish to thank the members of the Supreme Court for their presentation of the case which has led to this merciful conclusion.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, do hereby commute the sentence of death imposed upon Joseph Troche, otherwise known as Joe Troche, in the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of El Dorado, upon condition that he be imprisoned during the term of his natural life in the State Prison at San Quentin.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be applied this twentieth day of May, 1930.

C. C. YOUNG, Governor.

PARDON.

For some time I have had before me an application for pardon in the cases of Mike Garvey, Harvey Leshner and Phil Rohan, convicted of burglary and of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment. Shortly after receiving this application I referred the case to the Advisory Pardon Board with the recommendation that it be given exceedingly careful study.

Since assuming my present office I have taken the position that as a matter of regular procedure a pardon should follow parole, except in cases where a very definite presumption of innocence can be established. In other words, I believe that a pardon should normally involve a restoration to citizenship after a sufficient period has elapsed, between the time of final discharge and the time of application, to demonstrate clearly that the applicant is deserving and is following a course of proper conduct after the restrictions of parole have been removed.

In line with this policy, I have granted a limited number of pardons, restoring to citizenship former prisoners who, for a sufficient time after the expiration of their paroles, had demonstrated such industry and excellence of behavior as to convince me that they had earned the right to the utmost in the way of executive clemency. In fact, I have a number of these cases now before me, in which full pardon and restoration to citizenship should shortly be granted.

On the other hand, during the three and one-half years of my incumbency, I have issued but one pardon to a man already in prison; and in that case his innocence was absolutely proved through the confession, conviction, and incarceration of the real perpetrator of the crime for which the prisoner was unjustly being punished. In the present case of Garvey, Lesher and Rohan, I felt that a similar degree of certainty should be established, in order that their release, if granted, might as far as possible demonstrate their innocence of the crime of which they had been convicted.

Accordingly, before taking final action in this instance, I have waited until I should receive a unanimous recommendation from the Advisory Pardon Board, as well as letters from the district attorney and from the judge who presided at the original trial of the case. Although Lieutenant Governor Carnahan, who has devoted much time to an exhaustive investigation of the matter, submitted his report to the board several weeks ago, a full concurrence of all the other members of the board has been secured only within the last two days.

Moreover, the first letters I received from Judge Aggeler, who tried the case, and from former District Attorney Keyes and his deputies, who prosecuted it, were unfavorable to executive clemency. To complete the record, however, I should say that, about a year after his first letter, I received a second letter from Mr. Keyes, reading in part as follows:

"I have carefully reviewed this case and state that in my opinion these men were wrongfully convicted, and are not guilty of this crime. The fact that I was district attorney when they were prosecuted and convicted justifies me, I believe, in giving you my views of the case at this time, as I feel more or less responsible for this miscarriage of justice."

The final recommendation from the chairman of the Advisory Pardon Board has just come to me under date of June 14th, and reads as follows:

"I examined carefully all of the evidence respecting Garvey, Lesher and Rohan submitted to the Pardon Board and supplemented this examination with a personal investigation of other facts that seemed material.

The result of the examination and investigation is shown in my report to you as chairman of the Advisory Pardon Board. I have not the slightest doubt that the defendants are innocent of the crimes of which they were convicted, and should be pardoned."

Within the past two weeks letters have also been received from Superior Judge Aggeler and from Mr. Fitts, the present district attorney, calling attention to the investigations which have been made by the grand jury and otherwise, and containing very different recommendations from those presented by these two offices when the cases were first referred to me. In fact, during the past two years there have been almost continuous investigations of the case on the part of the grand jury, district attorney's office, and Advisory Pardon Board; and numerous affidavits have been secured and new evidence gathered, all tending to discredit much of the testimony through which the original conviction was obtained.

In view of these recent letters from judge and district attorney, as well as the unanimous recommendation from the Advisory Pardon Board, I feel that no good purpose can be served by further investigations, and that a pardon to Garvey, Lesher and Rohan should at once issue. In granting this pardon, I wish briefly to review the circumstances of the crime as well as the reasons for my belief in the innocence of the accused. I shall also quote from the letter of the district attorney, and shall present the letter of the presiding judge, which well sums up the situation.

November 1, 1927, A. R. Miles, a druggist, running a small corner drug store on Jefferson street, in Los Angeles, was found a little before ten o'clock at night, wounded and unconscious on the floor of the rear room of his store, and bound with a heavy cord. He died a few minutes later as a result of his wounds. The facts indicated that he had been attacked, at some time between 7.50 and 9.35 p.m. incidental to a robbery of his store.

About a month after this event, Mike Garvey, Harvey Lesher and Phil Rohan, then under arrest on another charge, and in jail at Los Angeles, were identified in a police "show-up," by Eddie Yates, a ten-year old boy, who claimed that he had seen them enter the store on the night of the murder and follow Miles toward the back room, and afterwards leave the store hurriedly and drive away. Howard Walton, a confessed bootlegger, also informed the police that Lesher, when recovering from a drunken stupor at Walton's home, had confessed to him that he, Lesher, had killed the druggist, and that Garvey and Rohan were with him.

The three were indicted and tried; and, chiefly on the testimony of Eddie Yates and of Walton, were convicted of murdering Miles and burglarizing his store. On its verdict of murder, the jury recommended life imprisonment. The defendants sought a new trial, but it was denied. Upon their appeal, the judgment against them was affirmed.

Notwithstanding their conviction, the defendants persistently have asserted their innocence, and, at their instance, pending their appeal, the Los Angeles County grand jury, under Hon. John C. Porter (now mayor of Los Angeles) as foreman, conducted an investigation through the district attorney's office, in which evidence was produced of many facts not disclosed at the trial.

This evidence, together with the record of the proceedings in court, was presented to me with the application of the defendants for a pardon, and was referred to the Advisory Pardon Board. Following a further and independent investigation by that Board, Lieutenant Governor Carnahan, its chairman, has submitted to me a detailed report and analysis of the facts, together with his conclusions. The facts recited in this report, based upon the testimony of reputable and disinterested witnesses, show clearly and to my satisfaction that Eddie Yates was at a picture show from soon after 7 p.m. until after 9 p.m.; and in the opinion of Mr. Carnahan was not in the vicinity of the drug store until after the body of the druggist had been found by others and the police had been notified. He is the only one who has claimed that he saw the defendants there.

It is the evident belief of Lieutenant Governor Carnahan, as it is of others who have investigated this case, that Eddie Yates was romancing—possibly unconsciously, as is not unusual with ten-year-old children under similar circumstances. On the other hand, Dr. E. W. Yates, a dentist in the vicinity of the murder, and father of Eddie, is satisfied that the boy is telling a straightforward story, but has testified under the possibility of mistaken identity. Dr. Yates has written to me as follows:

"DEAR GOVERNOR YOUNG: I am E. W. Yates, father of Eddie Yates, that testified in the case of the State against Harvey Leshner, Mike Garvey and Phil Rohan.

I am informed that these men are being held entirely on the evidence of my boy. I know the boy did the best that he could, and sincerely believes these men were guilty, and has never changed his opinion to this day. But he having never seen these men before, and seeing them at night, under the circumstance there is great possibility of a mistaken identity. So, if his is the only evidence it does not look to me that it would be just or fair to hold them.

I am asking you under these circumstances to consider favorably their release.

Very respectfully yours,
(Signed)

E. W. YATES."

December 28, 1928, about a year after the trial, Howard Walton made an affidavit that all of his testimony respecting Leshner's confession was false and that no such confession had been made to him. The evidence justifies the belief that Walton's testimony at the trial was given through his fear of repudiating similar statements previously made to the police to cause the arrest of Garvey and Leshner on some pretext, in retaliation for their rumored intention, reported to him, to "shake him down" as a bootlegger.

The defendants assert that they were all at Leshner's home several miles from the drug store during all of the evening, until after 10 p.m. In this they are corroborated by seven others. Although the others are relatives or friends, their testimony, nevertheless, seems credible, and under the circumstances is persuasive of the truth of the defendants' claims.

Pursuant to section 1420 of the Penal Code, Hon. Wm. T. Aggeler, the judge of the court before which the conviction was had; Asa Keyes, the district attorney by whom the action was prosecuted, and Byron Pitts, the present district attorney of Los Angeles County, have furnished me with summarized statements of facts proved on the trial and other facts developed in the subsequent investigation, referring to the propriety of granting or refusing a pardon. Each of these public officers, as well as Mayor Porter, the foreman of the grand jury during the post trial investigation; the Lieutenant Governor, as chairman of the Advisory Pardon Board, and Dr. Gustav A. Briegleb, pastor of Eddie Yates, who made a personal investigation of the case beginning immediately after the body of the druggist was found, is of the opinion that the defendants are innocent of the crimes for which they are now held in prison.

I have already quoted from the letter of former District Attorney Keyes. Under date of June 6, 1930, present District Attorney Pitts wrote to Lieutenant Governor Carnahan, chairman of the Advisory Pardon Board, a letter reading in part as follows:

"I am quite mindful of the seriousness of the charge pending against these defendants, and am likewise conscious of the importance of this matter not only to them, but to the State as well. Therefore, several months ago I directed Mr. William McKay, one of the ablest lawyers of this office, to make a special investigation of the facts of this case. Mr. McKay spent a great deal of time and effort in completing this investigation. Under date of March 1, 1930, in a letter to James A. Johnston, Director of the Department of Penology and a member of the Advisory Pardon Board of California, Mr. McKay concluded, 'from a careful consideration of the entire record, and the attendant circumstances, I am of the opinion that the defendants are innocent of the crime and feel that it is a matter which should suggest itself to the board for consideration at the earliest opportunity.'"

As said above, I feel that the entire matter, including the transition from a belief in the guilt of the defendants to a belief in their innocence, is well summed up in the latest letter from Judge Aggeler, which I received on June 14th, only six days ago. This letter, I believe, is worth reproducing in full, and may very properly conclude this presentation of the case.

"Hon. C. C. Young,

Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, California.

In the matter of the application of the pardon of Mike Garvey, Harvey
Lesher, Phil Rohan.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: I presided at the trial of the three above-named defendants. They were convicted by a jury of murder in the first degree. Before judgment was passed by the trial court a motion for a new trial was made on the ground that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain the verdict of guilt. I denied the motion for a new trial on the ground that the testimony was sufficient. Thereupon the case was appealed on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to sustain the verdict. The District Court of Appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that the evidence was sufficient, and also holding that no errors were committed by the trial judge; that the defendants were legally convicted.

The testimony in this case upon which the defendants were convicted depended almost wholly upon one witness, Eddie Yates, a boy about twelve years old. I was of the opinion, when the motion for a new trial was denied, that if Eddie Yates had been impeached the evidence would not sustain a verdict of guilt. At that time, however, there was no evidence challenging the truthfulness of the testimony of Eddie Yates. Since the case has been before the Board of Pardons of California I have written to that board that if the testimony of Eddie Yates was impeached the defendants should be pardoned.

Since the trial much evidence has been gathered, none of which was presented to the court and jury at the trial of the case, which impeaches Eddie Yates beyond question. I am of the opinion if this evidence, gathered since the trial, had been before the jury the defendants would not have been convicted. The testimony in the hands of the Pardon Board, which I have considered, entitles the defendants in this case to a favorable consideration of their application for a pardon.

I recommend that each of the defendants be pardoned.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed)

WILLIAM TELL AGGELER."

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of the said State, do hereby pardon Mike Garvey, Harvey Lesher and Phil Rohan of the crimes of murder and of burglary, of which they were convicted as above stated, and for which they have heretofore been committed to San Quentin Prison.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this twentieth day of June, A.D. 1930.

PARDON.

I am today issuing a pardon to Frank L. Vandusen of Crannell, Humboldt County, who in May, 1927, was convicted by a jury of fraudulent registration and voting in that county.

Mr. Vandusen was born in Glens Falls, New York, and when a child was taken in 1867 to the Dominion of Canada, where he resided for many years. On June 23, 1894, upon his application there was issued a certificate of Canadian citizenship, with the qualification that in the country of his birth he should not be deemed to be a British subject unless he has ceased to be a subject of his native country in accordance with its laws.

Some twelve or thirteen years after obtaining this Canadian citizenship, Mr. Vandusen removed to Humboldt County, California, and some time subsequent to arriving at this new place of residence, registered and voted as a citizen of the United States, under what he asserts as his belief that the citizenship granted him in Canada was of such a nature that it lapsed upon his return to the United States, and that his status thereafter was the same as that of any other native of this country.

The records show that shortly prior to March 31, 1927, Frank L. Vandusen was called before the grand jury of Humboldt County, sitting at Eureka, and questioned by the district attorney and others relative to his citizenship. Shortly afterward the grand jury returned an indictment for fraudulent registration and voting, an indictment containing five counts, one of which was afterward barred by the statutes of limitations. A verdict of guilty was afterward rendered on the other four counts, coupled with a paper, signed by nine of the jurors, recommending to the judge the utmost clemency for the defendant.

On May 26, 1927, the time fixed for sentence, motions for a new trial and for arrest of judgment were denied; and then, without any further action upon motion by the defendant's attorneys, the court issued an order of probation for two years. This order of probation so fully sets forth the entire case that it seems worth while to quote it in full. It reads as follows:

"Order of Probation.

You have been convicted by a jury in this court of having registered and voted illegally, that is having, while you were a subject of Great Britain and Canada, registered and voted in the State of California, a right accorded only to citizens of the United States, and prohibited by the laws of this State to aliens. It is the tendency of these times to protect the elective franchise of this country by stringent laws, that our government be not imperiled, and your violation of the law in regard thereto has called upon the officers of the law to take the action that led to your conviction.

The offense of which you are convicted is not one of the crimes denominated mala in se, that is morally wrong in themselves, but it belongs to that great class of offenses denominated mala prohibita, that is wrong because prohibited. Crimes mala in se, wrong in themselves, are those that have been crimes since the dawn of civilization, and are usually committed only by the vicious. Most of these laws are included in the laws of Moses, and are known as the Ten Commandments. The violation of these laws carries with it moral turpitude, and are usually committed by men of an abandoned heart.

You, as a man, do not belong to that class of offenders. Your offense does not involve moral turpitude. It belongs to the list of offenses denominated mala prohibita, or wrong because prohibited. A penalty is necessarily attached to the enforcement of all laws, because, without a penalty, men would obey law only because it pleased them to do so. This is an offense that must be punished for the reason that the punishment of one who violates the law deters others from the commission of a like offense. This is one of those offenses for which the law of probation was enacted, and one where probation may properly be invoked.

Then considering your offense as one not necessarily committed by a man of an abandoned heart, and being in violation only of the law mala prohibita, I shall grant your petition for probation. I would have granted you probation even though you had not asked it, because I believe the law fully vindicated by your conviction, without any severe punishment beyond that entailed in the conviction.

I believe this is a case for the proper exercise of leniency. In granting probation it is usual for the court to attach certain restrictions to the conduct of the paroled offender. These restrictions usually run to an inquiry into the past life of the petitioner and the restraining of his conduct in the future to those activities which will tend to aid him in successfully overcoming the fault which led him to a violation of the law, and prohibit him from doing those things which would be most likely to cause him to lapse into other infractions of the law.

In your case these restrictions would be idle for the reason that your life in the past has been one of active business along industrial lines, and therefore far away from the haunts of crime.

You are not disposed to minor violations of the law; in fact your life, so far as I can learn, has upon the whole been very exemplary, and for this reason I will not impose upon you any restrictions in this regard, nor do I think you should be required to report to any officer of the law as to your conduct of activities during the term of your probation. These things I believe can be safely left with you; I shall therefore not require them.

No man is perfect, all men make mistakes, and for that reason I think officers of the law should exercise leniency and toleration in the condemnation of others, and I shall therefore ask on your part a like toleration in your treatment of others in matters that do not meet your approval. With this, and only this restriction, and a hope that you will find it convenient to call upon the court in the early future, you are discharged from the custody of the law, your bonds are exonerated and your probation will continue for the space of two years.

You are hereby at liberty to depart.

(Signed)

T. H. SELVAGE,

Judge of the Superior Court, Humboldt County, California."

As I have frequently stated since assuming my present office, except upon most unusual cases I have held that a parole should precede a pardon, and that a pardon should not be granted until some time has elapsed after the termination of the period of parole, usually several years after that time. In this case there was no incarceration and therefore no parole, but merely a probation without the restrictions normally attaching to probation, owing to the high standing of the defendant as a man of probity and character.

Accordingly, I shall not wait for the usual period to elapse before issuing a pardon, but am issuing a full pardon at this time in order that Mr. Vandusen may be in a position to secure the citizenship which he desires. In granting this pardon, I can do no better than to repeat the words of Judge Selva in explaining why no restrictions were imposed during the period of probation:

"In your case these restrictions would be idle for the reason that your life in the past has been one of active business along industrial lines, and therefore far away from the haunts of crime. You are not disposed to minor violations of the law. In fact your life, so far as I can learn, has upon the whole been very exemplary."

For such a man, after the severe lesson which has come to him, pardon is only just and right, and should be approved by every fair-minded citizen.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, do hereby pardon Frank L. Vandusen of the crime of fraudulent registration and voting of which he was convicted as above stated.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this twenty-sixth day of June, A. D. 1930.

For some time I have had before me an application for the pardon of Theodore (Ted) Lynch, who was convicted in the superior court of Ventura County of involuntary manslaughter. He was denied probation, and was sentenced November 12, 1923, to an indeterminate term not exceeding ten years in San Quentin. On May 24, 1924, the Prison Board fixed his term at three years, and November 24, of the same year, granted him parole. On March 12, 1926, his term expired and he was discharged from parole.

Following are the facts which led to his conviction: On September 20, 1923, he attended a public dance, where he became intoxicated from drinking bootleg whiskey. While driving home from this dance on the wrong side of the road, his automobile collided with another and overturned, killing Mrs. Flora Helm, 73 years old, and seriously injuring another passenger.

At this trial he refrained from testifying in his own behalf, and upon conviction accepted his sentence as a just one. The judge who presided at the trial afterward reported to the Prison Board that probation was denied largely because the serious result of the offense made it necessary to make an example of the case as a deterrent to others.

Previous to this offense, Ted Lynch had borne a good reputation. He served as machinist's mate in the Navy during the war, and subsequent to its close received an honorable discharge. He married in 1919, and his wife maintained the home for herself and their child, in order that he might come back to it after his imprisonment.

Prior to his trouble, he was employed as assistant foreman of the Dunn Manufacturing Company at Oxnard, and immediately upon his release on parole he was made shop superintendent by the same company, and given charge of 70 or 80 men. He is reported to be honest, industrious, and devoted to his family and the community. Except for his one offense his reputation is of the best.

He is vouched for by Judge Rogers, who presided at the trial; by the present judge, who was district attorney at that time; by the sheriff of the county; by the present district attorney, and by a majority of the jurors who tried him, among them being Hon. Dan Emmett, present assemblyman from Ventura County. Senator Duval of that county has also interviewed me in his behalf.

This is precisely the sort of case in which I am happy to grant a full pardon and restoration to citizenship. The offense which was committed, with fatal results to another, was one of such gravity that of necessity it could not be condoned. However, the fact that it was a first and only offense; that the resulting punishment was accepted with such a fine spirit; that after the term of prison and during the period of parole the former employers again came forward with a responsible position; that more than four years have elapsed since the parole expired—all these make this one of the best cases which have come to my attention.

As I have said in other instances of restoration to citizenship, when a man who has made a slip has subsequently fully paid his debt to the State, and has shown his desire and ability to become a respected member of society; when he has voluntarily and through his own efforts fully and conclusively demonstrated that he proposes to live a law-abiding, useful life; when he has done all this uncomplainingly, despite the handicap of loss of citizenship and civil rights; and when a sufficient time has elapsed subsequent to parole to thoroughly test the real character of the man—he is then entitled to consideration and help, rather than hindrance, from the State.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, in consideration of the facts which I have outlined above and in further consideration of favorable reports by the Advisory Pardon Board and others hereinbefore referred to, do hereby pardon the said Theodore (Ted) Lynch of the crime of involuntary manslaughter.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this eighth day of July, A. D. 1930.

Clifton R. Ticknor, then going under the name of John Carter, on September 19, 1919, pleaded guilty to the violation of section 284 of the Penal Code, which provides for the punishment of one who knowingly and wilfully marries the wife of another. He was sent to San Quentin under the indeterminate sentence law, and was given a term of one year by the Prison Board. Through credits for good behavior, his term was shortened to ten months, and he was released on July 19, 1920.

There is some uncertainty as to the degree of Ticknor's guilt in this case. Although the judge and district attorney of Orange County, where the offense was committed, joined in saying that it was "without extenuating circumstances unless it was the infatuation he had for the woman," the defendant himself claimed that the woman had told him she was divorced, and that when he pleaded guilty as to marrying her, he was not aware that the crime consisted in wilful knowledge of its bigamous nature.

Aside from these considerations, however, this is manifestly a case where Ticknor's good conduct for a period of more than ten years since his liberation has earned for him a right to pardon and restoration to citizenship. Upon gaining his freedom he secured occupation as washer and floor hand in a San Francisco garage. He has been steadily employed in this one place for over ten years, and has gradually worked his way up to the position of general foreman and manager.

His employers now wish to aid him in securing a business of his own, and feel that his chances for success would be much better if so far as possible there could be a removal of the stigma created by his early indiscretion. This seems to be a case where voluntary rehabilitation has been so thoroughgoing that the State may well do its part by giving to Ticknor the opportunity he has striven so hard to deserve.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, do hereby pardon Clifton R. Ticknor of the crime of violating section 284 of the Penal Code.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this fourteenth day of October, A. D. 1930.

Andrew J. O'Keefe was convicted in San Francisco of the crime of second degree burglary, and on March 28, 1914, was sent to San Quentin, from which he was subsequently released on September 5, 1917.

O'Keefe about 8 o'clock on the evening of the burglary had been ejected from a saloon on account of his drunken condition. Later, about 9.15, he entered an apartment through a window which happened to be open, filled a couple of suit cases with clothing belonging to the occupants of the apartment, went out through the window, and when trying to escape was arrested.

This was the second time that O'Keefe had been convicted of burglary. In 1909 he had burglarized another house in San Francisco, had been sent to prison on September 27th of that year, had been released on parole January 27, 1913, and was finally discharged three months later. As in the case of the subsequent burglary, he claimed to be drunk at the time this crime was committed.

Six years before this first burglary, when a boy of about eighteen, O'Keefe was caught fishing from a stolen boat on the San Francisco water front; and although he claimed he had merely stepped into the boat as it was tied along the dock, he was nevertheless held guilty of the theft, and served six months in the county jail for petit larceny.

There is no doubt that from his early boyhood until the time he was convicted for his second burglary more than ten years later, O'Keefe was very far from being a promising or desirable citizen. During much of this time he was a heavy drinker, as had been his father before him. He was almost without education, having left day school at the age of ten on the death of his father. In view of O'Keefe's early habits, and the two felonies for which he served time in prison, it may appear strange that he should now be given a full pardon and restoration to citizenship.

However, among all the cases which have come to my attention, there is scarcely one in which there has been such complete rehabilitation as in this. It was during O'Keefe's term in prison that he first acquired the ability to read books, and he has since done much in the way of self-education. Upon his release he procured employment with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, and with his earnings supported his bedridden mother and his half-sister. During these three years he gained the reputation of being "sober, industrious and honest," and is highly praised as such by Mr. A. S. Gunn, the general manager of the corporation.

In February, 1921, he secured a position as motorman with the United Railroads of San Francisco, his exemplary conduct during the previous three years earning for him this position, though his prison record was known to the company. He has now served in this position for nearly ten years, and I am informed "has averaged but three or four days off per year during this entire employment." He continued to pay the expenses of his mother until her death, besides supporting his half-sister and his wife, whom he married after his release.

Soon after his release from prison, it appears that he was able to commence putting money in the bank each month, and one of those who have written to me concerning him is Mr. Joseph O. Tobin, vice president of the Hibernia Savings and Loan Society. Mr. Tobin says:

"Mr. O'Keefe has been a depositor in the bank since July 29, 1918. He is a hard-working, respectable man, and has succeeded in saving enough money to purchase his own home, and has also accumulated considerable funds which are on deposit with us."

Mr. Gus Lachman of Lachman Brothers, a furnishing establishment, has also written as follows:

"We have known Mr. O'Keefe and his wife for about ten years, and have been impressed by his honesty and industry. We understand that he now owns his home, and furnishings purchased from us during the above period have been promptly paid for. We feel that whatever his past may have been, he is now a law-abiding person, and in every respect competent to exercise the rights of citizenship."

Among a number of other letters of the same kind, I will quote from that of Charles Behrend, jeweler and optician, who has known O'Keefe as a neighbor. He says:

"He has been a neighbor of mine for the past eight or nine years. I know him to be able, industrious, and absolutely honest. He is a man who works almost every day in the month, and has acquired his own home through his hard work and economy."

Only two or three days ago I received a letter from A. W. Brohman, superintendent of transportation of the Market Street Railway Company, which, speaking of O'Keefe, reads in part as follows:

"He has been continuously in our service for the past nine years and has an excellent record. His immediate superior has informed me that he shows every evidence of being worthy of restoration to citizenship."

Aside from these who have been quoted above, and who have known O'Keefe during these thirteen years since his release, I have also before me a communication from Judge Frank H. Dunne, who presided at his trial for burglary, and another from C. M. Fickert, former district attorney, who prosecuted the case. Both of these strongly recommend that a pardon be granted to O'Keefe, and both state that "ever since his release he has worked steadily, has been sober, industrious, and honest," has not been in any trouble of any nature, and has earned a right to be restored to the rights and privileges of citizenship. In this judgment the present sheriff, W. J. Fitzgerald, and the present district attorney, Matthew Brady, also concur.

Before a pardon could have been granted, one thing more was necessary. O'Keefe had twice been convicted of a felony, and in accordance with article VII of the State constitution, executive clemency could not be granted except upon a recommendation of a majority of the justices of the Supreme Court. These justices have investigated the case, and in a communication signed by the chief justice and five of the associate justices, have recommended to me "that the application of Andrew J. O'Keefe, for a pardon, be granted."

I have reviewed this case at length, since to my mind it presents an admirable instance of the kind of case best deserving pardon and restoration to citizenship. A twice-convicted felon, of intemperate habits and with an exceedingly bad start in life, in some way pulls himself together during his second prison term, acquires something in the way of education, and on his release when over thirty years of age, has something about him that enables him to gain his own self-respect as well as the respect of all with whom he is brought into contact. I can not help feeling that such a man is more worthy of the assistance of the State than one whose life has never needed the rigorous training of self-discipline. His present attitude is well summed up by Attorney Edwin V. McKenzie, whom the court appointed to defend O'Keefe at his second trial for burglary, and who has known him intimately ever since. In apologizing for so persistently calling the case to my attention, Mr. McKenzie says:

"I wish to urge in extenuation thereof the extreme anxiety of the petitioner to obtain a pardon. He looks upon the prior convictions as a terrible stain resting upon him. He is married, and he believes that this stain somehow affects his wife. His extreme anxiety for a pardon seems to the writer to be another evidence of his rehabilitation."

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, do hereby pardon Andrew J. O'Keefe of the crimes of burglary and burglary of the second degree as hereinbefore set forth.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this fourteenth day of October, A.D. 1930.

COMMUTATION.

Horace Magee was convicted of murder by a jury in Riverside County and was sentenced February 29, 1908, to Folsom for life. He was then twenty-nine years old. He was released March 6, 1920, on parole. Since his release, as before his offense, he has been regularly employed as a cowboy by R. F. Carner, a cattleman of San Bernardino. During his parole his conduct has been uniformly good.

Prior to his trouble he was a quiet, peaceable young man, well liked in the community. He was one of several children in a pioneer family that lived near Temecula in the early days of San Diego and Riverside counties. His father was Irish, his mother Indian. The family was well respected, the father for many years being the justice of the peace at Temecula.

Christmas Eve, 1907, Magee went to Temecula, and, during the evening, to the local pool room. Meanwhile he had been drinking whiskey, and when he arrived at the pool room he was drunk. Several pool players and others were there, among them Svanguen, the local constable. Some of them jokingly tormented Magee, one of them burning him with a lighted cigar. He became angry and took off his coat to fight. Svanguen apparently pacified him, and the two shook hands. He put on his coat and was about to leave when suddenly he shot and killed Svanguen. In the scuffle that followed he also shot and killed Louis Escallier, one of the men who tried to restrain him after he shot Svanguen.

The judge before whom the case was tried is dead. Lyman Evans, the district attorney who prosecuted Magee, says in his report of the case that "that evening being Christmas Eve, Magee had procured some whiskey and was intoxicated. The parties were all well acquainted and had been for several years. The defendant had herded cattle for some years near Temecula . . . and seemed to have been leading a quiet and peaceful life. . . . Had he been sober I think there would have been no trouble . . . it seemed to be clear that he had not been in the habit of drinking liquor, and nothing seemed to be premeditated. The shooting was the result of his anger when influenced by liquor and when offended by nagging. . . . I have no doubt he will hereafter lead a quiet and hardworking life. . . . Having kept the parole for a long time, I see no objection to a pardon."

The quarrelsome effect upon an Indian of drinking whiskey is a matter of common repute. Magee's viciousness while drunk was due, perhaps, in part to his inheritance. This, of course, did not excuse his offense.

However, the record of the case shows with reasonable certainty that the slaying was upon a sudden quarrel or heat of passion that made it really equivalent to manslaughter, and was without that measure of premeditation or malice aforethought that should compel a conscientious sense of justice to raise the degree of the crime to murder. The verdict for the latter, rather than the former offense, can be sustained only by the assumption that seems to be negative by the conditions preceding the shooting; but that, nevertheless, must have been indulged by the jury—that in the short interval following the quarrel, Magee's anger had cooled, and that with malice aforethought, while free from his prior passion, he resolved and planned to shoot and kill Svanguen, as later he did.

The maximum penalty for manslaughter is ten years. Whatever part of his term exceeds this limit must find its justification, if any, in the improbable conditions so assumed by the jury. Of the twenty-two years of his term that already have passed, he served the first twelve in prison.

I have referred this case to the Advisory Pardon Board, the unanimous recommendation of which is that Magee's life term be commuted to that part of it now elapsed without prejudice to any further executive clemency that hereafter may seem appropriate.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of the said State, do hereby commute the life sentence imposed upon Horace Magee to that portion of said term which has now elapsed.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this second day of January, 1931.

A. C. Halastik was convicted in Sacramento County of a violation of Sec. 288, Penal Code. On July 7, 1924, he was sentenced to San Quentin, where his sentence was fixed at six years. His term expired, with credits, on December 30, 1928. On May 22, 1926, he was paroled after actually serving eighteen months in prison. His parole period expired more than two years ago, and his record since his release has been satisfactory.

The offense of which he was convicted was that of improper acts toward a child of eleven and a half years. Assuming the truth of all the facts testified to at the trial, it would seem that they were the very minimum necessary to secure a conviction under this code section. The complaining witness testified that Halastik invited her and a girl friend to ride home from school with him, and that while riding in the car he placed his hand familiarly on her person but outside her clothes. There was no testimony as to any further advances, by word or deed. The girl also testified that prior to her occupation of the front seat, Halastik had treated her companion in the same way. The friend, however, had left the car before the complaining witness climbed from the rear to the front seat and hence could not corroborate the complaining witness' testimony as to alleged acts committed on her.

Halastik denied the alleged conduct, but naturally, having been alone in the car, was unable to introduce any corroborating testimony on his behalf.

It would seem that the foregoing, coupled with the rather severe punishment already undergone and Halastik's good conduct since his release from prison, might warrant executive clemency. Fortunately, however, we can go one step further, for considerable doubt had been cast upon the somewhat meager testimony given at the trial.

It will be recalled that the complaining witness was only eleven and a half years old at the time of the trial. In February, 1927, about three years after the alleged offense, at which time she was fourteen years three months old, she made an affidavit stating that she was taken to the district attorney's office without her mother being present; that she was embarrassed and frightened and did not realize the seriousness of the charges she was making, and that she made statements in his office and at the trial which were not in accord with the facts.

At about the same time the girl's mother and step-father made affidavits stating that for about six years, and up to within a few months of the alleged occurrence, the girl had been in an institution; that at the time of the trial they had been given no opportunity to observe her or to become familiar with her habits; that since the trial they had discovered her to be undependable and untruthful, and that they were of the opinion that an injustice might have been done. Both of them requested that a pardon be granted.

Ten of the jurors who convicted Halastik, one having died, and the other not being available, joined in a statement that they voted for a conviction largely upon the testimony of the complaining witness, but that since reading the affidavits of the father and mother they were in doubt as to Halastik's guilt, and joined in the request that a pardon be issued.

Hon. John F. Pullen, the judge who presided at the trial, has written me in part as follows:

"There was prosecuted in the superior court over which I presided a man named A. C. Halastik, for lewd and lascivious conduct. He was convicted almost entirely upon the testimony of a girl then about eleven years old, who testified that the defendant placed his hand upon her person, on top of her dress while sitting beside him in an automobile, and also agreed, according to her testimony, to meet her at a subsequent date in that vicinity.

A short time ago, the father and mother of this little girl called upon me and stated substantially what now appears in the affidavits of these two persons. I have not talked to the little girl herself, but there has been presented to me an affidavit by her, and I talked to an attorney with whom she has discussed the matter, and from these statements and affidavits I am of the opinion that Halastik was wrongly convicted of this offense.

Halastik, who is now on parole, naturally feels injured at what he believes was an unjust conviction, and is now seeking a pardon. From what I have been able to learn, from the sources named, I believe that he was convicted of an offense which he did not commit, and that it would be a just and gracious act for him to receive a pardon at your hands, and I therefore unite in the petition of the trial jurors, and the father and mother of the complaining witness that you will extend to him executive clemency."

An offense such as that involved in this case, if adequately proven and coupled with an intent to follow up more familiarity with more serious acts, merits severe condemnation and punishment. This case at the most only presents a record of undine familiarity without any showing of an intent to go further, and even that showing has been restrained and shown to say the least. In view of the eighteen months actually spent in prison, the two years of the parole period, the time which has elapsed since the expiration of this period, and Halastik's good conduct during all that time, it seems only just to give him the benefit of the considerable doubt that reasonable men have as to the wisdom of his conviction, and to restore him to citizenship at this time.

My judgment in this matter has been reinforced by the unanimous recommendation of the Advisory Parole Board.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, in conformity with the laws which I have previously given, do hereby pardon A. C. Halastik of the crime of violation of section 288, Penal Code of the State of California.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this second day of January, 1931.

Wm. J. O'Bryan was convicted of first degree murder in San Luis Obispo County in 1911, and sentenced to life imprisonment at San Quentin. He was received there on January 21, 1911. On March 14, 1921, he was released on parole, and allowed to return to Baltimore, Maryland, where employment was waiting for him. He has since then been steadily employed, and while out of direct touch with the California parole officers, has continued to send in his reports every month. From everything that can be ascertained his conduct has been uniformly good and he is now a law-abiding citizen.

The record of his conviction contains many circumstances which would lead one to believe that a verdict no greater than that of manslaughter would have been justified. O'Bryan was a stranger in San Luis Obispo, and the deceased was a member of a prominent local family. Feeling against him naturally ran high, and although there was a strong impression that the shooting was in self defense, and was certainly the result of a street quarrel, and not premeditated, the jury thought otherwise.

Ten years is the maximum penalty which could have been imposed had the jury's verdict been manslaughter. O'Bryan actually served a few months more than ten years. In addition to this, for nearly ten years he has been on parole, faithfully observing all the restrictions imposed thereby. He is now a law-abiding citizen, and the Advisory Parole Board has recommended the exercise of executive clemency in this case. After his long period of imprisonment and parole it seems fair to the man to remove his civil disability and restore him to citizenship.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, do hereby pardon Wm. J. O'Bryan of the crime of first degree murder.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this fifth day of January, 1931.

Miles H. Leibetter (S. Q. 48750) and Walter E. Evans (S. Q. 48749) were received at the county of inmates in Los Angeles County and on November 7, 1929, were sentenced to San Quentin for a term of one to fourteen years. They were received at that institution on July 2, 1930, and are there at the present time. Applications for executive clemency were submitted to me on July 19, 1930. I immediately referred them to the Advisory Parole Board, which undertook an intensive investigation of the matter. The report of the board, submitted in the form of a letter signed by Hon. H. L. Carnahan, chairman of the board, has just reached me, and is set forth in full.

"January 2, 1931.

Governor C. C. Young.

San Francisco, California.

DEAR SIR: At a meeting of the Advisory Parole Board held December 31, 1930, I was advised by the unanimous vote of the four members present to make the following report and recommendation to you respecting the applications of Walter E. Evans (S. Q. 48749) and Miles H. Leibetter (S. Q. 48750) for pardons.

August 30, 1929, Harry D. McDonald, who, by his own confession, had been twice convicted and imprisoned for violations of the Mann Act, and for about five years had been regularly engaged in the bootlegging business in Los Angeles, was arrested by the sheriff of Los Angeles County on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Wright Act. A few days later, while in jail, he made a pretended confession to the district attorney and to the grand jury, which, if true, involved more than fifty Los Angeles police officers with him in his various nefarious transactions. Of the officers named by him, seven were indicted by the grand jury. Of the seven officers so indicted, one was acquitted by a jury; three were dismissed on motion of the district attorney, after a trial and a disagreement by the jury; one was dismissed on motion of the district attorney, on the ground of insufficient evidence, after a trial and a conviction that was reversed by the Court of Appeals; and two (Evans and Ledbetter) were sentenced to imprisonment in the State penitentiary, after a conviction that was affirmed on appeal.

The charge against Evans and Ledbetter was that they received a bribe of $750 from McDonald upon their agreement not to arrest and prosecute him upon a charge of receiving stolen property which they were investigating.

Aside from his admissions respecting his bootlegging and his convictions and imprisonment for the felonies above mentioned, the substance of McDonald's testimony at their trial was as follows:

In August or September, 1927, he bought between twenty-five and thirty loose diamonds from Jack Hawkins, that he believed were stolen property. About a year later, during the latter part of September or the fore part of October, 1928, because he had been questioned concerning them by a policeman named Reavis, he telephoned Ledbetter, whom he knew, and with whom he was friendly. Ledbetter thereupon went to his place of business, which he operated nominally as a bath house, and told him to have nothing to do with Reavis, and that he, Ledbetter, would see Evans, to see what could be done. The following day Evans and Ledbetter called and talked to him in a lunch room adjoining the bath house, and said that Hawkins had been arrested in San Francisco, and had told about the sale of the diamonds to a police officer there who had written Evans, and that the case had been assigned to Evans; that because of their mutual friends Evans did not want to arrest McDonald; but that it would require $1,000 "to take care of down town to square this beef." McDonald agreed to pay $750. Later, the same day, Ledbetter telephoned McDonald that the matter had been fixed up for the agreed amount, and that he and Evans would be over to see McDonald the following morning. About 9 a.m. the following day, which was a Sunday, Evans and Ledbetter came to his home, and were admitted by Mrs. McDonald, who called him because he was not yet up. He dressed in his bathrobe, got from a drawer $750 in bills, which he and Mrs. McDonald had counted the night before, and went into the living room where Evans and Ledbetter were seated, and gave the money to Evans.

Mrs. McDonald testified that she had helped her husband count the money, as he stated, and saw him hand the roll of bills to Evans.

Elizabeth Pierce, a maid of the McDonalds', also testified that while passing an open doorway of the living room she saw a roll of bills being passed from one hand to another, but that she did not see who gave or received the money.

There was no evidence corroborating the testimony of McDonald, unless proof that McDonald and Ledbetter and their wives were on friendly terms, was of such character.

The investigation made by the Advisory Pardon Board shows that Evans and Ledbetter did talk to McDonald at his bath house, and did see him at his home the following morning. Otherwise, the testimony of these witnesses is refuted by the following facts, as to which there appears to be no reasonable doubt:

Neither the San Francisco Police Department, nor any San Francisco police officer, made any report to the Los Angeles Police Department or to Evans of any statement of Hawkins concerning McDonald, or any sale of diamonds by the former to the latter.

During the evening of June 16, 1928, Mrs. Nick Oswald was held up in her home and robbed by a lone bandit of two valuable diamond rings. The next day acting Detective Lieutenant S. S. Stone and Evans, his partner, who also was a detective lieutenant, were assigned to that case. They promptly interviewed Mrs. Oswald and afterward, on the same day, her husband, who reported to them that he had been robbed twice, a few months before. Neither Oswald nor his wife could give the officers any information to assist them in recovering the diamonds or in apprehending the bandit. Some days later the officers took Mrs. Oswald to view a suspect, whom she did not recognize, and also to various pawnshops.

Lieutenant Stone was off duty Saturday and Sunday, July 7 and 8, 1928. On the morning of Saturday, the seventh, Oswald phoned Evans that McDonald some time before the robbery had admired Mrs. Oswald's rings and that possibly he had instigated the robbery or knew something about it. Evans reported this information to Captain Vernand, the officer in charge of the detective bureau at the University Police Station, to which Evans and Stone were attached, and asked Captain Vernand if any detective in the bureau knew McDonald.

The captain knew that Ledbetter, who was then employed in the investigation of traffic accidents, had formerly been on the vice squad, and therefore might know McDonald. When Ledbetter later came into the station Captain Vernand questioned him and found that Ledbetter was acquainted with McDonald. The captain directed him therefore to assist Evans. The two went to McDonald's bath house about fifteen minutes after noon and talked to him in the lunch room adjoining it. McDonald denied any participation in the robbery of Mrs. Oswald, or any knowledge of it. He told the officers, however, that the description of the bandit fitted a brother of Zeke Hayes, who was working in a gasoline service station at Third street and Hobart boulevard. He also told the officers that he would see Zeke Hayes' sweetheart that evening, and to phone him at his home the following day, when he would tell them anything that he might learn from her.

Later the same day, while Evans was at the general hospital on another assignment, Ledbetter went with Mr. and Mrs. Oswald in their car to a place near by the service station, and sent them on alone to see if the employee in charge of the service station was Mrs. Oswald's assailant. Mrs. Oswald did not recognize him.

Sunday morning, July 8th, Evans and Ledbetter went to the Oswald home, where they saw both Oswald and his wife. From there, Ledbetter telephoned to McDonald at his home at 910 West 50th street in Los Angeles. McDonald told Ledbetter that he had some information for them. Evans and Ledbetter went directly from Oswald's to McDonald's, at the place above mentioned. McDonald told them that "Red" Hoyle had sold some diamonds to "Dago Charlie," and that since Oswald knew the latter, Oswald should first see him, and if Oswald should not succeed, the officers should then see him themselves. Evans reported to Oswald what they had been told by McDonald, and Oswald agreed to see Dago Charlie.

The following morning, Monday, July 9th, Evans told all of these details to his partner, Lieutenant Stone, and made the routine entries respecting them in the daily report book used by him and Stone. These entries were O. K.'d the same day by Captain Vernand, whose duty it was to inspect all such reports daily.

A few days later Oswald told Evans that he had seen Dago Charlie, but that the latter denied receiving any diamonds from Hoyle, or any knowledge of the robbing of Mrs. Oswald. Acting upon this information, Evans and Stone, July 18th, went to Dago Charlie's apartment and searched him, his apartment, and several others there present. They found nothing. Then they took him to the police station, and after questioning him without success for several hours, released him.

These and other efforts made by these two officers to locate the Oswald diamonds and to apprehend or identify the robber are noted in their report books, which are a part of the police files. These records show that the investigation by these two officers continued until July 25th, when their final report was made, and the case closed.

The records in the police department of the reports of Ledbetter, Evans and Stone were made as a matter of daily official routine. Of their genuineness there can be no doubt. The facts that they disclose show no incentive to Evans or Ledbetter to solicit or accept, or to McDonald to pay, a bribe. These facts also make it clear that Evans' interviews with McDonald were not on the initiative of Ledbetter, as McDonald testified, and that Ledbetter's participation was due to the accidental circumstances that Evans received the information from Oswald respecting McDonald, on a day when his partner, Lieutenant Stone, was off duty.

To refute the oral testimony of Evans and Ledbetter that the date of their call on McDonald at his bath house was July 7th, and at his home in Los Angeles July 8th—the police records were not admitted—McDonald testified in rebuttal that he and Mrs. McDonald moved to a bungalow in Venice the Sunday next before the fourth day of July, and that he was not at his bath house or his home in Los Angeles for the next two weeks thereafter. Mrs. McDonald also testified in rebuttal that McDonald was not in Los Angeles during this period.

The register of the branch of the Bank of America at Main and Washington streets in Los Angeles, of the visitors to the safety deposit vault—a record discovered since the trial—shows the signature of McDonald July 9, 1928, and that he opened on that day two safety deposit boxes that he kept there. It shows not only that he was in Los Angeles at a time which he denies, but also that his visit to the deposit vault was at the first opportunity to open his safety deposit boxes, after the afternoon of Saturday, July 7th, the time when Evans and Ledbetter assert, and the police records show, that they called on him at his bath house concerning the Oswald robbery.

The falsity of this testimony of McDonald and his wife becomes significant in another respect. In the face of the police records establishing the seventh and eighth days of July, 1928, as the dates of the calls of the two officers on McDonald, and the admitted fact that the maid, Elizabeth Pierce, was not employed in the McDonald home in Los Angeles until after August 8, 1928, the testimony of McDonald and his wife that the maid was present when the officers called at McDonald's home, as well as all of the testimony of the maid herself, appears only as wilful perjury.

These fabrications by these witnesses, coupled with McDonald's character as disclosed by his prior convictions of felonies, his business as a bootlegger, and his own pretended confessions to the district attorney and the grand jury, so far discredit all his other testimony that it should be utterly disregarded as evidence contrary to the positive denials of the police officers, corroborated as they are by the records to which we have referred.

The applicants have also presented an opinion of Mr. William R. McKay, the deputy district attorney who prosecuted the case, as to the sufficiency of the evidence at the trial to support their conviction. The substance of Mr. McKay's statement is that under the decisions of the Court of Appeal in People vs. Davis (62 Cal. App. Dec. 1) and People vs. Sheffield (63 Cal. App. Dec. 525), and the decision of the Supreme Court in the Davis case (80 Cal. Dec. 466) (all of which were rendered after the appeal of Evans and Ledbetter was determined), McDonald, his wife, and the maid were all accomplices. McKay's conclusion is as follows:

'In my judgment the evidence upon which the defendants herein were convicted was legally insufficient to sustain a judgment of conviction; and on that account it is my opinion that defendants herein are, and each of them is, entitled to a full and unconditioned pardon, and I so recommend.'

It, therefore, appears that these officers have been convicted upon evidence which not only was false, but which, if it had been true, was, nevertheless, insufficient to justify their conviction.

We advise that an unconditional pardon be forthwith granted to each of them.

(Signed)

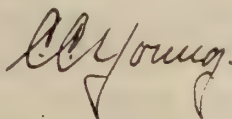

ADVISORY PARDON BOARD.
By H. L. CARNAHAN, Chairman."

This report is so complete and convincing that I feel that nothing further need be said in regard to these cases to justify the issuance of executive clemency.

Now, therefore, I, C. C. Young, Governor of the State of California, pursuant to the authority vested in me by the constitution and statutes of said State, do hereby pardon Miles H. Ledbetter and Walter E. Evans of the crime of bribery of which they were convicted as above stated and for which they have heretofore been committed to San Quentin Prison.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this fifth day of January, A.D. 1931.

INTRODUCTION OF GOVERNOR C. C. YOUNG.

Governor C. C. Young was then presented to the Joint Assembly by the Hon. H. L. Carnahan, Lieutenant Governor of California.

ADDRESS BY GOVERNOR C. C. YOUNG.

Governor C. C. Young proceeded to address the Joint Convention as follows:

You whom we may soon be privileged to address as Governor Rolph, members of the Senate and Assembly of the State of California, fellow State officials, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen:

One of the copy-book maxims most earnestly dinned into our consciousness during our impressionable years is the very valuable truth that when we want to know how to conduct ourselves in any given emergency, our best possible teacher is experience. I imagine that this would apply to an inaugural ceremony as much as to anything else, and I shall accordingly try to shape my part in today's proceedings by the lessons I have learned from similar proceedings in the past.

This is the sixth inauguration which I have witnessed since I first came to Sacramento as an Assemblyman twenty-two years ago, and the fifth in which I have been permitted to sit upon the platform and assist in the ceremonies. From that vantage point I have been able to observe inauguration audiences, and I believe that experience has fairly well taught me what they want on an occasion of this kind. I am certain, at least, that it has taught me what they do not want.

In the first place, I am sure that they do not want long speeches. At any rate they have never wanted them in the past; and although experience fails to tell me anything about an inauguration with a military parade and a delightful dance to follow, I am reasonably certain that no one wants to see these interesting events postponed by a dry-as-dust discussion of government.

Of one thing I am very sure, that nobody wants an outgoing Governor to become obsessed with the hallucination that he is a particularly important part of the inauguration proceedings. I am also sure that no one wants him to attempt the utterances of pearls of wisdom which will insure that the State may keep on functioning properly after he is numbered with the departed.

In a word there is just one fact connected with Inauguration Day on which everybody will agree, namely, that this day belongs to our new Governor, and that all the exercises of the day should be arranged with that fact fundamentally in mind. It is a very important and very impressive thing to be inaugurated Governor of California, and it is well that our people from all directions should gather in large numbers at the State Capitol to extend to their Governor for the next four years that welcome which is his right. My part, therefore, is merely to add one more to the number of those who are extending to him this welcome.

Inauguration Day is simply a milestone along the road which marks the course of the State's history. To every Governor and his administration is given the burden of responsibility and the opportunity of service, as he sets out on his march upon this road. When his four years' journey is ended, and another milestone is reached it becomes his duty and privilege to transfer to his successor all that was placed in his hands at the beginning of his journey, plus whatever of value or accomplishment he has been able to create along the way.

I attempted to express this thought yesterday in the Biennial Message which I sent to the Legislature, when I said that the finest thing about the government of our American states is the recognition that it is a continuing function, where individuals mean little but where a continuous policy for the public welfare means much. For this reason, as I said in my message, I am happy to assume that your new Governor, whom you are about to inaugurate, will continue and improve upon all the constructive accomplishments which all his predecessors have woven into the fabric of the State's history.

Reverting for a moment to our figure of the milestone, where the old administration hands over its burden to the new, this may possibly be an appropriate place to take just a glance at the past and another glance at the future to see what one administration may have done to prepare the way for the administration which is to follow.

It was with a great deal of pleasure yesterday that I put into the hands of the Legislature my second biennial report of the stewardship which has been mine during the past four years. I was able to tell you that during these four years a rather chaotic and wasteful commission form of government has been reorganized into thirteen strong departments; that these departments have each month regularly rendered to the Governor's Council a comprehensive report of their activities; that for the first time complete executive budgets have been made, and that such economy of government has been exercised that the State's general fund surplus has been increased by over $7,500,000.

I was able to report that a long-time construction program had been worked out, both for our State buildings and for our highways; that for the first time all the State's activities had been housed in State-owned buildings; that a sound foundation had been laid for the development of the State's water resources; that we had worked out a plan for conserving California's rich natural heritage of gas and oil; that we had inaugurated the acquisition of a State park system; that we had saved millions of dollars to California farmers through liquidating their reclamation debts; that we had provided aid for the needy aged and needy blind and had increased our protective care of orphaned children; that we had organized new hospitals and new penal institutions, which should better serve the institutionalized wards of the State.

I pointed to all these and scores of similar accomplishments during the past four years, but dwelt particularly on the work we had done in preparing the way for still greater accomplishments during the four years to come. I told of the preparatory steps we had taken for linking the disjointed ends of our splendid highway system by publicly-owned toll bridges, among them the much-needed bridge across San Francisco Bay; of the studies we had made by which a new State constitution might soon become a reality; of the similar investigations which have prepared the way for legislation assuring home rule to counties; of the plans which have been perfected for a complete codification of our laws; of a hundred recommendations which are being offered for increasing the efficiency of our public schools; of many other ways in which the ground has been prepared for possible abundant harvests during the next four years.

Thus by employing the time of one administration, not only in performing its own tasks to the best of its ability, but by taking fast hold of all that is good in the administration that has preceded, and in turn laying out the ground for the administration which is to follow, we can be assured that State government may be a living, growing thing, constantly striving to carry forward the State's affairs nearer and nearer to the goal of its ultimate destiny.

Not only can one administration thus advance the State's welfare by building on to the constructive achievements of the past, but it can also profit by avoiding the mistakes that have gone before. For instance, when my own work began I might possibly not have been satisfied with appointing all my department heads and other administrative officials who of right should be named and retained at a Governor's pleasure. I conceivably might have wished to extend these "pleasure appointments" to those technical, educational or quasi judicial officials or boards which wise laws in the past have permitted to perform their duties during fixed terms of office beyond the influence of any spoils system or danger of political removal. But even if I had desired to do this, I was saved from such a mistake by remembering the storm of public disapproval which had greeted a similar former attempt, and which all the older legislators before me can recall as the ill-starred "Bromley Bill."

I have used this illustration simply to instance the fact that no administration can live to itself alone. Each one must build upon the work of its predecessors, and in building must avoid the quicksands which experience has pointed out as offering insecure foundations for a permanent public structure. The old conceptions of public office are buried in the limbo of a past generation. Government is no longer regarded as merely a medium for the bestowal of patronage or official favors, but is recognized as vastly important business, to be conducted in a businesslike manner for the material and social benefit of its stockholders, who are our citizens.

This has been our ideal of State government during the past four years, and I am happy to believe will be the ideal of the administration which we are inaugurating today. Never has an administration come in under more favorable auspices. I think I may be justified in saying that State affairs and State agencies have never been in a sounder or more healthy condition than at the present. We have all labored diligently to hand over our work to the new Governor and his aids in such shape that it will be easy to go on where we have left off without that lost motion which slows up business of any kind.

I think I may say that all of us who are relinquishing our tasks today have thoroughly enjoyed our work and the opportunities for service which have been ours. Nevertheless most of us are happy to give over these tasks into the hands of others, and in doing so have no other wish than to see them performed better during the next four years than ever before. As for myself, I am looking forward to the first real vacation I have had in a very long time, and it is with no mental reservation whatever that I repeat what I said yesterday in the foreword of my message, that "it is my sincere wish that the administration which is just beginning may achieve a governmental record better than any which has gone before."

In closing, I should be remiss if I did not give utterance to my heartfelt appreciation to those who have worked shoulder to shoulder with me during the past four years; to the army of faithful State employees who under Civil Service conditions will give to their new Governor the same diligent and loyal service which they have given to me and to my predecessors; to the Legislature without whose hearty cooperation none of our past achievements would have been possible; and finally to the people of California, of whom I said in my own Inaugural Message four years ago, that their heart is fundamentally sound—their ideals fundamentally high.

All these elements of our body politic have cheered me, and sustained me and helped me during the years that are past; and the one wish I would utter as I bid you all good-bye is that the same generous support you have given to me you will now give to your Governor and my Governor, James Rolph, Jr. May his administration be happy and prosperous and successful in the most abundant measure.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH OF OFFICE.

Hon. James Rolph, Jr., took and subscribed to the following oath administered by Hon. William H. Waste, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court:

I do solemnly swear that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State of California, and discharge the duties of the office of Governor of the State of California to the best of my ability, so help me God.

INTRODUCTION OF GOVERNOR JAMES ROLPH, JR.

Hon. Arthur H. Breed, President pro tempore of the Senate, addressed the Joint Convention as follows:

Fellow Members of the Legislature and Fellow Citizens of California.

It is difficult for me to tell you with what delight and satisfaction I stand here today as your representative in extending your welcome and greeting to His Excellency, the Governor.

He was born and raised in San Francisco, drew his inspiration from his days at the old Lincoln Grammar School, and as "Sunny Jim" there got the vision of the city's destiny. My delight today is that I, too, was born in that city and drank of the same spring of knowledge at the old Lincoln Grammar School. I therefore count myself happy today to present to you as the Governor of the State, a man born in San Francisco, reared there, and nurtured in the same dear old Lincoln Grammar School.

The Governor, by his eminent business accomplishments and his public career, is so well known to you and the State that there is no need to introduce him here; for he stands before you with a great record of achievement as the mayor of San Francisco during the period of her reconstruction.

A generation ago fire humbled that city to the dust. She had, from her beginning, sat so proudly by the Golden Gate, her vision taking in not only the fertile and beautiful lands bounded by the Sierra on the east, with their minarets of snow, but she also looked out beyond the foaming shore, across the vast Pacific, which ever bears upon her bosom the approaching ships, laden with rich cargoes from the Far East and other distant lands.

San Francisco, proud in the memories of the past and of her achievements, sat by the Western Gate, dreaming of her wonderful future. Gay, happy, prosperous and glorious, she knew not of the catastrophe impending; yet in a tragic moment the splendid city was desolated by fire, and all but destroyed. The world, shocked and aghast at the magnitude of the calamity, wondered if it were possible ever to bring the city back again. But the world did not have to wait long for an answer. With heroic courage and undaunted spirit, the San Franciscans at once proceeded to the work of reconstruction and carried it forward with such energy as to perform in so short a time the miracle of creating the mightier city we now see.

Conspicuous among the great leaders in the work was James Rolph, Jr., then a young man filled with zeal and devotion to his beloved but stricken city. He wrought mightily in the great endeavor. Soon he was made the mayor and for nearly twenty years he was, as mayor, the ruler of that city, seeing to its development, watchful of its interests, and guiding it onward toward the realization of the hopes and aspirations it has ever cherished—to be the city beautiful, a metropolis of the Pacific and a leader in the world's civilization.

Sir! Much has been done in that respect through your leadership. Lofty buildings; noble school edifices have arisen; commodious wharves and docks line the water front; spacious and beautiful parks are everywhere. Then, too, there is the Civic Center, that dream of loveliness, where the stately classic buildings in their beauty face the flowing fountain in the midst of the public square, all dominated by the magnificent City Hall, with its wonderful dome, ever beautifully silhouetted against the blue heavens. The citizens of San Francisco have won the applause of the world by what they have done under your leadership, Governor Rolph. You now are come to the governorship, the rulership of the State of California, trained by the varied experiences gained as mayor of San Francisco. Heavy was the burden you there carried, troubling and at times most baffling were the problems solved in the struggle that went forward under your leadership to bring from chaos into orderly being that noble city.

Sir! As you had the vision for the work at San Francisco, so, I believe, you have the vision for the greater development of California. This vast State, with its varied resources of forest and field and mineral wealth, its beauty of mountain and plain and sea, is to be, in my opinion, the producer of the finest civilization the world has ever seen. In my opinion, man will also reach his highest development here and his genius will shine forth here in noblest civilization with a culture and art and literature surpassing all that has ever yet come forth.

Sir! Under your experienced guidance, I believe California is to be more rapidly advanced to its leadership of the world.

Governor Rolph, on behalf of the members of the Legislature of California, sitting here today in joint convention, I greet you and welcome you to the governorship, and pledge to you their hearty cooperation and support to make your administration triumphant.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR JAMES ROLPH, JR.

Governor James Rolph, Jr., proceeded to address the Joint Convention as follows:

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of California.

Let me open my Inaugural Message to the Legislature by greeting you for the first time in formal assemblage and thanking you collectively for the promises of help and cooperation which so many of you individually have tendered to me since my election to the office of Governor of California.

If denied such help and cooperation I would be greatly handicapped, since the ablest and most experienced of Governors could accomplish little without the good will of the Legislature, and I lack the benefit, enjoyed by so many of my predecessors, of long training as legislator or administrative official in handling the peculiar and difficult problems of the State government. I come to my new tasks with much diffidence. What confidence I may feel today is due to your kindly attitude, the consciousness of my own zeal to serve well our State and its people who elected me by so overwhelming a majority, and a hope that my 19 years in the office of mayor of San Francisco will prove to have taught me something, at least, of the science of government.

In assuming the duties of this great office, to which I have been called by nearly 1,000,000 men and women, I bespeak the good will and cooperation of all of my fellow citizens regardless of affiliations in order to secure during my term of office peace and plenty to the people of the State and the greatest of opportunities for their children to grow in wisdom and in grace as they grow in years.

The conventional function of an inaugural address is to outline plans and policies of political and governmental nature which the newly inducted incumbent proposes to launch and promote during his administration, and I intend to follow that course in this address; but I delay doing so in order to speak briefly of the fundamental ideas which it is the function and purpose of all true governments and wise administrations to bring about.

The constitution of the United States declares that it is designed to promote tranquillity, promote the well-being of the people, establish justice and secure the blessings of liberty; and these are the beneficent ends which I have ever in mind.

At the moment I speak of only one of them.

Tranquillity is a fundamental requirement to happiness and contentment, and it is therefore desirable that our people should be as free from strife and vexatious contention as is consistent with the frailty of humankind.

The first requisite is a large toleration of views which are not peculiarly our own. I do not mean a so-called toleration which will abolish all ideals and principles, but that abounding charity whereby we will be enabled to enter into the spirit underlying the views of others and to live in harmony with them, although there may be differences, say, marked differences, in many matters, including those of religious, political, social and economic natures.

There is a certain ferocity for righteousness which brings about turmoil and strife to no end and this is altogether to be deplored as inconsistent with the general well-being of the people.

I bespeak therefore a disposition among all of our people to bear with one another in the differences which naturally exist among us in order that we may all cooperate in the many matters in which we are or should be in full accord. If we take counsel among ourselves in a spirit of true charity we are certain to be a harmonious and happy people.

I have already mentioned justice, liberty and the general welfare, and I need not stop to dwell thereon.

These then make up my fundamental creed.

I come now to speak of practical measures designed to be helpful to those who are capable of carrying through to destinies of success, and for the care of those who have been unequal to or have been overthrown in the struggle of life. In these two great objectives, I include all good ends and the means by which they are attained.

HUMANITARIAN TREATMENT OF THE STATE'S DEPENDENTS.

The greatest business of the State is the business of government, and it is the least understood. Government should be conducted on lines of economy, but not on a basis of parsimony.

the fact that the people rightly have materially reduced the taxes on the electric railroads and thus stricken $1,250,000 from the normal revenue, and that reductions in rates made by the Railroad Commission, by reducing the gross revenues of the utility companies affected, will cause a material reduction of the State's percentage of those gross revenues. In other words, this administration at its beginning is faced with unusual and urgent demands, and a diminished revenue with which to meet them. Fortunately, on the other hand, we face this situation with a surplus of approximately $30,000,000 in the State treasury.

For the solution of this imperative fiscal problem I invoked the aid of Mr. Rolland A. Vandegrift of Los Angeles, who has a thorough knowledge of the State's financial affairs, and has been appointed by me to the office of Director of Finance. My instructions to him for the preparation of the Budget were to provide liberally for all the proper needs of the various institutions and departments, giving consideration to their recurring biennial requirements for expansion to serve a rapidly increasing population; to see to it that there should be no let-down, but should be an orderly extension of the humane service which the State owes and is giving to the sick, the insane, the blind, the indigent, the orphan, the widow, the veterans, and to all its wards; to make generous allowance for an intelligently planned building and road program in order to provide employment urgently needed by so many worthy men and women in these days of stress; but, at the same time, to hold every branch of the government to the strictest standards of economy consistent with efficiency; and, finally, to cast the results of his work into an honest, candid and complete Budget, which will recite the whole story, without evasions, concealments, or any of the tricks by which prodigality is sometimes disguised in the modest livery of thrift.

That Budget will be laid before you. It will tell its own tale. I think it meets the standards which I set for it. In my judgment it does not fail on the side of either liberality or frugality. Naturally and properly it will dip into the surplus to meet the extraordinary requirements of our unemployment problem and our special building program. The use of a surplus is to act as a surge chamber in times like these when there is an unusual gap between revenue and expenditure. A substantial but not excessive surplus should always be maintained, and the surplus, when depleted below the safety point, should be rebuilt. The inroad on the surplus necessitated in the approaching biennium is an emergency and will not recur in the absence of extraordinary conditions.

As the situation now presents itself, there will be no occasion to seek additional sources or increased rates of revenue in the biennium commencing July 1st of this year, or, so far as we can foresee, in the succeeding biennium. The normal increase in revenue should take care of the normal increase in expenditure and the end of the four-year period ahead should see the surplus replenished and adequate to serve as a cushion in future abnormal periods as it has done in the current abnormal period. I am well aware that State and local taxes, in California, as elsewhere, have become a serious burden on real estate, agriculture, industry, business, and the whole population. To keep taxation as low as possible without impairing the service which modern, humane and civilized government ought to render to the public will be my constant concern.

We must expect a state whose population and industries are growing as rapidly as those of California to require a normal increase in governmental expenditures from biennium to biennium.

The budget to be laid before you, however, calls for an increase in the biennium commencing July 1st next of less than 4 per cent over the expenditures for the current biennium, as compared with increases in the previous three bienniums ranging from 20 per cent plus to 23 per cent plus. True, the figures for former bienniums include the special appropriations, but our proposed Budget contains items aggregating a considerable amount which have formerly been omitted from the Budget and provided for by special appropriations. I urgently ask your cooperation in order to keep the special appropriations of this session to the lowest possible amount, and to bear in mind the difficult financial condition presented by the estimated falling-off of normal sources of revenue and the fact that those who actually pay the taxes can not afford in this period to assume heavier tax burdens.

The building and general construction program contemplated by this Budget represents items which must be done and may economically be done at the present time. Many other worthy projects will be urged upon you, no doubt, but we who are responsible for the State government must not lose sight of the basic economic truth that the present stringency is due to the diminished purchasing power of the people and we can not augment that purchasing power by exacting more taxes from them. In other words, we can not spend ourselves rich. We must defer, until more propitious times, all extensions and increases in governmental expenditures that can be postponed with reasonable regard to the State's welfare.

For your information I include in this Message, but shall not take time to read, a comparative statement of expenditures for the ten-year period, July 1, 1923, to June 30, 1933. You will see it in the printed copies of this Message.

There may be some slight change in the amounts and percentages for the biennium commencing July 1, 1931, due to modifications of the budget subsequent to the printing of this Message.

A PERMANENT TAX COMMISSION APPROVED.

In view of the interrelation of State and local taxation, the unremitting pressure to persuade the State to take over functions formerly financed by the localities, the recurring demands for "equalization" of State and local tax burdens in the absence of adequate information or fixed standards on which to base equalization, and the obvious need of a uniform system and standards of making assessments in the counties, the State should maintain some centralized supervision of local taxation above definite limits at least to the extent of accumulating information and investigating and advising the local taxpayers on the merits of proposed major expenditures or commitments.

I recommend the creation under an elective State board of a permanent, non-political, fact-finding bureau, staffed by men who have not only technical knowledge, but also practical experience in the field of taxation. That agency should devote its entire time to the task of establishing facts bearing on the tax problems of the State and its subdivisions, but its powers should be limited to fact-finding and reporting information for the benefit of officials and the public. No effort at lightening the burden or, if need be, reforming the system of taxation, can be intelligently carried out unless the facts are ascertained and available. The difficulty of ascertaining such facts by occasional and temporary commissions has been admitted by such commissions and is evidenced by the impossibility of determining with any degree of accuracy from data at hand the relative tax burdens as between the various classes of property, the various political subdivisions, or the State and the counties. The services of this staff of experts should be available to the counties, cities, and other taxing political subdivisions on payment to the State of the actual cost of the service rendered. This recommendation is substantially in accord with the report of the Joint Committee on Taxation.

One of the grave evils of our present system is the piling up of special assessments, especially on real property. In many instances the accumulation of such special assessments is tantamount to confiscation. Benefits from such special assessments are often remote or imaginary but the assessments are very real and must be paid in legal tender. We find cases of farmers and homeowners paying more in taxes and assessments than their land will bring. Proper restrictions on the levying of special assessments should be imposed by the Legislature.

INCREASED APPROPRIATION FOR THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE.

You will observe, on reading the Budget, that despite these counsels of economy, the increase in the appropriation for the Governor's office considerably exceeds the average of increases for other departments. In order to set an example, my predecessors, with the best of intentions, but, in my opinion, mistakenly, have refused for some years to permit any enlargement of the office staff in order to handle the normal growth of the business of the office. For the same reason they have prevented any provision for an automobile for the Governor although the State provides automobiles for many other officials. But the work had to be done. My predecessors have borrowed employees and automobiles from other offices so that the frugality exhibited in the Budget was no saving to the Treasury. Pursuant to my determination that my Budget, whatever its shortcomings, shall present a complete and true picture of the fiscal situation, I have had all the Governor's expenses charged to the Governor's appropriation without camouflage. The Governor's office staff is considerably smaller than the staff of the mayor of San Francisco. I am confident that the people of California are not aware that their Governor has no official automobile and will not begrudge him the additional help and the means of transportation which the business of the office requires. As the Budget does not become effective until July 1, and the increases in the staff and the purchase of the automobile should be made at once, an addition has been made in the Governor's contingent appropriation out of which the Governor may make such payments as will fall within the remainder of the current fiscal year.

OFFICIALS REQUESTED TO REFRAIN FROM LOBBYING FOR APPROPRIATIONS.

Since the Budget, as presented, represents an earnest, and, in my judgment, a successful effort to be not only just but liberal to the institutions and departments, I will expect public officers and employees under the Governor's jurisdiction to refrain from seeking, directly or indirectly, additional appropriations. Lobbying for appropriations is not the proper business of officials of the State government. Officials who can afford to spend their time in the lobbies proclaim themselves superfluous.

REAPPORTIONMENT.

One of the most important and difficult duties of the Legislature at this session will be the reapportionment of the State into congressional, senatorial, and assembly districts. According to the Federal Census of 1930, California is entitled to nine additional members of the House of Representatives, making twenty in all. Section 6 of article IV of the State constitution, as amended in 1925, requires the Legislature at the first regular session following each decennial federal census to adjust the legislative districts and reapportion the representation so as to preserve the assembly districts as nearly equal in population as may be; provided, however, that no county or city and county shall contain more than one senatorial district, and the counties of small population shall be grouped in districts of not to exceed three counties in any one senatorial district. In case the Legislature fails in its duty to reapportion the State, the task is made to fall automatically on a reapportionment commission, consisting of certain designated public officers.

Our scheme of popular government contemplates that the congressional and assembly districts respectively shall each contain approximately the same population so that representation shall be fair and equal. Unfortunately, the political history of this country affords numerous instances of "gerrymandering" by which tricky reapportionments have been made to give undue advantages to particular parties, politicians, or localities. I trust that this Legislature will approach the task without regard to sectional, individual, or party interests and will make a reapportionment of both congressional and legislative districts in conformity with both the letter and the spirit of the federal and the State constitutions and the traditional American idea of equal and local representation. Only such a reapportionment will satisfy the people of California.

STATE'S WATER PROBLEMS.

Only a brief reference to the water problems of California is possible in this Message. I assure the Legislature and the people, however, that I am not unmindful of those problems; the problems of flood control in the northern valleys and in the Santa Ana River system, of saline encroachment in the lower reaches of the Sacramento River, and of the drying up of the lands in certain southern sections of the San Joaquin Valley. A coordinated solution of these problems has long and earnestly been sought. Surely, in California, where water is so precious, the State must devise a general unified plan for the conservation and use of its water against the increasing needs of its increasing population and the demands of the coming generations whose stewards we are. No complete or satisfactory solution has been found yet although the elaborate and expensive studies heretofore made will doubtless aid in the ultimate determination of a plan. The difficulties are mainly financial. Economically, the cures proposed thus far seem about as bad as the disease. We may not rob or wreck one section, industry, or group in order to sustain another. We must not spend more in salvaging lands than the lands will be worth when salvaged. We can not impoverish the farmers of any section in order to bring under cultivation lands whose yield will merely augment the existing overproduction of farm products. As the Joint Committee of the Senate and Assembly said in its Final Report, submitted January 18, 1929 (p. 15), "development should not proceed more rapidly than economic needs of the State require." We must be sure we are right before we go ahead with any plan. Yet we should not permit any section, industry or group to languish and suffer unduly for lack of energetic action on the State's part. I stand ready as Governor to give the Legislature and the distressed localities all the assistance in my power toward finding a practicable solution of these pressing problems. We must not approach these problems in a narrow or sectional spirit. While the benefits sought may primarily affect certain localities, the evils we seek to cure have been brought into being by causes that are not local. Every irrigationist along the upper stretches of the Sacramento, the Feather and the American rivers has contributed to the slow salting of the distant delta by tidal trespass. We can not heal these real woes by sympathy or fair words, however sincere. Distinctly, the duty of relieving the acute situation caused by the uneven distribution of our water resources and the growing demand on them is mainly the business of the State and not solely of the affected localities. The Hoover-Young Commission has submitted a report. To give that report the serious consideration which it merits will be one of your duties and mine during the current session of the Legislature.

Fortunately, definite progress has been accomplished toward the construction of the Colorado River Dam and thereby toward relief of the great and populous coastal plain of southern California from the menace of a water famine. All the forces of the State government will be constantly available to aid in smoothing out the obstructions that still lie in the way of the completion of the Boulder Dam.

Nor must we forget that water is not the only natural resource of California calling for conservation. Our wealth of natural gas must not be wasted. The water will continue to flow so long as the snow and rains continue to fall, but natural gas once escaped can not be recaptured and the supply is not inexhaustible and can not be replenished. So, too, our forests, which, once destroyed, can not be replaced for ages, present an acute problem. They must have adequate protection from destruction by fire through wise, preventive measures.

OIL AND GAS INDUSTRY.

I commend to your careful consideration various matters concerning the oil industry of California. It is one of the greatest industries of our State and deals with our principal natural resource.

Of the total production in 1929 of 1,007,323,000 barrels of oil in the United States, California alone produced 292,534,000 barrels, having a value at the well of $321,367,000.

For the year 1929 our export shipments of petroleum products have an estimated value of $141,102,094.

The natural gas supply of the State developed concurrently with the oil is of tremendous importance. Nine hundred and eighty-six million cubic feet per day, equivalent in fuel value to 43,611 tons of coal, are now being utilized in California, but unfortunately 409,000,000 cubic feet per day are being blown into the air.

The last Legislature passed legislation designed to protect our oil and gas resources against waste. The Supreme Court of our State has upheld the constitutionality of these provisions. I consider that the present law should receive your serious consideration in the event that you should deem it wise to fortify its provisions and to enlarge the authority of the State in preventing the wasteful production of oil as well as of gas. California, Oklahoma and Texas have dealt intelligently with this subject, each state along different lines, and I believe that our Legislature may profit from the efforts of our sister states as they from us.

Much has been accomplished through the voluntary effort and cooperation of California producers in confining the production to the demand and preventing waste. By voluntary curtailment California producers are producing less than 600,000 barrels per day as against a potential production of over 1,100,000 barrels per day. New fields and deeper sands are coming in, and the problem is one in which the industry should have the cooperation of the State authorities. The Federal government has already announced its preparedness to cooperate, so far as the government-owned lands are concerned. But the question is primarily one for the State to deal with.

Curtailling crude oil and gas production and preventing waste in the extraction of those irreplaceable products is but one step in conservation. Orderly and economic marketing of the manufactured products is an essential part of their conservation. The demoralized marketing conditions which have occurred from time to time during the past years, the so-called price wars, are beneficial neither to the industry nor its employees nor to the consumer. Your attention is invited to a consideration of the provisions of our anti-trust laws and to the question whether or not legislation may not be advisable under which reasonable trade agreements and such as are in the public interest might be authorized by properly constituted authority. Law-enforced compulsion, particularly in the production and distribution of the products of our natural resources, is apt to be harmful rather than beneficial to the public interest.

GASOLINE TAX FRAUDS.

Finally, in this connection, I direct your attention to the situation with respect to the so-called gasoline tax of three cents per gallon. I find that the law has been evaded and violated to an undeterminable but appalling extent. The amount of the tax added to the cost of gasoline is borne by the consumer, though payable by the distributor, and on admitted returns of sales more than $700,000 is overdue in gasoline taxes. Some of these sums aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars have been due since June 30, 1930. When it is borne in mind that by not returning the tax to the State the distributor is enabled to undersell his competitor who does pay the tax by three cents per gallon, it is obvious that the retention of the tax by the seller renders it a vehicle for price-cutting of the most vicious form, to wit, at the expense of the State. I am also led to believe that other frauds exist, such as the sale of gasoline within the State which is reported, however, as having been delivered for shipment without the State and therefore as nontaxable. Severe penalties should be provided for the violation of the law and its evasion more strictly guarded against. The quarterly period for paying over the tax should be shortened. The tax is now collected without cost to the State. It would be better, in my opinion, if the collection of the tax were paid for under a system which would ensure a better enforcement of the law.

RECLAMATION AND FLOOD CONTROL.

I have inherited from previous administrations a tremendous and pressing problem in the reclamation and flood control projects in which the State of California is interested. It would be impossible at this time to review in detail the many ramifying aspects which are presented and, therefore, I shall advert only to the principal policies which shall govern my administration regarding them. The importance of the subject is readily apparent when it is understood that the Sacramento and San Joaquin Drainage District, a State agency, comprises 1,115,000 acres in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, and that the California Debris Commission has estimated that the project completed will cost $51,000,000.

The above estimate grew out of the commission's report of 1925, sometimes referred to as the "Grant Report," and sometimes as the "Revised Report," which was adopted by Congress and approved by President Coolidge, February 28, 1928. This report has also been adopted by the State of California, and is the basis for the participation of the State government, and the landowners affected, with the federal government. It recommended that the annual appropriations from the federal government be increased from $500,000 to $1,000,000 per year, the limit set by the existing law, which recommendation was adopted by Congress in the enactment of the Curry Bill in 1929, under which the federal government appropriated $1,000,000 as its yearly contribution, whereupon the State of California matched this amount by appropriating $1,000,000 for each of the 81st and 82d fiscal years, the latter ending June 30, 1931.

The basic understanding behind these appropriations was that the costs of the great works of flood control and reclamation should be borne one-third by the government of the United States, one-third by the State of California, and one-third by the landowners living within the defined area. The program for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, so far as the federal government is concerned, already has been approved by the Chief of Engineers and is based upon the federal appropriation of $1,000,000 for work during that fiscal year. The obligation of the State of California to make equal appropriations with the federal government has been many times definitely stated and publicly recognized, and in order that the State of California shall do its full part I have caused to be inserted in the Budget of my administration for the 83d and 84th fiscal years an appropriation of $2,000,000, and I have no hesitation in stating as a definite policy that the State of California during my tenure of office will continue to go forward in step and in alignment with the government of the United States toward the completion of the tremendous works of improvement contemplated by the report of the California Debris Commission.

There is another problem involved in these policies which appeals to me as being of even greater importance and concern. I refer to the pressing plight of the landowners and farmers whose holdings are situated not only within the boundaries of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Drainage District but also within the confines of separate and distinct reclamation and irrigation districts superimposed as it were upon the land of the greater district.

The homes, the holdings, and the very existence of these landowners are imperiled by the appalling underlying reclamation and irrigation tax burdens upon their lands. It is now a matter of common occurrence that banks in many cases have refused originally to grant, or, in other cases, to renew, mortgages upon these country lands because of the staggering liens from reclamation and irrigation taxes which would be anterior to the ordinary land mortgage. In many cases the ruin of a life's work and the destruction and loss of all he possesses stare the landowner in the face.

The State should find some means of assisting these farmers and citizens. In the Sacramento and San Joaquin Drainage District alone in November, 1930, as evidenced by assessments No. 2, No. 6 and No. 7, there was still outstanding against affected lands the large sum of nearly $7,000,000 in underlying liens. The unfortunate part of the situation is that in addition to this huge sum the lands involved are in turn again situated in smaller districts, and the lands have again been saddled with large underlying liens imposed for the purpose of creating and completing the local problems of reclamation and irrigation.

As I said before, this phase of the reclamation tax problem appeals to me most strongly, and I shall do everything in my power during the coming years of my administration to lessen and alleviate it. I hope that with careful study and intensive analysis some means will be found whereby the State itself can be of aid in refunding and refinancing the reclamation and irrigation liens and encumbrances. I pledge myself and my administration to use every means at our disposal not only to fulfill the obligations of this State in the completion of its great reclamation and drainage projects, but also to aid and assist by every means possible the landowners and agriculturists who are so vitally threatened.

SCHOOLS.

Our public school system is properly one of the main concerns of the State government. With respect both to physical equipment and teaching staff the public schools of California will stand comparison with those of any other state. We do not begrudge to our schools any amount of money that they may need for sustaining and advancing their high standards. But our educational budget now absorbs more than one-third of the total expenditures of the State. I am convinced that much expense could be avoided and, at the same time, a notable improvement in the results obtained if in the education of our children more attention were paid to fundamentals and less to non-essentials. All comparatively useless subjects should be eliminated from the curricula of the elementary and high schools. The oversupply of qualified teachers in the United States suggests that perhaps our teachers' colleges do not need to expand as rapidly as their faculties and local supporters may desire them to do. It is no kindness to train young women at great expense to them and the State for teaching positions which they are not likely to find.

The teachers are an earnest and hardworked body of public servants. I recommend particularly to your consideration the enactment of a new or amended and improved Teachers' Retirement Salary Act providing increased retirement salaries, but any act adopted should be actuarially sound.

Competent teachers should be protected in their positions by a just and reasonable tenure law. Teachers, moreover, are entitled to longer notice of dismissal than is provided in the present law. In any changes made to the tenure law, the first consideration should be the protection and benefit of the pupils, and, second, the security of the teachers in their positions.

Study should be made of the overlapping of services by various groups of educational institutions. This overlapping has been brought about by the growth of the junior colleges, the addition of a fourth year to the courses in the teachers' colleges, and the expansion of the State University.

The liberal financial support of the public schools, junior colleges, State teachers colleges and universities, will always have my favorable consideration.

AGRICULTURE.

Agriculture is a method of living rather than a business, so the very first consideration must be given to the people living on our California farms, and, to keep them there, their method of living must be made a paying business.

When a delegation of dirt farmers called upon me last month, several of its members spoke of the difficulties of holding their sons on the soil.

For the protection of our farmers we have built up a system of quarantine, inspection laws, pest and disease control and standardization practices. But we have neglected to strike a proper balance between production and marketing. The farmer has been taught to produce all too well; his real problem is the marketing of his surpluses at a profit.

Fortunately, within the Department of Agriculture there exists the machinery to provide the grower and the farmer with adequate market information and to protect him against those forces which profit by disorderly selling. I shall insist upon the use of this machinery to the utmost, for any government which does not give its people protection is not fulfilling its first duty, and I know of no better protection for the farmer than adequate tariff protection and complete market service and reports.

The budget for the support of the Department of Agriculture has crept within a few years from barely over $1,000,000 until it now calls for over $4,000,000. What has been accomplished by this expenditure? Our farmers are earning less for their labor and investment than ever before in the history of agriculture. Perhaps the department needs all of the money that it has requested, but surely a larger proportion should be spent that more people may eat of the bounty of our rich soil and that our people who cultivate it should have some reward for their labor.

Certain economical and mechanical readjustments have made tremendous changes in agriculture, and equally radical changes in the dietetic habits and fashions have tended to cause a fluctuating demand for soil products.

Particularly in California we produce what might be called luxury crops seeking distant markets and the economic condition of the country has a tremendous effect upon the return on these commodities.

California, like all other states, has undoubtedly suffered from the most serious change witnessed by agriculture in the last ten years, when, so far as foodstuffs are concerned, we have ceased to be primarily an exporting nation. Instead we are now importing an enormous tonnage of soil products in excess of our total exports of raw and manufactured agricultural commodities.

So, our real interest lies in having the primary right of our farmers to enjoy our rich home market, infinitely richer than that of any other or all other countries combined. This market should be thoroughly protected for the benefit of our growers.

Quarantine laws should be enforced strictly, for such enforcement is the method of protecting more than $1,000,000,000 invested in the orchards, vineyards, gardens and live stock of this State. Quarantine should be enforced adequately but justly. Since it is a two-edged sword, we should be extremely careful that our quarantine laws are just in principle and so intelligently enforced that they will not react against us.

Since 1920, in spite of the activities of innumerable agencies seeking to better the condition of the farmer, his financial status has steadily become worse throughout the State and nation.

Upon the success of our agriculture depends the welfare of our labor and the prosperity of nearly every California industry and nearly every person within our State. The farm problem must be solved and solved promptly. To that purpose I shall put my shoulder to the wheel.

LABOR.

My sympathy with the just aspirations of those who toil with their hands has been demonstrated in my private business and my public career. California has a liberal system of laws for the protection of labor and the amelioration of the condition of the workers. I recognize, however, that the emancipation of labor from the thralldom of the early industrial age is a progressive movement and has not been completed. Labor is entitled to its fair share of the benefits brought by machinery, improved methods of distribution, and increasing national wealth and I intend to assist each prudent, forward step in that direction. But this disposition does not imply any inclination toward that small and irresponsible group of agitators who are hostile to the institution of private property and, if permitted, would destroy in mad experiments all the progress that has been made by organized labor in its long and winning fight for working men and women.

BUSINESS.

You will not find me unfriendly to legitimate business, large or small. The utility and other corporations of California, owned, as they are, by hundreds of thousands of our fellow citizens, have done much to make California a great manufacturing State and to develop that variety of industries which contribute to the wealth and prosperity of every section. Business, in corporate form, is the main contributor to the financial support of the State government. True, the corporation's taxes are actually paid by the ratepayers of the utilities, the passengers on the railroads, the consumers of articles that have been shipped by rail or manufactured or sold by corporations, but that fact is additional evidence of the truth that the welfare of business is closely involved with the welfare of all the population. These corporations are the great employers of labor, the great builders, the great developers of our natural resources, under our efficient system of regulation. My administration is pledged to do all that the State may fairly and rightly do to aid legitimate business. On the other hand, I shall expect business to cooperate with my administration for the common good, even though such cooperation may entail at times some sacrifice.

COMMERCE.

I thought of no better authority to confer with on the very important subject of "Commerce" than Captain Robert Dollar, dean of the shipping world, and he has written me his views which I transmit to you in a copy of his letter to me.

*"Hon. James Rolph, Jr.,
Governor Elect of California,
San Francisco.*

DEAR MR. ROLPH: Replying to your inquiry as to the commercial conditions of the world as they exist today:

Having just returned from the Far East on a trip which I made for the purpose of increasing and developing American Foreign Trade, I have the benefit of the opinions from the citizens of various nations who are competent to tell me the exact conditions existing in their respective countries; also, having as we do, passenger steamers in service around the world—calling at fourteen different countries—we derive quite a good deal of information pertaining to the affairs of the world.

Therefore, I feel I am in a position to give you in a general way a correct statement concerning the commercial conditions of the world. First I would say that this terrible and severe depression which no nation appears to have escaped, has actually reached the bottom and will not go lower. There are slight indications of improvement in various lines, although as yet it is hardly perceptible. There is assurance, however, that improved conditions are actually in sight and with continued hard and persistent work we will enjoy better business in 1931 than we have this past year.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT DOLLAR."

It is truly said that commerce moves the world, and this statement of Captain Robert Dollar encourages us in our justified optimism.

REGULATION OF PUBLIC UTILITIES.

Effective regulation of public utilities has been one of the best and most outstanding achievements of the progressive movement in California. Its benefits have fallen alike upon the public and the companies. Formerly, the great corporations were the masters of the State. Regulation has made the utility corporations public servants entitled to public respect and assistance. If we are to preserve the benefits of regulation we must see to it that regulation is administered by officials friendly to the idea and spirit of regulation. The utilities as well as all other parties are entitled to just treatment from regulating bodies.

MINING.

May I confess that, while I have never engaged in mining, that earliest and most picturesque of California industries has always had a strong appeal to my imagination. One of my urgent ambitions as Governor will be to accomplish something in the way of stimulating and reviving that languishing industry. I would like to see the entire mother lode and all the mining regions humming with activity. Legislation, of course, can not put gold into the ground. But I shall be responsive to all sound suggestions for the benefit of the mining industry and the mountain countries.

The gold in California's stream beds and mountains was responsible for her birth both economically and politically as a member of the family of states. California's gold was an important factor in sustaining the federal finances and credit during the stress of the Civil War in the '60s; and in spite of recession in annual yield in recent years, this commonwealth is still one of the leading states in production of the yellow metal. The decreased production of new gold is due to nation-wide and world-wide economic conditions over which the gold miner himself has no control; and because the price of his product is fixed by governmental action as the basis of our (and other nations') monetary system, the gold miner is entitled to special consideration at the hands of our law-making bodies both of State and nation, to the end that whatever statutory or taxation burdens are now hampering the flow of new gold from out of the ground may be either eliminated entirely or at least ameliorated to the maximum degree. California should be in the forefront of the movement to help. We need more new gold. In the United States today we are consuming in the arts and industries more than twice as much gold as we are taking out of our mines each year. Unless something is done to help, it is conceivable that the foundation of our financial system will sooner or later be affected.

But gold is not California's only bid for fame and attention. This State is prolific in available minerals of commercial value, and the diversity of her products is not approached by any other commonwealth. Mining in California marches alongside of and goes hand-in-hand with agriculture, as one of the great basic industries upon which our people depend. Our wealth is structural and other industrial mineral raw materials is wide-spread throughout California and in great variety, and if properly fostered and adequately supported by governmental promotion, will continue to grow in importance and will continue to support an ever-increasing industrial population in this State.

STATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM.

The economical distribution of our products from farm, factory and mine to market, is a problem of general interest. The main arteries and laterals of our great highway system tap the places where our products are produced.

The increase in tourist travel throughout California is an example of the great service our highway system, as developed to the present date, has rendered. The motoring public has assumed the obligation of constructing and maintaining the State system of highways, and also of assisting our country systems with one-third of the total gas tax revenue and one-half of the motor vehicle fees. California's highway system, as now established, consists of a total of 6590 miles of which there are 4287 miles of primary roads and 2303 miles of secondary roads.

For the maintenance and expansion of our highway system, the State highways receive from the motor vehicle revenues, fuel tax, and federal aid an allotment of approximately thirty-one and a half millions a year, and the counties also receive from the motor vehicle revenues and fuel tax about one-half that amount per year. The State highway fund is expended under the terms of the Breed Act. I will not occupy you now with a statement of details showing the allocation and application of that fund.

Federal aid which has been available by act of Congress since 1921 is for projects on the federal aid system, only, the federal aid system being State highways selected by the federal government in 1921 as the federal aid system. This amounts to approximately $4,250,000 per year under the existing authorizations.

I believe that we should continue our program of building and improving the State highway system and that the development should be carried out on a balanced program, both in the sparsely settled mountain and desert areas as well as in the rich valley and urban regions. It is essential to the proper development of our State that a fair distribution of mileage commensurate with the funds available for this purpose be made. The development of our system either north or south is a benefit to the entire State. I am in accord with the principles laid down by the last Legislature in considering the addition of new highways to the State highway system, as this recognizes the lack of balance between the mileage of secondary roads in the south and in the north.

I expect to ask our highway authorities to cooperate in the construction of roads inside incorporated cities that are logically direct connections and a part of our State system to the extent possible with the funds available under existing law, without jeopardizing the carrying on of the State highway program. Necessarily, at the start, this class of work will be limited to points where the conditions are most acute with respect to passing traffic in and out of town and cities, and where communities are least able to bear the burden. Where the highway system does damage to the smaller towns in passing through them, justice demands our aid. Such aid is compulsory in towns under populations of 2500 and optional above that.

The highway work should be expanded as rapidly as funds can be provided, in order that during this temporary period of unemployment the greatest number of our citizens can be put to constructive work as soon as possible. Approximately 85 per cent of each dollar expended on highways goes directly or indirectly to labor. It is important that the Legislature proceed to make the funds available at the earliest possible date for carrying out the program of highway construction.

TRANSBAY BRIDGE.

Ever since the earliest days, traffic between San Francisco and Oakland has been by ferries; at all times this has created a serious traffic problem. Industrial science and improved construction methods now afford us a solution of this traffic problem by building a bridge connecting the counties of San Francisco and Alameda.

The history of this bridge begins some ten years and more ago, when private capital sought franchises from the City and County of San Francisco, under the old Toll Bridge Act, for permission to build a bridge between San Francisco and Alameda counties.

There was a rush of applicants for this permission and after years of hearings before the supervisors, the city appropriated a sum of money and appointed an engineering board consisting of the city engineer of San Francisco, John Gallo-way, and Robert Ridgway, who in an exhaustive report found that it was feasible to build such a bridge.

They approved several tentative sites, numbering them in the order of their approval, but stated that they could not definitely approve any site owing to the lack of foundation data.

In 1928 it became apparent that the State should assume the obligation of building this tremendous undertaking, and to this end the Legislature in the 1929 session passed the necessary legislation placing this projected bridge under State control.

The War Department had continuously refused permission to build such a structure north of Hunters' Point, but during the early part of last year, President Hoover and Governor Young appointed a Joint Bridge Commission consisting of Navy, Army and civilian membership, and this commission in a signed report unanimously approved the feasibility of such a structure, conserving both the interest of navigation and national defense.

In 1930, the Hoover-Young Bridge Commission made its report to the President and the Governor. This report cleared the way for the actual construction of the bridge. Under the auspices of the State Highway Engineer and after exhaustive borings were made, plans and estimates for a double deck bridge were submitted to the commission, accommodating motor vehicle traffic and interurban cars. The estimated cost was $75,000,000, which money was to be found by the sale of revenue bonds. The report showed that these bonds could be retired and interest paid on them by anticipated traffic, as shown by traffic surveys.

All toll bridges in the State should, I believe, be freed from tolls as soon as economically possible and be made a part of the highway system. The Highway Commission is charged with the determination of the location and routing of roads, and in my judgment should stand squarely behind this movement to insure the completion of this bridge, serving one-quarter of the State's population, resident to the San Francisco Bay area.

This bridge will be the most stupendous undertaking of its kind in the world. Under proper financing and safe and economical construction, and under the able direction of the State authorities, in cooperation with the world's best engineers, it will prove a boon to the State of California, and fill a long felt want of the great metropolitan area of San Francisco Bay.

The necessary additional legislative measures are now under way. There is pending a case before the Supreme Court to determine the validity of the bonds and bill to be presented to Congress and to the State Legislature in order to facilitate the early starting of the work, with the hope that it will commence before the close of this year.

It is extremely important, in my opinion, that these two great communities be afforded modern methods of communication with each other, and this at the earliest possible moment.

BANKING.

The banks of California both national and State, are in an exceptionally sound and liquid condition. They have never before been in such a strong position to care for the legitimate requirements of improving business.

The exceptional diversity of California's economic activities contributes much to the soundness of banking practice by eliminating the hazard of concentrations prevalent in less favored commonwealths. Moreover, the Bank Act of California had long been pointed to by the rest of the country as a model of banking legislation. Its provisions enforce the maximum of safety and liquidity in bank operation, and call for a high order of supervision by the State Superintendent of Banks.

The position of our banks may be briefly stated, in round figures, as follows: Their resources mount to the astounding total of $4,200,000,000, with deposits of $3,280,000,000 and capital surplus and undivided profits of $347,000,000. Cash resources, cash on hand and due from banks, are $710,000,000. United States government bonds and other securities held, total roundly $1,000,000,000, while bank borrowings are at the lowest level since 1922.

It is gratifying to know that California is third among the states of the Union in its per capita bank resources, the figure being $735. Our per capita savings are $365, again the third highest among the states; our per capita commercial figure is $213, in which we rank as the sixth state. New York and Massachusetts, with their vast foreign trade, naturally lead California in all of these figures.

Faith in California is justified by these gratifying figures. I firmly believe that business is on the eve of an up-swing.

With our banks so amply able to support the industries of our State, with our great wealth of natural resources, and the highly progressive spirit of our people, I look forward to an era of achievement that will set a new standard for California and the Nation.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

A problem of definite importance to my administration is the establishment of the State's building and loan business, as a whole, on a plane assuring its highest service in that segment of our California financial structure for which building and loan is designed and of which it is capable. A recent startling abuse of public confidence and trust on the part of one individual who played to his own advantage upon a weakness both in the law and the administration of that law resulted in a severe blow to those personally victimized and likewise to creditable building and loan interests.

Unfortunately, no phase of human endeavor is proof against isolated instances of dishonesty. The perverse activity of one individual does not impeach a financial business which with its $500,000,000 structure paid out in interest during 1930 more than $25,000,000 to its 600,000 investing customers. The building and loan associations of this State are today lending their resources to the financing or construction of 140,000 California homes and other improved properties. Many of these associations have been and are performing their trust efficiently and faithfully.

The building and loan association occupies an important position in the present-day economic plan. It is imperative that the sound company of this type have the confidence of the community. Adequate State supervision is essential for the protection of the public and the welfare of the associations themselves. Therefore, the field of their operations should be definitely defined. Efficient governmental regulation should be provided.

These organizations came into being through a demand for this kind of financing, originated for the mutual benefit of their members. Their scope of activities in the financial field has broadened decidedly through progressive development and healthy competition for business. State regulation has not kept pace with these developments. The lax enforcement of the present building and loan act has proved an actual menace to the public and to the sound, properly managed associations.

The remedy for this unhealthy financial situation lies chiefly in proper governmental regulation. Adequate reserves must be required of all such associations, and the State supervision must insure that such reserves be maintained to the proper standard. State examination must be sufficient and thorough, and should be made frequently enough to be effective.

Many building and loan companies in effect accept savings deposits. National and State legislative bodies have enacted rigid and comprehensive laws regulating the conduct of organizations authorized to accept deposits. The Bank Act of California provides certain standards for companies organized under the State law to do a savings bank business. Among the most important of these are the requirements affecting the character of the reserves such savings banks must maintain.

It would appear logical, therefore, that any other organization which in effect accepts savings deposits and which is subject to State supervision should have and maintain adequate reserves. The mere fact that the State has deemed it essential to regulate these various kinds of financial institutions leads the public to believe there is but one standard required by governmental agencies. The sound, well-managed and financially strong building and loan associations have been handicapped by inadequate and inefficient supervision. They will welcome such steps as will establish a uniform standard of efficient State supervision.

The present statutes governing building and loan associations were adopted years ago and the business has far outgrown them. In 1907 our State banks were confronted by a similar condition, due to the fact that State banking laws were inadequate and obsolescent. A new bank act was thereupon enacted which is outstanding for careful regulation and under which California State banks have prospered as never before.

Building and loan associations require a similar codification of the laws by which they are to be governed. It is my aim to urge laws which will not unfairly restrict building and loan associations from the progress which many of them have enjoyed through their high standard of self-supervision but which will place the business in its entirety on a thoroughly sound basis worthy of complete public confidence.

FAITH IN CALIFORNIA.

By reason of worldwide conditions, the year 1930 was a period of economic depression which naturally had its echoes in California. All of us have suffered from it. And, as in good times our optimism goes beyond all bounds, so in bad times our pessimism becomes excessive and reacts upon itself to make the times harder and the outlook gloomier than the facts warrant. As conditions were never so bright as we thought they were in 1928, so they were never so dark as we thought they were in that winter of our discontent, the last few months of 1930.

On each of us depends the rapidity and extent of our recovery. Our troubles are past if we will open our eyes and see that they are past.

Let us face 1931 with heads up and shoulders back, looking forward with serene confidence in the destiny of our State, and in the security of her industrial and financial institutions. Let us have faith in California! That faith will make us what we wish to be. That faith will turn despair into hope, distress into comfort, failure into success. Let us display, at the opening of this new year, the courage and confidence which inspired the pioneers who peopled our loved State, which have carried us through many periods of stress, which enabled San Francisco in 1906 to spring from the ashes and rebuild itself greater than before, which animated the men who guided the rise of Los Angeles from a small town to a great metropolis in a few decades; the courage and confidence, in short, which have characterized Californians from the earliest days and without which there is little in life worth having. We can shape our own future. Let us do so. And let us begin today by resolving to open a new administration with a revived and strengthened faith in California.

Let me illustrate by this striking parallelism the wealth of the American people and the resiliency with which they are capable of recovering from heavy losses.

Very recently I went to some pains to ascertain with much detail the cost of the war to the American people and the amount of losses incurred during the past fifteen months in the shrinkage of stock market values.

In round figures, the war, directly and indirectly, cost the United States $51,500,000,000, exclusive of loans to the allies. You will recall that, following the war, came a period of severe losses and depression from which the country made a rapid and brilliant recovery, culminating in a long period of prosperity, rising values, and universal optimism.

Then, in the latter part of 1929, came the natural reaction which resulted in a sudden decline of values and consequent development of a spirit of pessimism. It is computed from official sources that the shrinkage in market values of all listed securities amounted to approximately $35,000,000,000, and other shrinkages, caused by this loss, totalled an estimated sum of $10,000,000,000 additional, making a total loss from the peak to the bottom of stock values during the period of the crash of $45,000,000,000.

Is it not logical, indeed, is it not inevitable that the nation which could so rapidly recover from the huge war losses will recover with equal rapidity from the losses sustained during the past fifteen months?

All California needs right now to bring about that recovery is a spirit of confidence and quick response to courageous leadership; the state of mind which says, "I will," instead of "I can not." It is my wish to apply such leadership within my province.

I wish to imbue the people of California with my own faith in California. I wish to begin my administration on a note of hope and confidence. Be prepared by holding such hope and confidence to follow my leadership into the bright days which I see just ahead.

NECESSITY FOR A HOMOGENEOUS ADMINISTRATION.

With the fundamental ideas and the plans of legislation and administration which I have recounted, I am brought to one consideration of a very practical character upon which I shall speak for a moment.

When a Governor enters upon his task he finds many head places of departments through which he would wish to work out his plans and policies held by those who have not hitherto and perhaps are not now and may not in the future be in sympathy with him, and therefore while the nominal administration is that of the Governor it is in measurable part not his administration but the carry over of different and earlier plans and policies. It should be possible for the Governor at the very beginning to man all of the departments with those who entertain his views of administration and are prepared unreservedly to cooperate with him in their promotion.

I do not mean by this suggestion to invoke the outworn idea that to the victor belongs the spoils, and I do not refer to public officers not in dominant positions in the outstanding departments of the State administration. Those, however, who do hold dominant positions in outstanding departments should come in with and go out with the Governor.

This idea is not new and its suggestion by me is not novel.

Immediately upon the accession to office of a new President, the resignations of all the diplomatic representatives of the government are in his hands so that he may not be compelled to carry on his foreign policies through diplomatic representatives originating in past administrations and perhaps holding views not entirely in harmony with the views of the new President.

The same idea underlies the abolition of the short term of Congress which immediately follows the election of a new Congress, the work of which is delayed for more than a year beyond the election.

I shall, in obedience to the views just expressed, recommend a change in statutory law to bring in the whole of an administration at the one time and not a portion only at the inauguration of the Governor and other parts from time to time, running on perhaps to the end of his term.

I have now in an imperfect way sought to express the sentiments and plans which I entertain in respect of important matters of government and the ideas underlying them; and again I ask the cooperation of all my fellow citizens in bringing to accomplishment the views which I have expressed and the plans and purposes which I have outlined.

I dedicate to the advancement of these ideas and to the accomplishment of these objectives all my faculties, all my energies, and all my experience; and God willing, I shall not fail.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH OF OFFICE.

Hon. Frank F. Merriam took and subscribed to the following oath administered by Hon. William H. Waste, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court:

I do solemnly swear that I will support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State of California, and I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of Lieutenant Governor of the State of California to the best of my ability, so help me God.

INTRODUCTION OF LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR FRANK F. MERRIAM.

Hon. Edgar C. Levey, Speaker of the Assembly, addressed the Joint Convention as follows:

I am deeply appreciative of the distinction which is afforded me today to present to you the incoming Lieutenant Governor of California. When I recall that four years ago I was privileged to preside at the installation ceremonies of the Hon. C. C. Young, the outgoing Governor, I am reminded that I am emulating his example in filling for the third time the position of the presiding officer of the Assembly. This is particularly significant to me in view of the fact that I received my early instruction from him when he was a teacher and I a pupil in the Lowell High School of San Francisco.

The members of the Assembly feel most grateful to Governor Young for the cooperation rendered to them by him during the four years of his service as Governor of California. I am here to render my public thanks for his courtesies and kindnesses to me.

The incoming Governor, His Excellency James Rolph, Jr., is a native son who hails from my own city of San Francisco. To me this occasion is a most auspicious one in that I, also a native of San Francisco, will have the opportunity of associating myself with him in our legislative work. From expressions which have been rendered to me, I feel that I can pledge him the unanimous and unqualified support of the Legislature of California. Reviewing his service of nearly two decades as mayor of San Francisco, we can well prophesy that the future of our great State, during his administration, will be assured.

My predecessor in office was the present Lieutenant Governor. From him I had my first instruction in the duties of the Speaker of the Assembly. He filled that office ably and well for two terms and earned for himself an enviable reputation. He has since been a member of the Senate over which he is now called to preside and has also served with distinction as chairman of the Republican State Central Committee.

California has been signally honored in having him elected to assume the second highest office in the State and we, the members of the Legislature, wish him well.

I prophesy that, with Governor Rolph in the chair and our next Lieutenant Governor in his position, our prosperity and our progress are assured. It is with the deepest pleasure that I now present to you the Lieutenant Governor of California, Hon. Frank F. Merriam of Long Beach.

ADDRESS BY LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR FRANK F. MERRIAM.

Lieutenant Governor Frank F. Merriam then addressed the Joint Convention as follows:

Last year California observed the eightieth anniversary of its admission to the Union. As we look back upon those pioneer days, we marvel at the changes wrought in the four score years of statehood—changes which have been so happily emphasized in the events of the last few days.

California has traveled a long distance in its development since the days of the ox team and the covered wagon and has experienced many transformations in the dress, customs and activities of the people.

Present day civilization was not attained at one bound but has been achieved through processes of the intervening years. New problems have confronted each generation and upon their solution has depended the progress of that period.

The hardy sons and daughters of the nation who sought adventure or gold or a home in the West laid the foundation of this commonwealth; their children and those who followed nourished these institutions and met most successfully the problems of their times. Today we boast of our progress in every line of achievement and endeavor.

Through the years our population has increased so rapidly; our wealth, commerce, industry and the products of the ranch, vineyard and orchard have grown to such proportions as to attract world attention and influence world markets and trade. The problems arising from this condition challenge the best thought and effort of the men and women of the commonwealth in their solution.

It is well to review for a moment the story of the past, to dream the romance of these mountains and valleys, to worship at memory's shrine and recount the deeds and heroism of the fathers and mothers who pioneered this last land of the West, who endured the privations and hardships to build the early structure of the California we enjoy today. Such a moment should inspire us to act well the part assigned to us in the story of the future years.

Yesterday a new Legislature was organized and today a new administration is inaugurated to further build the civic structure of the Golden State. It is not an easy task. It calls for earnest effort, courageous planning and wise counsel. The complex civilization of the age, the rapid building of a new commonwealth, the great stride in invention and discovery, the very progress which we so proudly cherish have developed the problems and tasks presented here today for solution. Many of these are local; some are national and a few are international in their scope.

A day's work which will provide not alone the necessities but the comforts of life as well, for all who would labor is essential to the health and happiness of the people and the perpetuity of the State.

The impounding and distribution of the available water resources of California is a gigantic undertaking but one that will yield readily to the planning of engineers, the support of financiers and the courage of the voters to inaugurate and foster these great enterprises.

Taxation is an ever-present question. The equal distribution of the burden for maintenance of government with its constantly increasing activities requires readjustment from time to time, with perhaps the consideration of new methods of taxation, at least new in California, and so-called new sources of revenue.

The further extension and building of highways; the financing and construction of the great bridges to provide more convenient and shorter lines of transportation; the control of aerial transportation with provision for its development and convenient airports; protection to life and property upon the highways, and the safety of workers in their places of employment; the conservation of our natural resources; the protection of the forests including reforestation of denuded areas, refuges for protection of the wild life; parks for preservation of historic and scenic spots and the recreational pleasure of the people, and many other questions of perhaps equal importance are presented for the intelligent consideration of the administration and the Legislature.

To have a part in the solution of these great problems is a real privilege and I am happy here today to pledge my support to the administration and to the Legislature, as Lieutenant Governor and as a citizen, in building here a commonwealth that shall bring the most of opportunity and the most of true happiness to men and women and boys and girls; to make California a place where the blessings of life may be enjoyed to the fullest.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications and report of the Commission on Uniform State Laws were received, read, and ordered printed in the Journal:

*Secretary of State Senate,
State Capitol, Sacramento, California.*

IN RE: COMMISSION ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS.

DEAR SIR: In compliance with the provision of "An act to provide for the creation of a Commission on Uniform State Laws, the appointment of commissioners thereto, and to appropriate money for traveling expenses" (approved May 14, 1927), herewith enclosed you will please find the report of the Commission on Uniform State Laws to the Legislature of the State of California.

Very truly yours,

GURNEY E. NEWLIN, President.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS.

To the Legislature of the State of California.

The Commission on Uniform State Laws respectfully reports as follows:

The Commission on Uniform State Laws is the outgrowth of a demand for greater uniformity in the laws of the several states. Much annoyance, inconvenience and even serious loss has been occasioned by the diversity of legislation existing and enacted from time to time by the different state legislatures. The constant communication between the different states and the transactions of business between citizens of different states requires for satisfactory relationships as much agreement upon the various subjects of legislation as circumstances will permit.

The California commission was created under an act of the State Legislature entitled "An act to provide for the creation of a Commission on Uniform State Laws, the appointment of commissioners thereto, and to appropriate money for traveling expenses" (approved May 14, 1927). The present commissioners and their respective offices are:

Gurney E. Newlin, President, Los Angeles.

Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, Secretary, San Francisco.

Jefferson P. Chandler, Los Angeles.

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws is a section of the American Bar Association and is made up of commissioners from each of the states appointed largely by reason of legislative authority. The commissioners are chosen from the legal profession, being lawyers and judges of standing and experience, and teachers in law of some of the leading law schools. The commissioners meet in annual conference at the same place as the American Bar Association, usually for five or six days immediately preceding the meeting of that association.

The National Conference has drafted, approved and is recommending to the states for adoption a total of forty-three acts. Of such acts the following uniform laws are in force in California:

	Year enacted.
Uniform Bills of Lading Act.....	1915
Uniform Desertion and Non-Support Act.....	1911
Uniform Foreign Depositions Act.....	1923
Uniform Limited Partnership Act.....	1929
Uniform Negotiable Instruments Act.....	1917
Uniform Partnership Act.....	1929
Uniform Veterans Guardianship Act.....	1929
Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act.....	1909

together with amendments to such act which were adopted in 1923.

Since the last session of the Legislature, there have been held two meetings of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws—one in Memphis, Tennessee, in October, 1929, at which meeting Commissioners Dinkelspiel and Newlin were present. At this meeting there was approved and recommended to the states for adoption a Uniform Sale of Securities Act and amendments to the Uniform Act Regulating the Operation of Vehicles on Highways. The last meeting of the commissioners was held in Chicago in August, 1930, at which meeting Commissioners Chandler and Newlin were present—the attendance by Commissioner Dinkelspiel having been prevented by illness. At this last conference there was approved and recommended for enactment in all the states the following uniform Acts:

Air Licensing Act,

Child Labor Act,

Divorce Jurisdiction Act,

Firearms Act,

and amendments to the four acts making up what is known as the Motor Vehicle

Code, consisting of a Uniform Motor Vehicle Registration Act, Uniform Motor Vehicle Anti-Theft Act, Uniform Motor Vehicle Operators and Chauffeurs License Act, and Uniform Act Regulating Traffic on Highways.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

1. Your commission recommends to the Legislature for enactment at this session of the Legislature the Uniform Sales Act, which was approved by the National Conference of Commissioners in 1906, and since that time has been enacted and is now the law in thirty-one states, including all of the leading commercial states. This act has been passed by the Legislature in several instances and its enactment would, in the opinion of the commissioners, be the most important thing that the Legislature could do to promote uniformity of legislation and bring the law of California with respect to the sale of goods in line with that of all of the other states having large commercial business.

2. Your commission further respectfully recommends that the commission shall be allowed for traveling and other expenses and actual disbursements in effectuating the objects of the act approved in 1927 a sum not to exceed one thousand dollars ($1,000) in the aggregate for any one year, and that the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, not otherwise appropriated in the State Treasury and in addition to any other moneys appropriated, be appropriated for the support of the Commission on Uniform State Laws during the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years.

Respectfully submitted.

GURNEY E. NEWLIN.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communication was received, and, on motion of Senator Allen, ordered printed in the Journal:

A PLEA FOR THE WELFARE OF CALIFORNIA'S MOUNTAIN COUNTIES.

The people of the mountain region of California feel that something should be done to protect their present, and especially their future water supply.

Up to a few years ago, they did not sense the danger; but since cities and irrigationists have been carrying the water away to other parts of the State, the mountain people face the peril that the day is not far distant when there will be no water supplies left to the mountain regions for their own development.

At the present rate it will not be long before new enterprises among our mountain people will become impossible. This means that no one could prospect for more mines. The decline of gold supply that is already disturbing these depressed times would be hastened on. Nonmetallic deposits could fare no better. There could be no further growth of our horticulture pursuits. It means also that there will be no increase of mountain customers for city factories, and no additional mountain summer homes for city people.

This is not a question of private individuals. It perils the development of California as a whole, resembling in this respect the question of the mountain forests in years past. When the government saw the danger to the forests it withdrew from entry a portion of the timbered area, creating what are now national forests.

A bill similarly reserving for the development of the mountain counties some of the hitherto unclaimed and unappropriated water within their borders was passed by the Legislature of California in 1925, and again in 1927. Both times the dissenting votes in both Houses did not exceed a dozen. The Legislature in both instances recognized the justice of the proposal, realized the danger, and would have accorded the remedy had the Governor been as well disposed.

We therefore offer for your consideration the hope that you will look favorably upon the measures for the protection of the mountain counties that will be presented to the next Legislature. Any influence that you can bring to bear will be welcomed. The views above expressed have been approved by:

Chamber of Commerce of Amador County,
Chamber of Commerce of Calaveras County,
Chamber of Commerce of El Dorado County,
Chamber of Commerce of Mariposa County,
Chamber of Commerce of Placer County,
Chamber of Commerce of Tuolumne County.

Yours sincerely,

CALAVERAS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.
D. FRICOT, President.

Also:

The following communication was received, and, on motion of Senator Hays, ordered printed in the Journal:

"WHEREAS, The County Assessors' Association of California, recognizing the steadily increasing demand that exists for the revision of State laws relating to local taxation and assessment procedure, expresses the belief and conviction that before such revision can be intelligently undertaken, it is essential that facts concerning the present conditions in so far as local taxation and assessment procedure are concerned be secured; and

WHEREAS, The county assessors of the State of California are firmly of the opinion that any tax legislation based solely upon theory is a dangerous expedient; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the County Assessors' Association of California, in annual convention assembled, records itself as recommending the creation of an agency of the State government, to consist of men experienced in the practical administration of laws relating to local taxation and assessment procedure, and in the practical handling of the problems that administration of such laws imposes—said agency under the direction of elected officials, to be vested with the duty of assembling and compiling as directed, the basic facts which relate to local taxation laws and local assessment procedure; the said agency acting under such directions to devote its entire time to the study of local taxation and assessment problems, with the definite restriction of its powers to such task, said agency to have no powers, duties, functions or jurisdiction beyond assembling and compiling and reporting facts relative to local taxation and assessment problems; and, be it further

Resolved, That the chairman of the legislative committee of this association be, and hereby is, instructed to transmit on January 5, 1931, duly authenticated copies of this resolution to His Excellency the Governor of the State of California, the Lieutenant Governor, and the Speaker of the Assembly of the State of California."

The foregoing is a true and correct copy of resolutions adopted by the County Assessors' Association of California, at their convention held at Catalina Island, September 25, 1930.

Attest:

G. P. CUMMINGS, Secretary.
County Assessors' Association of California.

The following communication was received, read, and ordered printed in the Journal:

January 8, 1930.

*Secretary of the Senate,
Sacramento, California.*

DEAR SIR: I am handing you herewith report of the Legislative Penitentiary Committee appointed pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 28, of the session of 1929.

Yours very truly,

GEO. W. ROCHESTER.

REPORT.

The following report was received, and, on motion of Senator Rochester, ordered printed in the Journal:

REPORT OF THE LEGISLATIVE PENITENTIARY COMMITTEE.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

To Forty-ninth Session of the Legislature of California; Hon. James Rolph, Jr., Governor of the State of California; Rolland Vandegrift, Director Finance Department; Walter Garrison, Director of Board of Public Works; Charles Neumiller, Chairman of Prison Board; Daniel O'Brien, Director of Penology.

GENTLEMEN: During the session of the Legislature of 1927 a committee was appointed under Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 17 by the Speaker of the Assembly, and under Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 15 by the Lieutenant Governor, to inspect sites "as to the advisability of establishing a State's prison in one of the southern counties of the State of California." The committee appointed was composed of Senators Patrick Gray and Joseph Pedrotti and Assemblymen Woolwine, Hawes and Rochester.

Inspections by the committee were started and continued throughout the southern counties until the convening of the 1929 Legislature. A report was given to the Legislature wherein the committee stated that it was unprepared for a definite site selection and asked for a continuance of its powers in order to fully cover the ground before recommending in accordance with the above resolutions.

Following the advice of the committee there was enacted in the 1929 Legislature Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 28 reappointing the same committee for the same work and ordering after completion of the inspection that a "report of their findings in full be submitted to the forty-ninth session of the Legislature"; that this report should contain the "advisability of locating a State's prison in one of the southern counties of this State and recommending to the Legislature a suitable location therefor and the estimated cost of construction thereof * * * and to collaborate with State officials in their reports"; that this committee at some subsequent date near the convening of the forty-ninth session of the Legislature will report as to the cost of construction of the penitentiary.

This committee after investigating the penal institutions of California and their facilities in handling the ever-increasing personnel of prisoners, advise the location of a State's prison in one of the southern counties; that the cost of transportation to San Quentin and Folsom of prisoners from the ten counties south of the Tehachapi amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars a year and this item alone compels the establishment of a penal institution in one of those counties. The additional outlay for the penitentiary will not equal over three or four years of transportation costs now expended, and from a financial standpoint it is economically advisable to establish said institution.

Upon the same premise it is advisable, if possible, that said institution be located somewhere in Los Angeles County inasmuch as practically one-half of the inmates at Folsom and San Quentin come from that county. The transportation item will therefore be solved and a saving for the State and the counties in having the institution in that county.

Due to the deplorable increase of juvenile crime it was recommended by the Crime Commission to the 1929 session of the Legislature that the contemplated penal institution be built for "juvenile felons from 18 to 24." This committee agrees with that recommendation and incorporates its approval of same within this report.

After three years of investigation and inspection this committee has traversed the counties of Kern, San Bernardino, Ventura, Riverside, Orange, San Diego and Los Angeles, and has considered approximately 150 submitted sites in these counties. A most thorough inspection has been made as to the location, future development, transportation, soil facilities, climate, water facilities and accessibility.

This committee has cooperated with the committee created by the Legislature of executives and administrative officials and with the subcommittee composed of technical officers of the State.

By reason of the fact that the Legislature appropriated only $1,000 for expenses, the investigation carried on by the committee has been primarily first hand by the members of the committee, and a great deal of effort has been made to secure the data and statistics necessary by appealing to authorities of soil, water, etc., to furnish information for civic consideration and without cost to the State. This has made the conclusions reached after the committee's thorough investigation, slow in formulating, and extended in time. Just before the convening of the forty-ninth session of the Legislature, your committee met with the committee of executives and administrative officials and endeavored to select the proper site, but was prevented from so doing by reason of the shortness of time and difficulty in clearing the title to the property agreed upon by the majority.

For the above reasons your committee recommends that another concurrent resolution be passed by the Legislature in the 1931 session, reappointing your committee, so that the negotiations interrupted by the convening of the session may be continued.

Your committee verily believes that with the cooperation of the newly appointed personnel of the executives and administrative officials, it may select a site and be able to acquire title for the State before the adjournment of the present session, at which time a full report will be made.

In accordance with this suggestion, therefore, your committee will introduce a Senate concurrent resolution and ask unanimous consent to have it considered without reference to committee or file. We advise this procedure by reason of the fact that it seems imminent that a selection can be made in the near future, or as soon as the power is delegated by the Legislature. There is great need that extended prison facilities be inaugurated for the benefit of the State as soon as feasibly possible.

Respectfully submitted.

CLARE WOOLWINE, Chairman.
JOSEPH L. PEDROTTI.
FRED HAWES.

By GEO. W. ROCHESTER, Secretary.

COMMUNICATION.

The following communication was received, and, on motion of Senator Breed, ordered printed in the Journal:

January 10, 1931.
File No. 149.

Joseph A. Beek,
*Secretary of the Senate,
Sacramento, California.*

DEAR SIR: Enclosed find copy of the report of the Railroad Commission to the Legislature on fruit and vegetable auctions, pursuant to Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 43, chapter 80, Laws of 1929. Under this resolution our commission is to report directly to the Legislature. I am therefore transmitting copy of the report, which I will ask you to kindly present to the Senate.

For your information, I may say that the report has been printed ready for distribution to the members of the Legislature.

Very truly yours,

C. L. SEAVEY, President.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The following message from the Governor was received, and ordered printed in the Journal:

BUDGET MESSAGE OF JAMES ROLPH, JR.,
GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA.

To the Members of the Senate and Assembly.

The budget herewith presented has been prepared in accordance with section 34 of article IV of the State constitution. This section designates clearly how the budget is to be prepared and what it should contain, but it does not specify the form to be used.

NEW STYLE BUDGET.

It is expected that improvements will be made in the form of the budget in succeeding bienniums as experience indicates desirable changes. Happily this has been the experience with each succeeding budget since the executive budget law became effective. I believe you will agree with me that this budget presents a number of improvements over the previous document. It contains greater details than any previous budget, yet all changes and improvements have been incorporated so that comparisons can be made with prior budgets and a desirable continuity maintained.

The expenditures of each State agency have been analyzed so as to present detailed cost of each function performed by such agency. In budgets heretofore presented the expenditures were analyzed merely by the four objects: "salaries and wages," "materials and supplies," "service and expense," and "equipment." In this budget, in addition to maintaining these classifications by the above four objects, expenditures are also grouped so as to show total cost of each function. For example, an institution budget in the new form presents the cost of "administration," "support and subsistence" (of inmates), "care and welfare" (of inmates), "maintenance and operation of plant," and "farming," details being given under each of these functions as to costs for salaries, materials, service and equipment. This more complete analysis of the proposed expenditures makes possible a more detailed and complete study of the activities of every State agency and I am sure you will find it helpful and useful in your consideration of the budget.

You will find the budget in a new dress. In presenting a budget with more detail, it was found desirable to change from the 6" x 9" to an 8½" x 11" size. The adoption of the larger size provides added space and permits the use of larger size type, making the budget much easier to read. The larger size lends itself to more economical printing and a material saving has been effected.

ALL PROPOSED EXPENDITURES INCLUDED.

In accordance with the section of the constitution above referred to which reads in part, "the Governor shall * * * submit to the Legislature * * * a budget containing a complete plan and itemized statement of all proposed expenditures of the State provided by existing law or recommended by him," all such expenditures have been included in this budget. Care has been taken, however, not to legislate in this budget. With the exception of a few additions to the Governor's staff, no recommendation for expenditures for positions which require legislation to create, has been made. Nor have recommendations for other expenditures been included where previous action or circumstances indicate that the Legislature may be expected to act specifically on the matter. Therefore, there is no sum included for the proposed employees' retirement system nor for the indemnity to owners for live stock destroyed to prevent the spread of disease, although these measures were approved by the people at the last general election.

Every dollar of proposed expenditures has been included and clearly designated. The expenses of every department and office have been considered and allocated to the department or office concerned, and the facts presented. This has caused the recommended expenditures of some offices, including the Governor's, to show an increase in excess of the budget average. All known charges have been included, and none have been left to be met from the emergency fund. The previous custom of allowing charges such as forest fire suppression costs, amounting to approximately $200,000 a biennium, to be paid out of the emergency fund, has been discontinued. Such items appear in the budget and so leave the emergency fund to serve its real purpose.

The proposed expenditures, as in the two previous budgets, include every dollar, whether to be disbursed directly by the State, or indirectly through the agency of the federal government or the counties. These indirect disbursements include amounts for flood control, schools, highways, orphan aid, and, added within the present biennium, aid for the blind and for the aged.

As a result of this plan of including every proposed expenditure and setting up in the budget every known charge against the State, and leaving no item which can be forecast to fall as a charge against the emergency fund, it is hoped to reduce special appropriation measures to a minimum. Special appropriations should be limited to such items as have been approved by the vote of the people or such as in the judgment of the Legislature are essential. The present economic condition of the State and the reduced ability of the taxpayers of the State to meet public expenditures should be considered. The fact that every request for expenditures has been fully considered and that allowances are recommended for normal expansion in all services, for normal increases in salaries, and for a capital outlay program consistent with the needs of our institutions and the ability of the State to pay, should tend to limit the necessity for the enactment of special appropriations.

BUDGET IN THREE SECTIONS.

Following the plan of the previous budget, this one has been divided into three separate sections so that comparisons can be made. The first section covers the general budget; the second section presents the educational budget, and the last the highway budget. Expenditures for highways continue to make up the largest percentage of the budget. The amount included for highway purposes for the ensuing biennium is 41.61 per cent, compared with the 44 per cent contemplated in the budget for the biennium just coming to an end and the 43.55 per cent actual and estimated expenditures being incurred during this period. The amount recommended for education is 32.58 per cent of the entire budget, as compared with the 32 per cent recommended in the last budget and the 31.43 per cent actual and estimated expenditures incurred during its period. The expenditures for the general activities of the State comprise the remainder, or but 25.81 per cent, as compared with the 24 per cent recommended in the last budget, and the 25.02 per cent actual and estimated expenditures for the biennium ending June 30, 1931.

Experience indicates that a large group of the public is particularly interested in expenditures made by the State for educational purposes, while another very large group is particularly interested in expenditures for highways. Probably the smallest percentage of the public is interested in expenditures for the general activities of the State. For reasons of economy, the custom of printing special pamphlets dealing with the highway and educational sections of the budget will be continued. These will be available for distribution on request.

DEPARTMENTAL REQUESTS REPORTED.

The amounts requested by the various divisions, departments, institutions, agencies and officers of the State, and the reasons for deductions and increases made in some of the requests, are presented. Detailed explanations have been inserted in the budget accompanying the recommendations for each agency.

FIXED CHARGES AND CONTROLLABLE ITEMS.

I wish to call your attention to the fact that of the total budget of $265,345,955.38, as recommended, only $82,294,280.62, or 31.01 per cent, comes under the direct control of the Governor. In the budget for the present biennium this percentage was 28.89. A large part of the increase in the amount under control of the Governor is due to the fact that the ten-year financial program of the University of California, as determined by the Legislature, ends with the present biennium. Theoretically at least, the Governor now has control of this amount previously fixed by legislative enactment. In practice, however, very little actual control can be resumed by the Governor for the reason that the needs of the university have not ceased or changed with the termination of the ten-year financial program established by legislation. The larger part of this budget, not under the control of the Governor and amounting to $183,051,674.76, or 68.99 per cent, is made up of fixed charges. These are items which are either definitely fixed by the vote of the people in the constitution or have been appropriated in recurrent amounts by the Legislature. The principal fixed charges and the amounts for each are as follows:

Highway maintenance and construction-----	$63,322,500 00
Apportionment to counties of funds for highway purposes	31,522,500 00
Apportionment to elementary schools, high schools, and junior colleges-----	58,400,870 00
Bond interest and redemption-----	13,416,340 08

In the tables and charts contained herein showing the comparison of the total fixed charges, the recurrent appropriations for the University of California are not included as fixed charges for any of the periods shown. For all practical purposes, as explained above, there has been no increase in the controllable portion of the budget because of the lapse of this item.

GENERAL AND SPECIAL FUND EXPENDITURES INDICATED.

Another new feature of this budget which appears to be particularly valuable is the use of three distinctive styles of type to indicate for each item of expenditure the class of funds from which the expenditure is to be made. Every figure shown in light face Roman type indicates that the expenditure is to be made from the general fund. Every item of expenditure shown in italic type indicates that the expenditure is to be made from a special fund. Figures in bold face type indicate that the item is a combination of both general and special funds. The same method has been used in the revenue tables to indicate whether the item is a general fund or a special fund revenue. This method of showing the various items of expenditure or revenues will be of material aid in your study of the budget and in its use by the general public.

THE GENERAL BUDGET.

The general budget totals $68,523,622.54. This represents an increase of only 7.333 per cent over the actual and estimated expenditures of the biennium just closing. This increase is practically in the same ratio as the average estimated increase of population for the next two years, as indicated by the average of the projections of the predominating trends during the past ten years. The increase in the general budget has been held within this percentage through adherence to an economy program which recognizes the reduced ability of taxpayers to pay. At the same time normal increases in services of the State have been taken care of, and other increased services have been undertaken through assuming the full load of aid for the aged and the blind, and a number of miscellaneous charges which have previously been paid out of funds from other sources. Also, there has been an exceptional increase in the fixed charge for bond interest and redemption in the general budget for the coming biennium, amounting to 46.7 per cent. This great increase is due primarily to an increase of 108 per cent in bond interest and redemption payable from the general fund. The payments for the current biennium amount to $950,576.75, while they will total $1,977,657 during the ensuing biennium, because of the maturity of a large block of "State Building and University Buildings" bonds, and heavier interest charges on increased issues of "Park" and "Tenth Olympiad" bonds. The inclusion of normal charges for San Francisco Harbor bonds (payable from the Harbor Improvement Fund) in this section of the budget produces the net increase of 46.7 per cent as shown above.

In this section of the budget, as well as in the others, an economical but not a niggardly program has been provided for. You will find, when you study the detailed budget, that I have not been unmindful of the essential needs of every State agency. Every consideration has been given to provide adequately for existing services with normal advancement in every activity. Nevertheless, the percentage of increase in the general budget is the smallest since the adoption of the executive budget.

The condensed table shown below presents a comparison of the expenditures for the biennial periods between July 1, 1923, and June 30, 1933. It is appreciated that the percentage of increase shown in the general budget may be still further augmented by special appropriations by the Legislature, and that such appropriations are reflected in the expenditure percentage items indicated for prior bienniums. Of the general budget, $13,414,790.08 represents fixed charges, not subject to control by the Governor.

GENERAL BUDGET.

Fiscal years of biennium	Date limits of biennium	Total expenditures for biennium	Percentage of increase
75th and 76th-----	1923-1925	$39,338,710 64	-----
77th and 78th-----	1925-1927	46,002,964 89	16.941
79th and 80th-----	1927-1929	54,618,277 64	18.728
81st and 82d-----	1929-1931	63,842,695 07	16.888
83d and 84th-----	1931-1933	68,523,622 54	7.333

The general budget has been rearranged according to departmental functions consistent with the reorganization of the State government and natural groupings into functional groups. For example, the Railroad Commission has been taken out of the Investment Regulation section, where it was shown in the prior budget, and has been set up separately under the designation of Public Utility Regulation.

Instead of following the form of previous budgets in classifying only the expenditures recommended for the ensuing biennium under the four headings, "support," "special items," "fixed charges," and "permanent improvements," this budget presents a complete analysis of not only the proposed budget for the new biennium, but also of the actual and estimated expenditures for the biennium drawing to a close. The expenditures of these two biennial periods have been classified as follows:

A. Expenditures for State activities.

1. Current expenses.

Under this heading fall all items of usual and current State expense for support and special items.

2. Permanent improvements.

Under this head fall all items of capital outlay, including all construction and improvement of highways as well as outlay for land, structures and other lasting improvements.

3. Bond interest and redemption.

Under this heading is shown the amount required to pay the interest on, and reduce, the State debt.

B. Subventions to counties and other agencies.

Under this heading are shown all apportionments of funds which the State does not spend directly, such as those apportioned to counties or other local subdivisions for schools and highways, or funds contributed for aid to orphans, the aged or the blind.

It is believed that this enlarged analysis of the expenditures, giving a detailed comparison of two biennial periods, will present a much more intelligible summary of the expenditures than has been presented in any preceding budget. This improved form of the budget compares favorably with that of any other State budget, and in many respects is undoubtedly far superior.

SALARY INCREASES.

Following the recommendation made by my predecessor in his budget message of two years ago, no attempt has been made to show individual salary increases for each respective employee listed in the budget. It is quite obvious that any attempt to determine the individual salary increase from one to two years in advance of the time of payment is not the best budget procedure. It is also questionable administrative efficiency to set up salary increases for specific positions, and in a sense, to handicap the administrator of a department.

In this budget a single item covering the allowance for salary increases is included for each State agency. The actual allotments for salary increases are subject to civil service regulations and are to be made by the head of the agency or department at the time salary increases are due employees. This method, I am quite sure, will be much fairer to the efficient administrator and employee, and will give much better results than the old method of fixing salary increases far in advance. Heretofore often it has been necessary because of inefficiency or lack of improved service to deny an employee the salary increase set forth in the printed budget. The employee, knowing that the salary increase had been included in the budget, felt that an injustice was being done him when the appointing power refused to grant such salary increase. By this improved method such controversies are eliminated by providing the lump sum allowance for salary increases in the several agencies and departments.

The amount allowed in the budget for salary increases must be considered as only a part of the sum available, for savings made through replacing high-salaried employees with those drawing lower salaries when replacements are made, is also available for salary increases. The amount allowed has been determined after a careful study of the experience of the past, and it is sufficient to carry on normal salary increases and, in addition, to make some needed adjustments.

NEW PERSONNEL CLASSIFICATION INCLUDED.

The new personnel classification study carried on by the Civil Service Commission has reached such a point that the new designations for positions as determined in this study have been incorporated in this budget. The positions as shown more nearly indicate the actual work performed than has been possible in the past. This new classification will be of material benefit in making it possible for you to consider the salaries being paid and will also be of material assistance in improving the service rendered by the State in having civil service classifications conform strictly to the positions actually filled.

The salaries of the instructors of the State educational institutions under budgetary control have been given special consideration with the idea of placing them on a basis which gives recognition to professional standing. Therefore, the allowances for salary increases for the instructors of these institutions do not conform in percentage to the allowances for other employees.

REDEMPTION OF FUNDED DEBT BONDS.

As one of the fixed charges there is an item of expenditure of $282,870 each biennium for interest on $2,277,500 funded debt 6 per cent bonds of 1873. These bonds would have matured in 1893 but by vote of the people it was determined not to retire them. These bonds had been purchased and held for the School fund and the University fund. The Legislature, by chapter 65, Statutes of 1893, provided that interest should continue to be paid on these bonds, as well as on an amount of $79,750 due the University Fund for amounts incorrectly withdrawn in previous years. Interest at 6 per cent per annum has been paid on these amounts since that date. This interest rate is in excess of what the State pays on its other obligations. The carrying of the bonds as a funded debt with the interest treated as income to the above mentioned endowment funds, while it is also a charge against the general fund, further complicates the accounting and the control of the State finances. Carrying these bonds so long beyond maturity gives the impression, through published statements, that the State has failed to meet its obligations. It is recommended that consideration be given to the gradual retirement of these bonds.

THE EDUCATIONAL BUDGET.

For the convenience of the officials and citizens particularly interested in expenditures for education, all of these expenditures have been grouped together in a distinct section of the budget. The total educational budget amounts to $86,439,322.84. This includes $61,403,874.68 in fixed charges. The fixed charges in the educational budget are nearly all determined by constitutional provision voted directly by the people and the remainder by legislative enactment. The educational budget represents an increase of 7.77 per cent over the present biennium compared with a 10.69 per cent increase for the eighty-first and eighty-second fiscal years over the seventy-ninth and eightieth. The proposed expenditures for the University of California represent an increase of 10.7 per cent over the present biennium. The growing overlap of the educational services provided by the State University, the teachers colleges, and the junior colleges is a matter requiring attention. Detailed information on this subject is presented in the more comprehensive educational budget.

THE HIGHWAY BUDGET.

The highway budget, likewise, for the convenience of those particularly interested in highway expenditures, is presented as a unit grouping of proposed expenditures for this purpose for the next biennium. A comprehensive explanation and discussion precedes this separate section.

The total highway budget of $110,383,010 is a fixed charge. The estimated decrease of .656 per cent in the estimated expenditures for the next biennium results solely from a falling off in the revenue. All of the revenue estimated as available has been allocated. Out of this total budget amount of $110,383,010 only $78,860,510 will be spent directly by the State. One-half of the two cent gasoline tax for maintenance and reconstruction (after deducting cost of collection) is apportioned to the counties and spent as the boards of supervisors direct.

The plan of highway expenditures which is presented in the highway section of this budget is part of an orderly program for improvement of the highways of the State. It appears that this plan should not be disturbed except after most thorough and careful investigation showing modification to be desirable. Included in the total highway budget of $110,383,010 is the charge for bond interest and redemption on highway bonds which, for the ensuing biennium, amounts to $8,779,750, and must be met out of the State general fund. The balance of $101,603,260 represents special fund moneys available for highway purposes.

THE TOTAL BUDGET.

The expenditures contemplated by the final approved budget total $265,345,955.38. Of this total $183,051,674.76 represents fixed charges with but $82,294,280.62 subject to executive and current legislative control. The original requests from all State agencies, coming within this controllable portion of the budget, aggregated $101,885,060.20. The final approved budget thus presents a reduction of $19,590,779.58 from such requests.

Following the usual budget procedure, various departments and agencies were asked to send in their requests to the Department of Finance. These requests were studied and consultations and hearings were held under the direction of the then Director of Finance, Senator Lyman M. King. Many of the requests of the various agencies were reduced during these hearings. As a result of these first hearings a tentative budget covering all of the departments, and arbitrarily held within the limits of the estimated revenue, was prepared. This preliminary budget was of great assistance in the preparing of the final budget.

As soon as it could be arranged the formation of the final budget was gotten under way and, under the authority of the Governor-elect, rehearings were held. The assistance of directors of the departments, and the heads of the various institutions, as well as that of other State officials and employees, was called upon.

These hearings were full and complete and were held with the heads of every department, division, and service. In addition, the new directors of the departments of the State were called in and the program of proposed expenditures discussed.

The total recommended expenditures for the next biennium, amounting to $265,345,955.38, show an increase of but 3.992 per cent over the present biennium. The total amount of the increase is $10,186,121.10, which is made up of $9,692,428.20 from the general fund and of only $493,692.90 from the special funds. Of the total increase, $4,608,014.86, or 45.24 per cent, is an increase in fixed charges, which can not be avoided under the present law, and $5,578,106.24, or 54.76 per cent, can be attributed to increases in the controllable expenditures of the State government. The total budget increase represents the smallest percentage of increase for any period since the Budget Law was enacted. Moreover, this budget has been so prepared and such full consideration given to all of the departments, institutions and divisions of the State service that it is felt that the actual expenditures of the next biennium can be held closer to the total of the budget, as recommended, than for any other period. The amount of the increase in money in the proposed expenditures for the ensuing biennium is far less than the average for the past 14 years.

PERMANENT IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.

In considering the permanent improvement program, the ten-year building program presented in the budget for the eighty-first and eighty-second fiscal years was carefully reviewed. Adjustments and amendments thereto were made after discussing every request with the head of the institution or department concerned and after consultation with the State Architect and members of his staff. As a result of these hearings and conferences, a satisfactory understanding has been reached with those charged with the administration of the various services of the State.

With this procedure we were able to reduce materially the amounts which were originally estimated as being necessary in the next biennium to carry on the services of the State. The splendid cooperation of the State administrators in recognizing the fact that the rate of increase in income of the State has been temporarily reduced, due to the economic depression, and their sincere endeavor to assist in meeting these conditions has been gratifying indeed.

PER CAPITA COST OF STATE GOVERNMENT REDUCED.

Translated into per capita figures, we find that the total estimated and recommended expenditures in the budget for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years amount to $43.48 per capita. This is $1.47 lower than the actual and estimated expenditures for the present biennium and is $7.40 lower than would have been the case had the same trend of increasing per capita cost of State government been continued in the next biennium. It appears that the increase in the cost of State government, which has been continuous since the World War, has been arrested and that the curve of mounting cost can be flattened out, and with careful financial administration, it possibly can be turned the other way into a decreasing per capita cost. It is appreciated that the per capita figure of $44.95 for the eighty-first and eighty-second fiscal years represents actual and estimated expenditures and that the reduction shown for this budget is based solely on estimates and recommendations. Per capita expenditures undoubtedly will be increased somewhat by special appropriations. However, it should be made clear that special appropriations will result in continuing the increasing per capita cost unless such appropriations are held to the very minimum. In view of the falling off of the increase in the State's revenue and the decreased ability of the taxpayer to pay taxes, it does not appear to be wise to continue the upward trend in per capita expenditures of the State government.

STATE REVENUES SPENT BY LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Frequently an erroneous impression is held concerning the cost of State Government. The cost of operating the State and providing its many services is, in effect, overstated. This is due to the fact that a large part of the funds included in the State budget and derived from State revenues represents merely agency transactions by the State for some local government. Of the total budget of $265,345,955.38, for the ensuing biennium, $102,778,620.68, or 38.7 per cent, represents such items. Of necessity, since State revenues are being disbursed, the budget must include funds which the State does not actually expend, but which are apportioned under provisions of the law to the counties and local political subdivisions. These items, generally set aside by law, include the funds apportioned to the counties out of the gasoline tax and other sources of highway revenue, the apportionment for schools, including elementary schools, high schools and junior colleges, apportionment for tuberculosis subsidies, flood control, orphan aid, aid to the aged and the blind, and other minor items. These agency transaction items have been materially increased within recent years. The last Legislature, acting under the provisions of a constitutional amendment, provided for aid to the aged and the blind.

In order to make clear the relative amounts of such agency transactions, a table comparing such expenditures with those for State government operations is given below. A complete analysis appears on the "Detailed Summary of Expenditures" in the body of the budget.

There will be distributed to the counties, to be disbursed by them, 71 per cent of the educational budget. Approximately two-sevenths of the total highway budget will be distributed to the counties for expenditure as the supervisors direct. Although the increase in the State funds apportioned to counties for agency transactions amounted to approximately $10,000,000 more in the eight-first and eighty-second years than in the seventy-ninth and eightieth years, and the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years show substantially the same amount, there has been no real reduction in local taxation. In other words, State taxes have been increased materially through this obligation to apportion money to local government, but, nevertheless, local government, except in a few instances, has failed to show material tax reductions.

THE GENERAL FUND SURPLUS.

With the falling off in the rate of increase in State revenues the condition of the general fund surplus becomes of increasing importance. A careful study has been made to determine the exact condition of this general fund surplus at the beginning of the biennium, June 30, 1931. Making use of all the data which it was possible to secure from official and private sources, and checking probable revenues from each source independently, it has been estimated that there will be at the beginning of the biennium, a surplus of $30,165,340.55 in the general fund. It should be understood that this surplus does not represent actual cash now in the treasury, but is a surplus consisting of cash on hand and the difference between obligations and revenues which will accrue as of June 30, 1931. These estimates have been checked by the State Controller and he arrives at a figure approximately $1,000,000 less.

REDUCTION IN GENERAL FUND SURPLUS AND ESTIMATED CONDITION AT JUNE 30, 1933.

With the general fund surplus as of June 30, 1931, estimated at $30,165,340.55, the State is faced with a condition of an exceptional nature in the matter of finances. The revenues of the State are not showing the continued rate of increase which has been experienced in the past. In fact, the average rate of increase in State revenues flowing into the general fund during the history of the executive budget, has been 10.87 per cent per biennium, while it is estimated that the revenues for the next biennium accruing to the general fund will show only a 3.06 per cent increase. This is due to the falling off in business which directly affects the revenue of the State; for these revenues are derived in the major amounts from gross receipts tax on public service corporations, gross premium tax on insurance companies, franchise tax on general corporations measured by net income, and an inheritance tax levied on the estates of decedents.

In addition to the decreases due to falling off in business, the people of the State of California saw fit to reduce the gross receipts tax on electric street railways from 5½ per cent to 4½ per cent. It is estimated that this reduction will cause a decrease of $1,100,000 in the revenues for the next biennium. Major reductions in the rate charged consumers for gas in the Los Angeles area, as made by the Railroad Commission, will likewise cause a material decrease in the gross income, and at the same time decrease the tax from this source approximately $300,000 for the biennium. In short, in place of enjoying a normal increase of approximately 11 per cent in revenues, the State will probably not secure more than a 3 per cent increase.

It is estimated that the total revenues accruing to the general fund for the ensuing biennium will be $136,369,673, while the estimated and proposed expenditures for the same period, as contemplated in the budget, will total $144,809,754.96. The proposed budget of expenditures for the next biennium therefore, is $8,440,081.96 more than the amount of the estimated revenues which will accrue to the general fund under existing statutes. A sincere endeavor has been made to hold the increase of the budget to the lowest possible amount consistent with a continuation of the service of government which the people are accustomed to receive, and to provide normal increases in these services and in salaries of State employees. Likewise, necessary permanent improvements needed to take care of normal expansion and to keep the service of the State on a progressive plane have been recommended.

If revenues had increased at a normal rate, undoubtedly the expenditures, as recommended in the budget, could have been kept well within the estimated revenue. Due to unusual conditions this was not possible and it appears, therefore, necessary to make use of approximately $8,450,000 from the surplus. Under these conditions the general fund surplus at the close of the next biennium, June 30, 1933, will be reduced by this amount.

It appears that the only justification for building up a surplus in the State treasury over and beyond what is necessary to finance the State adequately during lean periods between tax collections, and to provide for emergencies, is for the purpose of taking care of such unusual conditions as now exist. The general fund surplus in the treasury may well be considered in the nature of a surge chamber regulating the flow of revenue to take care of the services of the State. In time of prosperity the level of this fund is raised. In time of economic stringency it is drawn upon to take care of the normal needs of the State. The State, like a wise business man, should take steps to conserve its resources in the time of prosperity so that funds will be available in the time of reduced prosperity to carry over the lean period.

In making the budget this thought has been kept in mind, and not only has the necessity of operating the State for two years, or the ensuing biennium, been considered; but, likewise, the necessity of operating the State for a four-year period has been before us. There is ample evidence to indicate that not only can the State be operated, giving the same services and allowing for normal expansion, for the next two years, but this can be extended to four years without depleting the surplus to a danger point. This prediction is made possible through a careful analysis of economic conditions at present and estimating future growth. It is believed that the citizens of California can be optimistic and that economic recovery is not far distant. With this economic recovery, the flow of revenues into the State treasury will again become normal and the surplus can be replenished so that it will be in readiness again to take care of expenses of the State at a time when revenues may suffer the condition of today and show less than normal rates of increase.

So that there may be available a clear understanding of the sources of revenue to the State treasury, a simple chart indicating these sources is shown among the tables immediately following the text of this message.

In preparing this budget the economic condition of the people of the State, particularly as it is reflected in the decrease in commodity prices which farmers and merchants receive for their goods, and the unusual amount of unemployment, have been considered. An endeavor has been made to provide for capital outlay expenditures for necessary and desirable public improvements such as highways, buildings at our institutions, at our State university, and teachers colleges, and in other departments of the State, as a means of helping to relieve unemployment, increase markets for our goods, and to promote general prosperity. With this in view, a capital outlay program has been continued, which, from the general fund alone, requires an amount almost equal to the amount of the surplus which must be used for the next biennium. It might have been possible to materially curtail this capital outlay program, but this would have been not only a backward step in taking care of the State's services, but it would have done nothing to relieve unemployment, and in fact would probably have increased it. The opposite course has been taken, and not only has the program of capital outlay been provided for with this purpose in view, but I am recommending to you that you see fit to make the money available for capital outlay as soon as possible, so that the construction can be put under way without delay and actual relief for unemployment can be instituted immediately.

COMPARATIVE TABLES OF EXPENDITURES

The administrative budget came into being as a result of the adoption of a constitutional amendment by vote of the people in 1922. The entire experience of the State of California under the administrative budget system only covers a span of seven years. It seems well to set forth in similar form comparisons covering the entire experience under the budget system and add to these the sums recommended in this budget. Such figures segregated into sections in accordance with the plan of the budget are presented among the tables following this message. In the same group, there is presented a graph which further visualizes the trend of State expenditures from the special and general funds, as compared with the trends of recessions and of population growth. A study of these tables and the charts amplifying them will reveal that the upward trend in the cost of State government has been arrested, and the actual increases in the budget for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years over prior fiscal years are very much smaller than have been experienced since the budget bill was enacted. In the general budget the ratio of the increase has been reduced from 16.94 per cent in 1925-1927 to 7.22 per cent for 1931-1933. The total budget ratio of increase has been reduced from 23.30 per cent in 1925-1927 to 3.98 per cent for 1931-1933. These reductions have been made possible through a most careful consideration of all proposed expenditures and yet there have been included many items in this budget which will not recur in the next biennium. It is appreciated that special appropriation bills passed by the Legislature may increase these percentages, but it is believed that the normal increase in the services of the State have been taken care of in the budget as recommended.

Your attention is directed to the increasing per capita expenditures chargeable to the general fund in all sections of the budget for each biennium from the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth fiscal years to the eighty-first and eighty-second, as shown in the comparative statement of expenditures from the general fund. This increase in per capita expenditures continues through the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years in the educational budget. However, it should be noted that the increase is at a much reduced rate for the biennium of this budget, being reduced to 13 cents per capita for these two years. In the case of the highway budget a per capita increase is shown for the seventy-seventh and seventy-eighth fiscal years over the previous biennium. Subsequently, a continuous decrease in the per capita expenditure has been shown, the smallest per capita expenditure of $1.44 being for the biennium of this budget. Considering the per capita expenditures for the total budget, the increase was continuous to and including the eighty-first and eighty-second fiscal years, increasing from $19.52 in the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth years to $23.80 in the eighty-first and eighty-second. The per capita expenditure for the total general fund budget for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years is estimated at $23.73. Had the same rate of increase prevailed as was experienced from the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth fiscal years to the eighty-first and eighty-second, the per capita expenditure for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth would have been $25.23, or $1.50 more for each person in the State than under this budget.

The next table presents a comparative statement of the total biennial expenditures from all funds showing the total expenditures per capita for the ten-year period, July 1, 1923, to June 30, 1933. This table is divided into the three sections of the budget with grand totals. The general budget shows a continuous increase from the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth fiscal years to the eighty-first and eighty-second, increasing from $8.41 to $11.25 per capita during this period. For the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years the per capita expenditure for the general budget is estimated at $11.23, thus showing a slight decrease. The educational budget, on the other hand, shows a continuous increase for the entire period from $11.62 per capita for the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth fiscal years to $14.16 for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth. The increase, however, for the ensuing biennium, or that of this budget, was only 3 cents. The highway budget shows a continuous increase from $10.22 per capita for the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth fiscal years to $19.57 for the eighty-first and eighty-second, and for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth a very material reduction to $18.09 is predicted. Summing this up in a total budget which shows actual expenditures for the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth to the seventy-ninth and eightieth, inclusive, and estimated and actual for the eighty-first and eighty-second, and the budget estimates and recommendations for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth, the per capita expenditures experienced a continuous increase from $30.26 for the seventy-fifth and seventy-sixth fiscal years to $44.95 for the eighty-first and eighty-second. However, the per capita expenditures based upon the budget recommendations for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth are estimated at $43.48, a decrease of $1.47 per capita. This is a very favorable sign, and if this budget can be maintained without any material increase due to enactment of special appropriation measures, governmental operations of the State of California, in so far as the State government is concerned, will experience their first reduction in per capita costs in the decade; the upward trend of State government costs will have been arrested, and it is hoped that relief from the increasing burden of taxation actually can be secured. The real meaning of this decrease can best be realized by considering that if a rate of increase had prevailed for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years equal to the average rate experienced in the four preceding bienniums, the per capita expenditures would have been $50.88, or an increase of $5.93. If the example of reducing the cost of government set up by the State in this budget will be emulated by the counties and cities and other political subdivisions of California, the taxpayers will enjoy real relief and much will be done to promote contentment and business prosperity.

The two tables mentioned above, with accompanying charts, immediately follow the text of this message and present comparisons of the per capita expenditures from the general fund and from all funds for the ten-year period, July 1, 1923, to June 30, 1933.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS.

As previously indicated the proposed appropriations for permanent improvements necessary to take care of the normal expansion of the State services and to relieve congested conditions in our institutions, teachers colleges, State university, and other divisions, have been recommended. The total amount allowed from the general fund for permanent improvements is $7,706,455. This amount should be adequate to take care of all normal expansion, and also to do much toward relieving crowded conditions as well as providing for other desirable expansion in many places. In the tabulation on page XX a comparative statement is given showing the actual and proposed appropriations from the general fund for permanent improvements from the seventy-fifth to the eighty-fourth fiscal years, inclusive, or from July 1, 1923, to June 30, 1933. It should be noted that the amounts of this capital outlay program payable from the general fund are approximately equal to the amount by which the general fund expenditures will exceed the estimated revenues, and by which the general fund surplus will be reduced to meet this budget. Rather than curtail the State's capital outlay and hold the budget within estimated revenues, it has been determined not only to make recommendations for these capital outlays, but also to recommend that these be made available at the earliest possible moment for the dual purpose of: first, relieving the congestion and meeting the present requirements for housing facilities at the various institutions and schools; and secondly, to provide through this building program a large measure of relief for unemployment. We have already made inquiry and adequate plans with the Division of Architecture of the Department of Public Works for the scheduling of these capital outlay projects so that there may be no stopping of the public works program of the State and thereby adding to the problem of unemployment. It is believed that this plan will meet with general approval and that you will facilitate appropriations for this purpose.

In addition to the capital outlay for permanent improvements from the general fund, there is also a considerable amount of capital outlay which will be paid from special funds, the total of which, exclusive of highway construction amounting to $47,500,000, is $1,174,620. The program of expenditures from these funds will also be expedited where practicable.

In considering capital outlay for permanent improvements a sincere endeavor has been made to fit recommended improvements into the ten-year building program as set up in the budget for the eighty-first and eighty-second fiscal years. It has been found, however, in many instances that this building program was not based on complete information. Material modifications had to be made which clearly demonstrate that further study and extension of the long-time building program is desirable. A further survey of the present physical plants, and determination of ultimate size of the institutions and schools concerned should be undertaken. Allowance should be made for future growth in the present institutions, and the desirability and effect of the establishment of new institutions to meet growing needs should be considered. Such a study for proper revision of the long-time building program will be made during the coming biennium. For this reason the section in the last budget presenting a ten-year building program has not been repeated in this budget. It is manifestly impossible to present in this budget a building program which would represent the well considered thought of this administration.

SUMMARY OF ALL EXPENDITURES.

A tabulation summarizing all the expenditures for every purpose for each biennium of the last ten years is presented. Actual expenditures are given for each biennium from the seventy-fifth to the eightieth fiscal years, inclusive, the actual and estimated for the eighty-first and eighty-second, and the estimated and recommended expenditures for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth.

CONCLUSION.

I have stated in several places elsewhere in this message that the budget presented for your consideration has been prepared with due regard to the reduced ability of the State to support the services of government, which condition has been brought about by the decreasing rate of increase in revenues occasioned by the world-wide economic depression. At the same time I have emphasized that the recommended budget amounts have been determined with the idea of continuing the normal service of the State efficiently and reasonably, allowing for normal expansion of service and normal increases in salaries, and, as likewise provided, for essential permanent improvements necessary to meet expansion and take care of our physical needs. Moreover, in preparing this budget, we have not been unmindful of the fact that there is a condition of unemployment, and that anything that can be done which is economically sound to help relieve this unemployment, and at the same time provide for the normal needs of the State, should be done. This budget has not been made with the sole purpose of holding the budget to a predetermined amount under the guise of economy. It is a budget which demonstrates in its reduced rate of increase in expenditures that an economic business plan of government is proposed without being niggardly or unconscious of the fact that the service of the State government must increase to meet increasing demands. Under this budget the State may enjoy progressive, efficient, businesslike, and humanitarian administration of its affairs.

Respectfully submitted.

JAMES ROLPH, JR., Governor of California.

January 9, 1931.

*Honorable James Rolph, Jr.,
Governor of California,
Sacramento, California.*

YOUR EXCELLENCY: Herewith is submitted the State Budget for the eighty-third and eighty-fourth fiscal years commencing July 1, 1931, and ending June 30, 1933. This budget includes a careful estimate of revenues and a detailed plan of recommended expenditures for the biennium. The budget has been prepared at your direction under authority of section 34 of article IV of the State constitution.

The completeness and thoroughness of this budget has been made possible through the preliminary work done by the retiring Director of Finance, Lyman M. King, under instructions from Governor C. C. Young, and the splendid cooperation given us by the various officers of the State and in particular the devotion and industry of the staff of the Department of Finance.

Respectfully submitted.

ROLLAND A VANDEGRIFT.

Director of Finance and Chief of the Division of Budgets and Accounts.

Joint and Concurrent Resolutions and Constitutional Amendments.

22. Joint and concurrent resolutions and constitutional amendments shall be treated the same as bills; provided, that they shall have but one reading, which reading shall occur after they have been reported by committee.

Constitutional amendments, when introduced, shall be referred to the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, and when reported back by the committee shall, with its recommendations, be re-referred to the standing committee considering the subject dealt with in such constitutional amendments.

24. The Committee on Rules shall constitute a standing committee on introduction of bills to serve after the constitutional recess. All motions for leave to introduce bills after the constitutional recess shall be sent to the desk in writing, under the order of "Introduction of Bills." The motion shall give the title of the bill and shall be accompanied by the bill. The bill shall thereupon be referred to the Committee on Introduction of Bills.

1. The Committee of the Whole Senate.
2. A Standing Committee.
3. A Select Committee.

Reference with Special Instructions.

27. Adoption of amendments to any bill by the Senate prior to third reading, other than by roll call, shall not preclude subsequent consideration in committee or on the third reading of the bill, of such amendments or any part thereof, by the Senate.

Reference of Assembly Bills.

28. When an Assembly bill has been received by the Senate, with a message announcing that it has passed the Assembly, such bill shall be read the first time and be referred by the President to a standing committee: provided, however, that when an Assembly bill is received, the text of which is stated by a member to be identical with that of a Senate bill which has already been considered and reported by a standing committee of the Senate, such Assembly bill shall be referred to the Committee on Engrossment, Enrollment and Printing for comparison, which committee shall report without delay whether or not such bill is identical with the Senate bill. If reported identical, such Assembly bill shall be substituted for the Senate bill, shall take its place on the second reading file and be considered as having received the same committee recommendation as the Senate bill; provided, that the fact that the bills are identical shall be entered in the Journal. Such Senate bill shall thereupon be placed upon the file of unfinished business.

Reference of Appropriation Bills.

29. All bills appropriating money from any fund shall be referred to the Committee on Finance before being read the second time. Concurrent resolutions for adjournment sine die shall in all cases whether originating in the Senate or coming from the Assembly be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Notice to Author of Bill.

30. The chairman or clerk of each committee of the Senate shall notify the author of any bill or resolution pending before such committee of the hour and place of hearing or acting upon such bill or proceeding.

Committee Amendments to Bills.

31. When amendments to a bill are reported by a committee, offered from the floor or submitted by a Special Committee of One, such amendments shall be submitted in triplicate, two copies to go to the Secretary of the Senate and one to the Minute Clerk.

Reports of Committees.

32. All committees shall act upon bills referred to them as soon as practicable, and when acted upon each bill shall be reported back to the Senate forthwith, and the chairman of each committee is charged with the observance of this rule; provided, that the Senate may at any time, by a majority vote, recall a bill from any committee.

ORDER OF CONSIDERING BILLS.

Order of Making Files.

33. When bills are reported from committees they shall be placed upon the General File, to be kept by the Secretary as follows: All bills when reported to the Senate by the committee shall be placed at the foot of the second-reading file, in the order in which the reports are made, and after the second reading they shall be placed at the foot of the third-reading file, in the order of reading, and precedence shall be given in the consideration of bills in the following order: Second-reading file and third-reading file, unless otherwise ordered by unanimous consent or by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. The bills upon third reading shall be considered in the order in which they appear upon the file, unless otherwise ordered by unanimous consent or by vote of majority of the members present; such vote to be taken by roll call; provided, that if a bill is passed on file for any reason, other than absence of the author by leave of the Senate, note of the fact shall be made in the General File, and when passed on file a second time, the bill shall be ordered at the foot of the file, and notice of the fact of the bill having been passed on file prior to the order placing it at the foot of the file shall be omitted from the General File.

The General File.

34. The General File shall be the special order for each day between such hours as the Senate may determine, unless sooner disposed of; but no bill shall lose its place upon the file by expiration of the time or by adjournment of the Senate while it is under consideration.

Special Order.

35. Any subject may, by vote of a majority of those voting, be made a special order, and when the time fixed for its consideration arrives, the presiding officer shall lay it before the Senate.

Three Readings of Bills.

36. Every bill shall be read on three several days previous to its passage (unless in case of urgency, two-thirds of the membership of the Senate in which it is being considered shall by vote of the ayes and noes dispense with this provision).

Ordering Bills to Third Reading.

37. After being read the second time bills shall be ordered by the President to third reading (or, in the case of Senate Bills, to engrossment and third reading). When any member makes objection to any bill thus being ordered to third reading, the final question for such bill shall be "Shall the bill be ordered to third reading?"

Bills Considered During Last Seven Days.

38. No Senate bill shall be passed by the Senate within seven days of the time set for adjournment sine die of the two houses of the Legislature unless permission to vote on such a bill be granted by a three-fourths vote of the entire membership of the Senate, voting by roll call.

QUESTIONS AND MOTIONS.

Precedence of Motions During Debate.

39. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received but the following privileged questions, which shall have precedence in the following order:

1. To adjourn.
2. For a call of the Senate.
3. To lay on the table.
4. To postpone to a day certain.
5. To commit.
6. To amend.
7. To postpone indefinitely.

Provided, however, that during a call of the Senate, it may consider and transact any matter or business that the Senators then present shall unanimously decide to consider, but no call of the Senate shall be had, during a call of the Senate, on any matter so taken up or considered while the Senate is under call. When a call of the Senate is ordered, pending the completion of a roll call, the pending roll call shall become unfinished business, the consideration of which shall be continued until further proceedings under the call of the Senate are dispensed with, when it will forthwith become the order of business before the Senate.

Amendment or Division of Question.

40. An amendment may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill. When an amendment proposed to any pending measure shall be laid on the table, it shall not carry with it or prejudice such measure.

If the question in debate contains several propositions, any Senator may have the same divided; except a motion to strike out and insert shall not be divided. The rejection of a motion to strike out and insert one proposition shall not prevent a motion to strike out and insert a different proposition, nor shall it prevent a motion to simply strike out, nor shall the rejection of a motion to strike out prevent a motion to strike out and insert; but pending a motion to strike out and insert, the part to be stricken out and the part to be inserted shall each be regarded, for the purpose of amendment, as a question. Motions to amend the part to be stricken out shall have precedence.

Restrictions as to Amendments.

41. A substitute or amendment must relate to the same subject as the original bill, resolution or constitutional amendment under consideration.

Vote Required for Amendments.

42. A constitutional amendment or bill requiring a vote of two-thirds of the members elected to the Senate for final adoption or passage may be amended by a majority of those voting.

PROCEDURE OF DEBATE.

Seconding and Announcement of Motion.

43. No motion shall be debated until the same be seconded and distinctly announced by the President; and it shall be reduced to writing if desired by the President or any Senator, and read by the Secretary, before the same shall be debated.

Regulations as to Speaking.

44. 1. When a Senator desires to address the Senate, he shall rise in his place, address the President, and when recognized he shall proceed to speak.

2. No Senator shall speak more than twice in any one debate on the same day, and at the same stage of the bill, without leave; and Senators who have once spoken shall not again be entitled to the floor (except for explanation) so long as any Senator who has not spoken desires to speak.

3. No Senator shall be interrupted when speaking, and no question shall be asked him except those through the presiding officer.

4. The author of a bill, motion, or resolution shall have the privilege of closing the debate.

Securing of the Floor.

45. When two or more Senators arise at the same time to address the Senate, the presiding officer shall designate the Senator who is entitled to the floor.

Order in Debate.

46. When a Senator shall be called to order he shall sit down until the President shall have determined whether he is in order or not; and every question of order shall be decided by the President, subject to an appeal to the Senate by any Senator. If a Senator be called to order for words spoken, the objectionable language shall immediately be taken down in writing by the Secretary of the Senate.

The Previous Question.

47. The previous question shall be put in the following form: "Shall the question be now put?" It shall be admitted only when demanded by a majority of the Senators present upon division; and its effect shall be to put an end to all debate except that the author of the bill or the amendments shall have the right to close, and the question under discussion shall thereupon be immediately put to a vote. On a motion for the previous question prior to a vote being taken by the Senate, a call of the Senate shall be in order.

Executive Session.

48. When a motion is adopted to close the doors of the Senate, on the discussion of any business which may, in the opinion of the Senate, require an executive session, the President shall require all persons, except the Senators, President of the Senate, Secretary, Minute Clerk, and Sergeant-at-Arms, to withdraw, and during the discussion of said business the doors shall remain closed. Every Senator and officer present shall keep secret all matters and proceedings concerning which secrecy shall be enjoined by order of the Senate.

VOTING BY SENATE.

Calling Ayes and Noes.

49. When the ayes and noes shall be called for by three members present, every member within the bar of the Senate at the time the question was put shall declare openly, and without debate, assent or dissent to the question. In taking the ayes and noes, and upon call of the Senate, the names of the Senators shall be taken alphabetically. When the ayes and noes shall be taken upon any question in pursuance of this rule, no Senator shall be permitted, under any circumstances whatever, to vote after the announcement of the vote by the presiding officer.

Excused from Voting.

50. When a Senator declines to vote on a call of his name he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and having assigned them, the presiding officer shall submit the question to the Senate: "Shall the Senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate. And these proceedings shall be had after the roll call and before the result is announced, and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement.

Reconsideration of Vote.

51. On the day succeeding that on which a final vote on any bill, concurrent or joint resolution, or constitutional amendment has been taken, said vote may be reconsidered on motion of any Senator; provided, notice of intention to move such reconsideration shall have been given on the day on which such final vote was taken, by a Senator voting with the prevailing side; and it shall not be in order to reconsider on the day on which such final vote was taken. Said motion for reconsideration shall have precedence over every other motion, except a motion to adjourn. It shall require twenty-one votes to carry any motion to reconsider the vote by which any bill, concurrent or joint resolution, has been passed or defeated, fourteen votes to reconsider the vote by which any constitutional amendment has been passed, and twenty-seven votes to carry any motion to reconsider the vote by which any constitutional amendment has been defeated. Notice of reconsideration of the vote by which a Senate bill was passed, or a Senate joint resolution, Senate concurrent resolution or Senate constitutional amendment adopted, shall not be in order on or after the eighth day preceding the last day of the session. No notice of reconsideration shall be in order on the day preceding the last day of the session.

When Bill Is Held for Reconsideration.

52. If a Senator gives notice that he intends to move a reconsideration, the Secretary shall not transmit the bill, concurrent or joint resolution, or constitutional amendment to the Assembly till the reconsideration is disposed of, or the time for moving the same has expired, unless the bill or resolution has already been transmitted to the Assembly.

When a Bill Is Recalled for Reconsideration.

53. When a bill, resolution, amendment, order or message upon which a vote has been taken shall have gone out of the possession of the Senate and been communicated to the Assembly, a motion to reconsider shall be preceded by a motion to request the Assembly to return the same, which last-named motion shall be acted upon immediately and without debate, and if determined in the negative shall be a final disposition of the motion to reconsider.

Debate on Motion to Reconsider.

54. A Senator, after a notice to reconsider is given, as provided in Rule 53, shall, at the reconsideration thereof, present the main question in his argument thereon, and the same shall be debated by the Senate, provided that the subject matter is debatable, and the vote on reconsideration shall be on the merits of the main question.

MESSAGES AND OTHER PAPERS.

Messengers from the Governor.

55. Messengers from the Governor may be introduced at any stage of business except while a question is being put, while the ayes and noes are being called, while ballots are being counted, or while a Senator is addressing the Senate.

A less number than a quorum of the Senate is hereby authorized to send the Sergeant-at-Arms, or any other person, for any and all absent Senators at the expense of such absent Senators, respectively, unless such excuse for nonattendance as shall be made to the Senate, when a quorum is convened, shall be judged sufficient, and in that case the expense shall be paid out of the Contingent Fund of the Senate; and this rule shall apply as well to the first convention of the Senate, at the legal time of meeting, as to each day of the session after the hour has arrived to which the Senate stood adjourned. The President or Acting President of the Senate, or less than a quorum present, shall have the power to issue process directly to the Sergeant-at-Arms, or to any other person, to compel the attendance of Senators absent without leave. Any Senator who shall refuse to obey such process unless sick or unable to attend, shall be deemed guilty of contempt of the Senate, and the Sergeant-at-Arms, or any other person, to whom such process may be directed, shall have power to use such force as may be necessary to compel the attendance of such absent Senator, and for this purpose he may command the force of the county, or of any county in the State.

STATEMENT BY SENATOR JONES.

The following statement was received, and, on motion of Senator Jones, ordered printed in the Journal:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE: Yesterday there was placed upon our desks the report of the State Narcotic Committee, of which Senator Sanborn Young is chairman.

In the pressure of legislative work these reports do not always receive the attention that they merit. I want to take this occasion therefore to say a word about this report. It presents the most up-to-the-minute consideration of the narcotic problem of any report ever issued in the United States. It is also one of the most thorough and comprehensive reports on the subject, excepting only the reports of Dr. Carleton Simon, deputy police commissioner of New York City.

It has been primarily through the efforts of Senator Young, that California in the sessions of 1925, 1927 and 1929, has enacted some of the most effective narcotic legislation in the country, so recognized by the authorities at Washington. This legislation has placed California at the head of all the states in the Union in dealing with the narcotic problem.

Senator Young's interest in the narcotic problem arose in an accidental way. In the year 1922 he was chairman of the public morals committee of the grand jury of Santa Clara County. With his usual thorough-going methods he investigated conditions in the Santa Clara County jail, and found that 71 out of the 103 prisoners there confined were narcotic addicts. This revelation led him to a study of the causes of addiction, and an inquiry into the reasons for our ineffective enforcement. His study led to the formulation of the policy which the State has since adopted of singling out the peddlers and those who profit by the illegal sale of narcotics for severe penalties, as distinguished from the unfortunate victims. It also led to the establishment of a separate State Narcotic Hospital.

During the past eight years Senator Young has labored untiringly on this problem, and has made trips to Washington, D. C., and to eastern states, as well as innumerable trips throughout California, many of them at his own personal expense.

I feel that recognition of Senator Young's tireless and disinterested service should be given, especially at this time when under the reapportionment amendment his district goes out of existence after this session. I trust, however, that his public service and his interest in this problem may be continued in some appropriate capacity. The problem is a world-wide one. Narcotic addiction is one of the most terrible scourges of the race. England's own statesmen have denounced her opium war against China as a blot upon her history. International cooperation and effort is necessary in stopping the production of narcotics at the source. These international efforts center in the conference in Geneva. The President of the United States could look far before finding an expert better qualified or an emissary more competent to represent this country than our own colleague right here in the California State Senate—Sanborn Young.

URGENCY CLAUSE.

SEC. 20. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, and shall take effect immediately.

The facts constituting such urgency are as follows: The Palo Verde irrigation district is in dire distress financially. The lands therein have become greatly in arrears in the payment of taxes, and consequently the bonds of the Palo Verde irrigation district, of the Palo Verde drainage district and of the Palo Verde joint levee district of Riverside and Imperial counties, California, are delinquent and the operation and maintenance funds are exhausted. If the delinquent property in said district is not promptly returned to farming, and if the taxes, tolls and charges are not promptly paid, the payment of outstanding bond obligations can not be made, the operation and maintenance of the levees, drains and irrigation system can not be kept up, and a great menace and danger to life, health and property will shortly exist. The amendments to said act herein contained are necessary to accomplish the return to farming of said delinquent properties and to secure the payment of taxes, tolls and charges, and thereby to prevent the destruction of life, health and property.

URGENCY CLAUSE.

SEC. 4. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, and shall take effect immediately. The following is a statement of the facts constituting such urgency: Many school districts within the State of California are without sufficient money with which to purchase school lots, for building or purchasing one or more school buildings or making alterations or additions to same or restoring or rebuilding school buildings damaged, injured or destroyed by fire or other public calamity, for insuring school buildings, for supplying school buildings with furniture or necessary apparatus, for improving school grounds, for liquidating any indebtedness already incurred for said purposes or refunding any valid outstanding indebtedness of such district evidenced by bonds or warrants thereof. Many school districts have within the last two years voted bonds for raising money for such purposes and the proceedings in many of such bond elections were irregular but complying with all the provisions of this act, and by reason of such minor irregularities and defects in such proceedings, not jurisdictional, such bonds cannot be sold. The population of many of these districts has increased so rapidly that the present school facilities of such districts are unable to meet the needs of the great increase of pupils in such districts and it is necessary and urgent that such bonds and the proceedings thereunder be validated at an early date in order that said school buildings, lots, equipment and facilities may be purchased or built before the opening of the next school year which in many instances would be impossible if this act did not go into effect immediately but was required to await until 90 days after adjournment of this Legislature.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE.
SACRAMENTO, January, 14, 1931.

To the Members of the Senate of the State of California.

GREETING: The Assembly will transmit to you today twenty-nine Assembly Bills numbered 78 to 106 making appropriations for major construction and equipment at the various State hospitals, teachers colleges, correctional schools, homes for feeble-minded, and other agencies, with a section in each bill declaring the measure to be one of urgency, and providing that the several acts shall take effect immediately.

These bills were given immediate consideration by the Assembly at my request in order that the appropriations provided in the respective bills may be made available at the earliest possible moment for the purpose of relieving congestion in housing facilities at the various State institutions, schools, homes, and the like, and also providing, through the building program, which should commence immediately, a large measure of relief for unemployment.

It is my opinion that these bills constitute an emergency within the meaning of article IV, section 34, of the constitution, and I therefore recommend the passage of these bills as urgency measures.

Respectfully submitted.

Bill read second time, considered engrossed, and ordered on file for third reading.

URGENCY CLAUSE.

SEC. 3. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure (necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety) within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, and shall become effective immediately. The following is a statement of the facts constituting such urgency:

Many improvement districts within irrigation districts in the State of California are without funds with which to provide for the acquisition, construction, operation, maintenance and repair of improvements therein for the irrigation and drainage of lands therein. In many such improvement districts there are large acreages of land upon which many people make their homes and which with irrigation will provide large quantities of agricultural products but without irrigation are arid and unproductive. The acquisition, construction, operation, maintenance and repair of improvements provided for in said irrigation district improvement act are needed immediately for the irrigation season of 1931 and, unless the same are provided for immediately, water for irrigation purposes can not be furnished to said lands during the irrigation season of 1931 and such lands will be without water and therefore be rendered unproductive and valueless, necessitating the abandonment of homes. In many such districts, unless the contemplated improvements for the drainage of lands therein are consummated before the irrigation season of 1931, many thousands of acres of land will become alkali, water-logged and swamped and rendered permanently unfit for agricultural purposes because of the rising and high underground water table therein, as well as rendered dangerous to the public health by reason of the marshy and swamped lands created, which will be a breeding place for mosquitoes and malarious insects. Many such improvement districts have been created within irrigation districts for the purpose of rectifying the above conditions which now exist, but, by reason of minor defects in the proceedings for the formation of such districts and other minor irregularities not substantially affecting the rights of property owners within such districts, such districts are unable to proceed with the improvements and are unable to issue or negotiate warrants for the payment thereof, and it is essential that such improvements be made immediately without awaiting the delay of 90 days after the adjournment of this Legislature.

Urgency clause read.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Senator Rochester arose to a question of personal privilege and addressed the Senate as follows:

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 19, 1931.

PERSONAL PRIVILEGE STATEMENT.

Because there appears to be a misapprehension in the public mind in and about Sacramento concerning my proposal to the Governor of a candidate for a municipal court appointment in Los Angeles, I wish to spread this statement upon the Senate Journal.

On Monday, January 12, at about eleven o'clock and fifteen minutes a.m., I suggested the name of an applicant for one of the appointments, to Governor Rolph in his office. Governor Rolph called in one of his secretaries, Mr. Frank Cochran, and directed him to bring in the file upon this applicant. Mr. Cochran stated that the files were not segregated.

The Governor then told Mr. Cochran and myself to arrange a time when we together might go over the files in the matter. This was agreed upon as eight o'clock p.m., Tuesday, January 13.

When I arrived at the Governor's office that night only Mr. William A. Smith, another secretary, was present. Shortly thereafter Mr. Wickersham, Mr. Bevans and Mr. Cole came in, and we conversed until nine o'clock p.m., when Mr. Cochran, unavoidably detained, arrived.

Then, in pursuance of the Governor's directions, we went through the files and segregated them, as numerous persons who were in and out of the office can declare.

The work was finished about eleven o'clock and thirty minutes p.m., at which time I left, leaving Mr. Cochran in possession of all papers.

The next day, Wednesday, January 14, the Governor was disturbed to learn that there was a "leak" in his office on the matter of judicial appointments. It might be of interest to the Governor to learn that that day, January 14, the Los Angeles Herald carried an article from Sacramento on his proposed judicial appointments, including the name of Frank M. Smith, later named as an appointee. There were no papers in any of the files I examined concerning Mr. Smith.

From the above account it will be obvious that the rumor that I "rifled the Governor's files" is a base untruth and an unwarranted falsehood. I hereby defy anyone, the Governor included, to adduce testimony other than that I examined the files in the presence of the Governor's secretaries at the direction of the Governor himself, and pursuant to his request of Monday, January 12.

GEORGE W. ROCHESTER, Senator Thirty-seventh District.

LEAVES OF ABSENCE.

Senator Pedrotti was, on motion of Senator Mixer, granted leave of absence for this day.

Senator Rich was, on motion of Senator Ingels, granted leave of absence for this day.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were offered:

By Senator Jones:

On this day, David Starr Jordan celebrates his eightieth birthday. Coming to California forty years ago to lay the foundations and shape the destiny of the newly founded Stanford University, he has been for four decades an authority in the educational and scientific world.

Not alone as educator and scientist, but as author, poet, "prophet of democracy," and humanitarian he has been a leader in many fields.

His influence has been international. With courage that dared to face popular opinion at one time adverse, he has exposed the frightful cost and wreckage of war, and has labored always for the substitution of reason in the place of force. Today California honors him as its "Grand Old Man," whose beneficent influence, like the warm rays of sunshine, cheers all upon whom it falls; therefore

Resolved, That the Senate of the State of California, with affection for this great Californian, and with pride in his achievements for the welfare of his fellow-men, extends its felicitations to Dr. Jordan upon this day, and wishes for him renewed health and many more happy and useful years.

Resolution read, and on motion of Senator Jones, adopted.

Resolved, That the Controller be and he is hereby directed to draw his warrant on the contingent fund of the Senate in the sum of $200 in favor of the Secretary of the Senate, and the Treasurer is hereby directed to pay the same, the same being for postage for the Senate.

STATEMENT OF ROLLAND A. VANDEGRIFT.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE,
SACRAMENTO, January 19, 1931.

Senator George W. Rochester,
State Capitol, Sacramento, California.

DEAR SENATOR: The following is the information which we have available regarding the claim of the State of California against the United States for reimbursement of costs in connection with the Civil War:

The original amounts expended by the State aggregate $3,020,346.10, of which $2,400,109.71 represents the amount of extra pay and bounties paid by the State to encourage enlistment and re-enlistment. On account of accrued interest paid by the State on bonds which were issued to finance these costs, the claim amounted up to December 31, 1929, to $6,462,145.33.

The State has had attorneys employed constantly to prosecute this claim, beginning in 1880, when an attorney named Mullen was employed. In 1903, an amount of $50,000 was appropriated out of any moneys that might be recovered on this claim to pay for the services of James E. Hale and Thomas M. Nosler. Since no part of the claim has been received by the State, this $50,000 is yet unpaid.

In 1907, under chapter 511, the Governor of the State was authorized to employ Jackson H. Ralston, Frederick L. Siddons and William E. Richardson to continue the prosecution of this claim. In 1929, under chapter 873, the 1907 act was repealed and the Governor was authorized to employ counsel for the further prosecution of this claim. The fees were specified not to exceed 25 per cent of the first million over $200,000, 15 per cent of the second million over $200,000 and 10 per cent on the balance. A contract authorized by this act was duly entered into by Governor C. C. Young, January 9, 1930.

I am informed by a representative of the above mentioned attorneys that out of any compensation received under this contract (with the exception of the $50,000 authorized in the 1903 act) payment is to be made to the attorneys or their heirs for all services rendered in connection with this claim since 1880.

Since the signing of the current contract a great deal of work has been performed by the representative in Washington in research work and the massing of evidence and in preparing a brief of the entire claim for presentation to Congress. Heretofore attempts to recover this amount have failed largely because of incomplete information in support thereof.

During the last year the staff of this department has rendered considerable aid in tracing the interest on this amount through the various old records and through ramifications of refunding of old bonds.

We are informed that this is an auspicious time to bring this claim before Congress. Senators Ashhurst and Waterman, members of the committee to which the same will be referred, have expressed themselves as being in favor of such claims. The last session of Congress passed a similar claim to reimburse the State of Nevada, though the amount was relatively small.

Very truly yours,

ROLLAND A. VANDEGRIFT, Director of Finance.

N.B. It will be noted that under the contract now in force no percentage is to be paid on the first $200,000 recovered, 25 per cent of this amount, $50,000, being already provided for in the appropriation in the 1903 act.

POSTPONEMENT OF CONSIDERATION OF ASSEMBLY JOINT RESOLUTION NUMBER FOUR.

At request of Senator Inman, further consideration of Assembly Joint Resolution No. 4 was ordered postponed, until after the noon recess.

REPORT OF JOINT LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON SEACOAST CONSERVATION.

The following report of Joint Legislative Committee on Seacoast Conservation was received, and on motion of Senator Duval, ordered printed in the Journal.

REPORT OF JOINT LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON SEACOAST CONSERVATION.

(California Legislature, Forty-eighth Session.)

To the Forty-ninth Session of the Legislature of California.

The undersigned respectfully submit to the Legislature a report authorized and provided for by Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 25, approved by both houses of the forty-eighth session (1929) of the Legislature of California. The resolution found on pages 2243 and 2244, Statutes of California, 1929, is as follows:

ASSEMBLY CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NUMBER TWENTY-FIVE.

Chapter Sixty-Eight.

Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 25—Relating to the preservation of the coast line of the State of California and the land and water areas contiguous thereto and authorizing the appointment of a committee for the purpose of study and investigation.

(Filed with Secretary of State, May 15, 1929.)

WHEREAS, One of the most valuable assets of the State of California lies in its coast line along the Pacific Ocean and in the land and water areas contiguous thereto; and

WHEREAS, The factors contributing to this great value are of varied character, including those natural resources and natural features of said land and water areas which are adapted to development in furtherance of navigation, commerce, fisheries, and the production of minerals and oil, and for residential, recreational and scenic purposes; and

WHEREAS, It is desirable that these land and water areas be so developed as to meet the needs of the people of all parts of the State, both now and in the future, in an orderly manner, to the end that all of these natural resources and features may be given due consideration and those interested therein given proper recognition and assistance; and

WHEREAS, Much legislation has been enacted both by the Congress of the United States, the State Legislature and by local political subdivisions of the State relative to such matters and it is desirable that such legislation and future legislation be so correlated as best to accord with and promote the orderly and properly balanced development of this great natural asset of the State; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly, the Senate concurring. That the Department of Natural Resources is hereby requested to make its organization and facilities available for a thorough investigation and study of the subject matter of this resolution under the direction of the committee hereinafter designated and to make available to the committee from time to time as may be convenient to the committee, the results of such investigations; and the other executive branches and offices of the State government, particularly the Department of Finance, the Surveyor General, the Attorney General and the Department of Public Works, are hereby requested to furnish all desirable and practicable assistance to the Department of Natural Resources and to the committee in making this investigation and study; and be it further

Resolved, That there shall be and hereby is created a committee to consist of four members of the Assembly, to be appointed by the Speaker of the Assembly and four members of the Senate to be appointed by the President of the Senate, to effect a thorough investigation and study of the subject matter of this resolution by the executive departments hereinbefore designated; to receive and consider the results of the investigation and study so requested; to make such further study and investigation as to it may seem desirable; to prepare such a compilation of its findings and present such recommendations as it may determine in a report to be submitted to the forty-ninth session of the Legislature during the first week thereof; and to cause such report to be published as a public document not later than November 15, 1930, at the same time submitting a copy of it to the Governor for his use in making such recommendations as he may desire in his biennial message to the Legislature; and be it further

Resolved, That said committee shall proceed to organize by the election of one of its members as chairman and by the election of a secretary and shall proceed to carry out the purposes of this resolution in such a manner as may be determined by said committee; and be it further

Resolved, That said committee is hereby authorized and empowered to do any and all things necessary to make a full and complete investigation of the matters herein referred to, it shall be the duty of all State, county, municipal and political subdivision officers to furnish such reports, books, documents, records, papers and testimony, upon request of said committee as may be pertinent to the purposes herein set forth; and be it further

Resolved, That the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby set apart, reserved and appropriated out of the respective contingent funds of the Senate and Assembly, which may have heretofore or may hereafter be appropriated for the contingent expenses of the Senate and Assembly by this session of the Legislature, said sum to be payable one-half from the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half from the contingent fund of the Assembly, but not exceeding the sum of $5,000 in all, for the purpose of paying the expenses incurred by the joint committee herein designated, under the authority hereof, and for the purposes herein set forth, and said payments shall be disbursed from time to time by Controller's warrants to be drawn against such contingent funds upon the written orders of the chairman of said joint committee herein provided for.

In pursuance of this resolution, the President of the Senate appointed Senator Herbert W. Slater of Santa Rosa, Frank Boggs of San Joaquin County, Senator Nelson Edwards of Orange County, and Senator Walter Duval of Ventura County, and the Speaker of the Assembly appointed Assemblyman Harry L. Parkman of San Mateo County, William B. Hornblower of San Francisco County, George R. Bliss of Santa Barbara County, and William Byrne of Los Angeles County.

Pursuant to the request of Assemblyman William B. Hornblower, the committee was summoned to meet in the office of Mr. Hornblower, in the Hearst Building, San Francisco, at 12 o'clock m., October 5, 1930. Present: Assemblymen Hornblower, Byrne, Bliss and Parkman. Absent: Senators Duval, Edwards, Boggs and Slater.

The committee organized by electing Assemblyman Hornblower chairman, Senator Duval vice chairman, Assemblyman Bliss secretary.

The adjournment was taken subject to the call of the chairman.

The second meeting was held at Los Angeles at 10 o'clock a.m., January 27, in the offices of the State Railroad Commission in the Associated Realty Building. Members present: Assemblymen Hornblower, Byrne, and Bliss; Senators Duval and Edwards. At this meeting opportunity was afforded all interested in the work of the committee to present any facts and make any statement desired. Advantage of this opportunity was taken by many State officials, county and city officials, owners of water front property and others interested in the development of water front property.

This meeting was reported by an official reporter of the State Railroad Commission, and the reporter's transcript is available to any one interested.

The third meeting was held November 7 and 8, 1930. The committee assembled at the Santa Barbara courthouse on November 7 at 9 o'clock a.m. Present: Assemblymen Hornblower, Bliss, Parkman and Senator Duval. The committee proceeded by automobile to the Elwood Tidelands Oil Field, a few miles north of Santa Barbara city, and located along the water front of Santa Barbara County, and then proceeded along the coast southeasterly to Long Beach, Los Angeles County, making frequent stops in Santa Barbara County, Ventura County and Los Angeles County to inspect water front conditions at various points.

A hearing was granted citizens of Los Angeles County and others at Long Beach, at the Pacific Coast Club in that city, on the evening of November 8.

The following morning the committee assembled at the Associated Realty Building. Present: Assemblymen Byrne, Bliss, Hornblower and Parkman; Senators Duval and Edwards. After listening to the remarks of several persons interested in the work of the committee, the committee in executive session conferred with Thos. S. Dabagh of the Legislative Counsel Bureau as to the formulation of several suggested bills.

The fourth meeting of the committee was held in San Francisco at 10 o'clock a.m., November 22, at the courthouse in the civic center in San Francisco. Present: Senators Boggs and Duval, Assemblymen Hornblower, Parkman and Bliss. Further consideration was given to the drafting of legislation.

The fifth meeting was held in the State Capitol building at Sacramento December 17, 1930. Further progress was made on the drafting of legislation and the preparation of the report of the committee.

Other meetings were held after the convening of the forty-ninth session of the Legislature and the findings and recommendations of the committee adopted and submitted in this report.

We find that the State of California has, in its more than 1200 miles of coast line, one of its major assets. This asset is rapidly increasing in value. As the population of our State grows this value will continue to increase.

The beaches of California may be classified, so far as their ownership is concerned, in two ways—first, the lands below the mean high tide line, and second, those above this line. The lands below the mean high tide line are the property of the State of California, which holds such lands in trust for its people. The lands above the mean high tide line are almost universally the property of private owners and not of the State.

The lands along the coast, both above and below the mean high tide line, have values to the State and its people for various purposes. These may be summarized as follows:

1. For use in connection with navigation.
2. For use in connection with fishing.
3. Recreation, such as bathing, boating, pleasure piers and other amusements.
4. Scenic.
5. For use in connection with highways, as for example, in cases where roads or highways cross tidelands or follow the coast line very near the shore.
6. Production of oil and other minerals.

Little need be said as to the importance to the State of the proper regulation and development of its water front. The concentration of population close to the coast line is sufficient evidence of this. The future prosperity of the State and the happiness of its citizens in a large measure depends upon the manner in which the water front from Oregon to Mexico is developed by both governmental and private agencies.

As a result of the hearings and inspection trips of the committee, we made the following findings and submit the following recommendations:

SEASHORE PARKS.

We find that the public interests will be best served when a portion of the water front upland is privately owned and a portion thereof is publicly owned. This applies to those uses classed as commercial and those of a residential and recreational character. We find that at present there is need for more publicly owned upland, particularly for recreational use.

We recommend that the State Park Commission continue their present policy of liberal acquisition of seashore park areas with available funds, and recommend that additional funds be made available. We recommend that a portion of the royalty now received by the State from its tideland oil wells be allocated to this purpose and attach hereto a suggested bill to bring this about.

We also recommend that there be created a Seashore Parks Fund into which this royalty money shall be paid and any other money which the Legislature may from time to time allocate to this purpose. We suggest that appropriate legislation be adopted for the creation of such a fund and attach hereto a bill designed to accomplish this. We also recommend that all other revenue or possible revenue accruing to the State from its tidelands or seashore park areas, such as fees for permits to erect groins and other tideland structures, park concession fees and rentals be allocated to this Seashore Parks Fund.

We note and gratefully appreciate the recent gift to the State Park Commission of beach area in Orange County to the value of nearly $750,000 and hope for more such gifts from public spirited citizens in a position to make them. We recognize that by providing liberal park areas for the use of the general public, the State will be protecting the private owners of upland beach areas from trespass and from increasingly insistent demands for legislation of a radical character.

ACCESS TO TIDELANDS.

We find that at many places along the waterfront of the State there is not provided sufficient access to the tidelands for landing purposes for boating, fishing, etc., and while this can be in part remedied by local authorities in the provision of short lateral spur roads to the sea and of city and county parks along the shore, we recommend that wherever a State highway parallels and is close to the sea, the State Highway Commission or the State Park Commission under authority now granted them and with funds now or hereafter made available, acquire within their discretion suitable access areas, with a width of from 300 to 600 feet.

BEACH HIGHWAY AREAS.

We find that where a State highway approaches but does not actually reach to the high tide line, which is the upper boundary of the State-owned tidelands, there is presented a problem concerning both the State highway system and the beach area. In such cases a narrow privately owned strip intervenes between road and ocean, unsuitable for the best private uses and in some respects against public interest. We find that if such strips were publicly owned and controlled either by the State Park Commission or by the State Highway Commission the following results would be accomplished:

1. Future widening of the right of way would be made easier.
2. Erection of structures, usually cheap and unsightly, between road and ocean would be prevented. Such structures because of their nearness to both road and ocean obstruct the view, are menaced by waves, and, if expensive, increase the cost of later widening of the road.
3. The shore line is receding, according to the best engineering authorities, along the entire coast line of California, due to erosion. The State Highway Commission, if possessed of these intervening strips, is in a position to take such engineering steps as will protect the adjacent highway from this erosion.
4. More liberal access on the part of the general public will be provided. Our tourist business is profitable. Ownership of these strips will give the tourist opportunity to see out over the ocean as he passes by and opportunity to reach the ocean if he stops and parks his car.

We find that under present statutes and with present funds the State Highway Commission is in a position to acquire within its discretion such strips now existing, and suggest that where practicable this be done. We recommend that in the future such strips be acquired at the time the original right of way is purchased, because at that time the acquisition can be made at less cost and before any structures are erected on the private property. We suggest that such strips be acquired wherever the high tide line is within 150 feet of the center of the traveled portion of the right of way of the highway.

OIL DRILLING.

In connection with the production of oil and gas and other minerals from tidelands owned by the State of California, we report that we have examined into the situation created by the leasing of tidelands for oil and gas prospecting purposes under the provisions of chapter 303, Statutes of 1921. We find that as of the date of this report, there are 16 leases in good standing and 40 permits in good standing. From the leases mentioned there has been produced oil and gas valued at $7,768,632.29, which is an addition to the wealth of the people of the State of California, made possible through this source. From this production, there has been paid into the treasury of the State of California, a royalty of 5 per cent, or $554,985.68, all of which has gone into the general fund of the State. We believe it conservative to expect that this revenue will continue at the rate of approximately $60,000 per month, and it may be materially increased.

In addition to recommending that a portion of this revenue be made available to the State Park Commission for the acquisition of beach lands, we have the following recommendations to make concerning the drilling of State-owned tide lands:

1. We recommend that no legislation be adopted authorizing the issuance of additional prospecting permits.
2. We recommend that legislation be adopted authorizing competitive leasing by the State wherever an onshore oil field has been definitely proven in commercially paying quantities so as to prevent drainage of the adjoining State-owned tidelands. We attach hereto a bill framed to provide for such offset drilling.

TIDELAND STRUCTURES.

We find that there exist several problems connected with the seacoast, all of which will require, we believe, the investment of some suitable State agency with supervisory and regulatory power.

We find that groins, jetties, piers and other structures have been erected upon the State tidelands without any permit or authority from the State. These are often desirable and necessary both from the standpoint of the littoral owner and the public. But we find that there is need for supervision so that such structures be safe, efficient, sightly and so that they do not interfere with the rights of other property owners and of the public. This matter of groins and certain other tideland structures is very fully and ably covered in the report of the advisory board of Los Angeles County on beach protection, of which Colonel Chas. T. Leeds is chairman, to Attorney General U. S. Webb, dated December 13, 1930. The investment of some central State agency with authority to supervise tideland structures is recommended.

TITLE TO TIDELANDS.

We find that there is much uncertainty as to the location of the high-tide line. Some suitable agency should be made available for its determination. According to well accepted law this line changes from natural causes and with that change the boundary line between private and State-owned lands changes. When the line is changed by artificial means, land formed by accretion belongs to the State. Where such areas are not suitably located for public use, they should be deeded to the littoral owners or other private parties for a proper consideration and the proceeds placed in the Seashore Parks Fund. A suitable agency should so act for the State.

TIDELAND GRANTS.

Grants have been made to municipalities and in at least one case to a county, of tidelands within their limits. A study of such grants should be made to ascertain if their provisions and conditions have been observed. We recommend that future grants be made carefully and according to a standard form and that the interests of the State be safeguarded. There is need that a central State agency study these grants and take suitable measures for their observance.

SEACOAST INVESTIGATION.

The problems of the seacoast require special study. A governmental body is needed to carry on such a continuous study and report thereon biennially to the Legislature and recommend legislative action as a result thereof.

STATE REGULATORY AUTHORITY.

We find that there is need for general supervision of the beach area, both tidelands and uplands, so that development may be orderly. We find that leasing now authorized for mineral development, for wharves, boat landings, pleasure piers, etc.; that the granting of permits for outfall sewers, and groins and all other tideland structures; that investigations as to erosion and other seacoast engineering problems; that enforcement of existing and future laws with regard to the seacoast, should all be centered in one governmental agency. We find that there is need that such a governmental body advise with other states, with the federal government, with cities and other local political subdivisions and with private citizens with respect to matters affecting the seacoast. We recommend that the chief of the Division of State Lands, Department of Finance, be given the powers and duties of regulation and supervision above suggested and outlined and attach hereto a bill for that purpose.

DIVERSION OF OIL ROYALTY TO SEASHORE PARKS FUND.

An act to amend section 19 of chapter 303, Statutes of 1921, entitled "An act to reserve all minerals in State lands; to provide for examination, classification and report on the mineral and other character of State lands; to provide for the granting of permits and leases to prospect for and take any such minerals; to provide for the rents and royalties to be paid, and granting certain preference rights; to provide for the making of rules, regulations and contracts necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; and repealing acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith; providing for an appropriation to defray the cost of administering this act," approved May 25, 1921, as amended, directing that certain moneys be paid into the Seashore Parks Fund.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 19 of chapter 303, Statutes of 1921, entitled "An act to reserve all minerals in State lands; to provide for examination, classification and report on the mineral and other character of State lands; to provide for the granting of permits and leases to prospect for and take any such minerals; to provide for the rents and royalties to be paid, and granting certain preference rights; to provide for the making of rules, regulations and contracts necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; and repealing acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith; providing for an appropriation to defray the cost of administering this act," is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 19. All moneys received by the Surveyor General under the provisions of this act from rents, fees, bonuses, and royalties accruing from the use of State school land shall be paid into the "School Fund." One-half of all moneys accruing from the use of State littoral, tide, tidewater overflowed and submerged lands shall be paid into the State treasury to the credit of the "Seashore Parks Fund," except that during the biennium July 1, 1931, to June 30, 1933, there shall first be subtracted from the total sum accruing each month from the use of such lands any moneys received to the amount of $50,000, which moneys shall be deposited in the "General Fund," and only one-half of the monthly balance, if any, shall be paid into the "Seashore Parks Fund." All other moneys received under the provisions of this act shall be deposited in the "General Fund."

SEASHORE PARKS FUND.

An act to add section 7½ to chapter 763, Statutes of 1927, entitled "An act to provide that the Department of Natural Resources, through the State Park Commission, shall have control of the State park system; to establish and define the State park system; to define certain powers and duties of the State Park Commissioner; to make an appropriation for carrying out the purposes of this act; and to establish a contingent fund and a revolving fund," approved May 25, 1927, relating to the Seashore Parks Fund, creating the same and providing for its use.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 7½ is hereby added to chapter 763, Statutes of 1927, entitled "An act to provide that the Department of Natural Resources, through the State Park Commission, shall have control of the State park system; to establish and define the State park system; to define certain powers and duties of the State Park Commissioner; to make an appropriation for carrying out the purposes of this act; and to establish a contingent fund and a revolving fund," to read as follows:

Sec. 7½. There is hereby created the Seashore Parks Fund. One-half of all moneys received by the Surveyor General from rents, fees, bonuses, and royalties accruing from the use of State littoral, tide, tidewater overflowed and submerged lands under the provisions of "An act to reserve all minerals in State lands; to provide for examination, classification and report on the mineral and other character of State lands; to provide for the granting of permits and leases to prospect for and take any such minerals; to provide for the rents and royalties to be paid, and granting certain preference rights; to provide for the making of rules, regulations and contracts necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; and repealing acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith; providing for an appropriation to defray the cost of administering this act," approved May 25, 1921, as amended, shall be deposited in the State treasury to the credit of said Seashore Parks Fund, except that during the biennium July 1, 1931 to June 30, 1933, there shall first be subtracted from the total sum accruing each month from the use of such lands any moneys received to the amount of $50,000 which moneys shall be deposited in the general fund, and only one-half of the monthly balance, if any, shall be deposited in the State treasury to the credit of said Seashore Parks Fund. All moneys so deposited in the Seashore Parks Fund shall be used at the discretion of the State Park Commission for the acquisition of park and beach areas suitable for public use along the tidewater shores of this State, and for the development and maintenance of the same, and for the acquisition, construction, and maintenance of connecting roads providing easy access to such areas from the nearest State highway or other public road. Such seashore park and beach areas may be acquired within the limits of incorporated cities, if such acquisition is approved by resolution of the legislative body of such city, and when acquired shall be considered to be part of the State park system, except that only moneys in the Seashore Parks Fund may be expended for the care, protection, supervision, extension and improvement or development of such areas within the limits of incorporated cities. At least one-half of the moneys deposited in the Seashore Parks Fund from the use of lands in any county shall be expended for park and beach areas and connecting roads along the shore of that county or as nearly adjacent thereto as practicable. The State Park Commission shall not be limited to the Seashore Parks Fund for the acquisition, development, and maintenance of seashore park and beach areas outside the limits of incorporated cities, but may also use other available funds under its control for the purpose.

OFFSET TIDELANDS DRILLING.

An act to amend sections 8 and 24 of chapter 303, Statutes of 1921, entitled "An act to reserve all minerals in State lands; to provide for examination, classification, and report on the mineral and other character of State lands; to provide for the granting of permits and leases to prospect for and take any such minerals; to provide for the return and royalties to be paid, and granting certain preference rights; to provide for the making of rules, regulations, and contracts necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; and repealing acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith; providing for an appropriation to defray the cost of administering this act," approved May 25, 1921, as amended, relating to the leasing of tide, tidewater overflowed and submerged lands, and the beds of navigable rivers or lakes.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 8 of chapter 303, Statutes of 1921, entitled "An act to reserve all minerals in State lands; to provide for examination, classification and report on the mineral and other character of State lands; to provide for the granting of permits and leases to prospect for and take any such minerals; to provide for the rents and royalties to be paid, and granting certain preference rights; to provide for the making of rules, regulations and contracts necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; and repealing acts or parts of acts in conflict herewith; providing for an appropriation to defray the cost of administering this act," as amended by chapter 7, Statutes of 1929, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 8. All unappropriated deposits of oil or gas situated within the known geological structure of a producing oil or gas field and the unentered lands containing the same not subject to preferential lease, may be leased by the Surveyor General to the highest responsible bidder by competitive bidding under general regulations to qualified applicants in areas not exceeding 640 acres and in tracts which shall not exceed in length two and one-half times the width, the surveyed land to be leased according to legal subdivisions, the unsurveyed land to be surveyed by the Surveyor General, at the expense of the lessee, in such form as the Surveyor General shall deem to be to the best interest of the State; provided, however, that in case of leases to river bed, lake bed, overflowed, tide and submerged lands the width or length of the lease along the shore line, measured on an east and west or north and south line, shall not exceed one-quarter mile, such leases to be conditioned upon the payment by the lessee of such bonus as may be accepted and of such royalty as may be fixed in the lease, which shall not be less than 12½ per centum in amount or value of the production, and the payment in advance of a rental of not less than one dollar per acre per annum thereafter during the continuance of the lease, the rental paid for any one year to be credited against the royalties as they accrue for that year; and provided, further, that leases to State tide, tidewater overflowed and submerged lands, or the beds of navigable rivers or lakes, may be made, and may be made to such lands fronting on an incorporated city or either side thereof, but may be made only where necessary or advisable to offset the taking in commercial quantities of oil or gas from adjacent or nearby private lands, and the terms of such leases shall provide for adequate offsetting to prevent the undue drainage of oil or gas from beneath State lands, and shall also suitably provide for the prompt removal by the lessee of operating structures from abandoned wells. Leases shall be for a period of 20 years with the preferential right in the lessee to renew the same for successive periods of 10 years upon such reasonable terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Surveyor General, unless otherwise provided by law at the time of the expiration of such periods.

Whenever the average daily production of any oil well shall not exceed 10 barrels per day, the Surveyor General is authorized to reduce the royalty on future production when in his judgment the wells can not be successfully operated upon the royalty fixed in the lease. The provisions of this paragraph shall apply to all oil and gas leases made under this act; provided, further, that the Surveyor General shall not lease or receive any application for lease, and shall not offer a lease to the highest responsible bidder by competitive bidding under the provisions of this section of any tide, overflowed or submerged lands of this State after the approval of this act and prior to the first day of September, 1929.

SEC. 2. Section 24 of chapter 303, Statutes of 1921, as added by chapter 536 Statutes of 1929, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 24. On and after September 1, 1929, no lease for drilling for oil or gas, or for the production or extraction of any minerals other than oil or gas shall be made, executed or delivered by the State or any official thereof or by any political subdivision of the State or any official thereof for tidelands, whether filled or unfilled, submerged lands, overflowed lands or the beds of navigable rivers or lakes; provided, however, that nothing contained in this section shall be deemed or construed with reference to the holder of a valid, uncanceled and unforfeited prospecting permit granted upon an application filed in full accordance and compliance with the provisions of this act on or prior to January 17, 1929, or if a littoral owner, on or prior to the last day upon which he can, under the provisions of section 4 of this act, exercise his preferential rights with respect to an application made on or prior to January 17, 1929, as prohibiting such permit holder from exercising the right, if any he have, to apply for and receive a lease under the provisions of section 5 of this act, nor as recognizing, ratifying or validating any such right so claimed; and provided, further, that leases for drilling and operating offset wells on such lands belonging to the State may be made by the Surveyor General as provided in section 8 of this act, and similar leases for offset wells on such lands granted to cities or counties or other political subdivisions may be made under the same conditions as are provided in said section 8 if the governing body of the city or county or other political subdivision by ordinance permits the Surveyor General to make such leases and of the proceeds of such leases on such granted lands the State shall retain 50 per centum when the subsurface rights have not been granted, or 12½ per centum as a charge for its service when the subsurface rights have been granted, and shall pay the remainder to the political subdivision holding such granted lands, and said political subdivision shall devote at least 50 per centum of the amounts so paid to it for the purchase and maintenance of seashore park and beach areas for the use of the public.

STATE SUPERVISION.

An act amending the Political Code by adding sections 690:10, 690:12, 690:14, and 690:16 thereto, relating to littoral, tide, and tidewater overflowed and submerged lands, defining the powers and duties of the Department of Finance in connection therewith, and making an appropriation for the purposes of this act

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Section 690:10 is hereby added to the Political Code, to read as follows:

690:10. The Department of Finance through the Division of State Lands shall have charge of all littoral, tide, and tidewater overflowed and submerged lands in this State, except as otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 2. Section 690:12 is hereby added to the Political Code, to read as follows:

690:12. The Department of Finance shall have power to ascertain the location, extent, and nature of littoral, tide, and tidewater overflowed and submerged lands belonging to the State, and may order suitable surveys and descriptions to be made for the purpose. It shall investigate grants and leases of such State lands, and ascertain if the conditions, if any, of such grants and leases have been or are being complied with, and shall take such measures as may be proper for the enforcement of such conditions. It shall also investigate any encroachments or trespasses, or structures in the nature of nuisances, on such State lands, and shall order such action as it may consider advisable for the protection and furtherance of the interests of the State and the public. It may provide for and collect appropriate fees and rentals for the use of such State lands, which fees and rentals shall be paid into the State treasury to the credit of the general fund, unless otherwise provided by law; and it may make leases of such lands for periods of not over five years for any lawful purposes, unless and except as otherwise provided by law.

CONSIDERATION OF ASSEMBLY JOINT RESOLUTION NUMBER FOUR—(RESUMED).

ASSEMBLY JOINT RESOLUTION No. 4.

Relative to the reimbursement of the State of California for moneys actually expended in aid of the government of the United States during the war between the states.

WHEREAS, The State of California has not been reimbursed for moneys actually expended by the State for costs, charges and expenses incurred in enrolling, equipping, transporting and paying its volunteer troops during the war between the states in response to the urgent calls of and under proper requisitions made by the Commanding General of the Military Department of the Pacific under direct authority of the President and the Secretary of War, upon the understanding that all such costs, charges and expenses actually incurred in raising troops for the United States would be reimbursed to the State, as shown by the letter from the Secretary of State, Hon. Wm. H. Seward, addressed to the Governor of California dated October 14, 1861, wherein he stated:

"The President has directed me to invite your consideration to the subject of the improvement and perfection of the defenses of the State over which you preside and to ask you to submit the subject to the consideration of the Legislature when it shall have assembled. Such proceedings by the State would require only a temporary use of its means. The expenditures ought to be made the subject of conference with the federal authorities. Being thus made with the concurrence of the government for general defense, there is every reason to believe that Congress would sanction what the State should do and would provide for its reimbursement"; and

WHEREAS, The record shows that the expenditures by the State of California on behalf of the United States were made with the knowledge, cooperation and approval of the Commanding General of the Department of the Pacific representing the federal authorities; and

WHEREAS, The expenditures made by the State of California for, and on account of the United States and at its most urgent calls, are set forth by the Comptroller General of the United States under date of August 14, 1930, in pursuance of a resolution of the Senate passed May 28, 1930, as follows:

Grand total sum actually expended by and not repaid the State of California on July 1, 1889, stated in the account set forth in the report of the Secretary of War made in pursuance of resolutions of the Senate of February 27, 1889, printed in Senate Executive Document No. 11, Fifty-first Congress, first session..... $4,420,891 16

Plus, interest certified by the Treasurer of the State of California as actually paid by said State on the sums so advanced and expended from July 1, 1889, to December 31, 1929, $571,104.17 interest on moneys borrowed through the sale of State bonds issued under authority of the act of the Legislature of the State of California of April 27, 1863; and $1,470,150 interest on moneys similarly borrowed to carry out the provisions of the act of the Legislature of said State of April 4, 1864..... 2,041,254 17

Balance due the State of California..... $6,462,145 35

(Senate Document No. 220, Seventy-first Congress, third session); and

WHEREAS, No part of the sum so actually expended for the benefit of the United States and at its request has been reimbursed the State of California, although the costs, charges and expenses, including interest (the Supreme Court of the United States in the New York case, 160 U. S. 598, having held interest paid by a State on moneys borrowed a proper cost or charge) incurred by other states in aid of the government during the war between the states have been paid said states; and

WHEREAS, The validity, equity and justness of these expenditures made by the State of California in aid of the federal government in times of great stress have often been admitted and never successfully disputed; and

WHEREAS, The Senate after thorough investigation has repeatedly passed bills providing for the reimbursement of the State of California, and the committees of the House of Representatives have likewise favorably reported bills for such reimbursement; and

WHEREAS, The Seventieth Congress, after many years of consideration, passed and the President approved an act providing for the reimbursement of the State of Nevada for costs, charges and expenses incurred in aid of the government during the war between the states identical in character and authorized under exactly similar circumstances as were the expenditures made by the State of California, thus recognizing the validity and merit of such expenditures; and

WHEREAS, It is deemed appropriate to quote, from among the many statesmen in Congress who have considered and assisted in establishing the justice of the reimbursement of California, three United States Senators who, on account of their prominence, experience and rank, are most competent to speak again in behalf of our State, namely:

"Senator Hawley of Connecticut (chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs): There is no sort of question as to its justice."

"Senator Eugene Hale of Maine (chairman of the Committee on Appropriations): The Senate is committed to these State claims by vote, by sentiment, and it is only a question of time when they will pass."

"Senator Teller of Colorado (chairman of the Committee on Claims): If there are any claims that are just and proper which the United States ought to pay, this is one of them. It is as sacred an obligation, in my judgment, as the national bonds"; and

WHEREAS, The State of California has been so long deprived of its rights respecting these expenditures upon part of which it is still paying interest, and as the State is now in such urgent need of the sum due from the United States, that it is believed if the attention of the Congress is again invited to this obligation, it will appreciate the justice of the State's request for reimbursement at this time; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly the State of California, the Senate concurring, That we respectfully request our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States to use all honorable means to secure the enactment by that body of a law providing for the reimbursement of the State of California in accordance with the accounting rendered by the Comptroller General of the United States hereinabove referred to, and that His Excellency, the Governor of the State of California be requested to forward to the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress a properly certified copy of this resolution.

Resolution read.

The question being on the adoption of the resolution.

The roll was called, and Assembly Joint Resolution No. 4 adopted by the following vote:

AYES—Senators Allen, Baker, Breed, Bush, Carter, Cassidy, Christian, Crittenden, Douel, Duval, Edwards, Evans, Fellom, Harper, Hays, Ingels, Maloney, McKinley, Mixter, Nelson, Riley, Rochester, Schottky, Sharkey, Slater, Wagy, and Young—27.

NOES—None.

Title read and approved.

Assembly Joint Resolution No. 4 ordered transmitted to the Assembly.

EXPLANATION OF VOTE.

The following explanation of vote was presented by Senator McKinley, and ordered printed in the Journal:

In voting for Assembly Joint Resolution No. 4, I wish to state that in doing so I do not in any manner approve of the manner in which Assembly Bill No. 1175 was enacted into law in 1929, but that I expressly disapprove of it and regret that I, through negligence or inadvertence, voted for the bill. However it is now a question, whether we shall ask Congress to pay the claim or apparently waive our rights by refusing to pass this resolution asking payment. It being better to receive the amount of the claim, less the amount contracted to be paid the attorneys, than to receive nothing, I voted for the resolution.

J. W. MCKINLEY, State Senator, Thirty-eighth District.

3. Whenever any bill has been referred by the Senate to one of its committees, and the same or a like bill has been referred by the Assembly to one of its committees, the chairmen of the respective committees, when in their judgement the interests of legislation or the expedition of business will be better served thereby, shall arrange for a joint meeting of their committees for the consideration of such bill.

BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Scope of Word "Bill."

4. Whenever the word "bill" is used in these rules it shall include constitutional amendments, joint and concurrent resolutions.

Joint and Concurrent Resolutions

5. Joint resolutions are those which relate to matters connected with the federal government. All other resolutions relating to matters to be treated by both houses of the Legislature are concurrent resolutions.

Resolutions Treated as Bills.

6. Joint resolutions, concurrent resolutions and constitutional amendments shall be treated in all respects as bills; except that they shall be read but one time in each house and that they shall not be deemed bills within the meaning of section 2 of article IV of the constitution, and shall not be referred to the Committee on Introduction of Bills, and shall not require a vote to authorize their introduction. As in the case of bills, they shall be engrossed in the house in which they originate before being voted upon.

PREPARATION AND INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

Title of Bill.

7. The title of every bill introduced shall convey an accurate idea of the contents of the bill and shall be indicative of the scope of the act and the object to be accomplished. In amending a code section, the mere reference to the section by number shall not be deemed sufficient.

Division of Bill Into Sections.

8. Bills amending more than one section of existing laws shall contain a separate section for each section amended.

Bills which are not amendatory of existing laws shall be divided into short sections, where this can be done without destroying the sense of any particular section, to the end that future amendments may be made without the necessity of setting forth and repeating sections of unnecessary length.

Changes in Existing Law to Be Marked by Author.

9. In case of a bill amending a code section or a general law, any new matter shall be underlined and any matter to be omitted shall have a single horizontal line through the center. When printed the new matter shall be printed in italics and the matter to be omitted shall be printed in canceled or "strikeout" type.

Committee on Revision and Printing to Examine Bills When Introduced.

10. Unless otherwise ordered by the house in which the bill was introduced, all bills before being printed shall be immediately sent to the Committee on Revision and Printing, which shall examine the bill, with the aid of the Legislative Counsel Bureau. The committee shall have authority to correct any clerical error such as in orthography, adding or correcting the enacting clause, mistakes in numbering sections and references thereto, errors in grammar, phraseology, or in the form of the bill, but the attention of the author shall be called to any change made. No bill which bears the stamp of the Legislative Counsel Bureau showing that before introduction it has been examined as to form, shall be sent to the Committee on Revision and Printing. Whenever any provision of law or of the rules shall refer to the Senate Committee on Printing, or Engrossment, Enrollment and Printing, such reference shall be deemed to mean the Committee on Revision and Printing, provided for in these rules.

NOTE—The submission of bill copy to Legislative Counsel Bureau for approval of form before introduction will expedite its course.

Bills Introduced to Indicate Changes in Existing Laws.

11. The Committee on Revision and Printing shall see to it that rules 7 and 9 of these joint rules are observed by the author, and that the bill shall not be sent to the printer until the provisions of these rules have been carried out.

Reports of Committee on Revision and Printing.

12. The Committee on Revision and Printing shall return to the Secretary of the Senate or Chief Clerk of the Assembly all bills in the order in which they were sent to it, but shall not retain any bill for longer than three legislative days, unless otherwise ordered.

Endorsement of Date of Introduction.

13. Bills introduced in either house shall be endorsed with the date of introduction.

PRINTING AND DISTRIBUTION OF BILLS.

Manner of Printing Bills, etc.

14. The State Printer shall observe the following directions in printing all bills, constitutional amendments, joint and concurrent resolutions:

(a) The body of such bills and resolutions shall be printed in solid unspaced form so that the same type shall be used both before and after enrollment.

(b) All titles of bills, resolutions, etc., shall be set in italics, statute form, and the length of the lines used in the titles shall not exceed that of the body of the bill.

(c) The lines of all printed bills shall be numbered by page and not by sections, and amendments shall be identified by reference to title, page and line only; provided, however, that concurrent resolutions approving city or county or city and county charters or amendments thereto may be set in smaller type and without line numbers.

(d) Enrolled bills may be inclosed in stock cover.

Printing of Amendments.

15. All bills amended by either house shall be immediately reprinted; in the case new matter is added by the amendment such new matter shall be printed in italics in the printed bill, and in the case of matter being omitted, the matter to be omitted shall be printed in type bearing a horizontal line through the center and commonly known as "strikeout" type. When a bill is amended in either house, the first or previous markings shall be omitted. When a bill amendatory of a code section or general law is engrossed, all figures or symbols shall be removed.

Distribution of Bills During Constitutional Recess.

16. All requests for mailing or distribution by the members shall be filed with the Secretary of the Senate or Chief Clerk of the Assembly, who shall compile the same with the elimination of duplication as a general mailing list. The distribution of bills, constitutional amendments, joint and concurrent resolutions shall be systemized as follows: Members' clerks and legislative officers' files, one hundred fifty full sets; to authors, fifty copies of their own bills; accredited newspaper representatives, twenty-five; to public and law libraries, newspapers, county officials, and other civic, commercial, fraternal or industrial organizations as the Secretary of the Senate and Chief Clerk of the Assembly may compile from the recommendations of the members of both houses, one thousand two hundred copies; to State officers, State Library and Secretary of State, two hundred copies; to legislative committees, bill room files and public requests—confined to single copies of bills designated—one thousand copies. The State Printer shall cause to be printed in the standard form adopted by the Senate and the Assembly as many copies of all bills, constitutional amendments and joint or concurrent resolutions as may be necessary to conform to the provisions of this rule.

A similar number and distribution shall be made of the Semifinal History and Final Calendar.

Distribution of Bills After Constitutional Recess.

17. Following the recess, new bills introduced shall be forwarded to the public libraries and law libraries only, and one copy each of amended bills as may be requested. Weekly Histories and Journals shall be distributed generally, following the recess, upon such schedule as the Secretary of the Senate and Chief Clerk of the Assembly may designate.

OTHER LEGISLATIVE PRINTING.

18. The State Printer shall print one thousand copies of the Journal of each day's proceedings of each house; at the end of the session he shall also print a sufficient number of copies, properly paged after being corrected and indexed by the Secretary of the Senate and Chief Clerk of the Assembly, to bind in book form as the Journal of the respective houses of the Legislature as required by law.

What Shall Be Printed in the Journal.

19. The following shall always be printed in the Journal of each house:

(a) Messages from the Governor and messages from the other house, and the titles of all bills, joint and concurrent resolutions and constitutional amendments when introduced in, offered to, or acted upon by the house, and the title and text of joint and concurrent resolutions and constitutional amendments when adopted by the house; provided, that in the case of a concurrent resolution approving the adoption of a charter or charter amendments of any kind, the text of such charter or charter amendments need not be printed in the Journal.

(b) Every vote taken in the house, and a statement of the contents of each petition, memorial or paper presented to the house.

(c) A true and accurate account of the proceedings of the house, when not acting as a committee of the whole.

Printing of the Daily File.

20. A daily file of bills ready for consideration shall be printed each day for each house, and copies of the file of each house shall be distributed each day to all of the members of both houses.

Printing of History.

21. Each house shall cause to be printed on Monday of each week, during the session, a complete History of all bills, joint or concurrent resolutions and constitutional amendments originating in or acted upon by the respective houses.

Such History shall show the action taken upon each measure up to and including the legislative day preceding its issuance.

For each legislative day intervening there shall be printed a Supplementary History showing the action taken upon any measure since the issuance of the complete History. A regular form shall be prescribed and no other form shall be used.

Immediately following the adjournment for the constitutional recess the History shall be compiled and printed to date of recess.

Authority for Printing Orders.

22. The Superintendent of State Printing shall not print for use of either house any matter other than provided by law or by these rules, except upon a written order signed by the Secretary of the Senate or the Chief Clerk of the Assembly. The Secretary of the Senate and the Chief Clerk of the Assembly may also, when necessity requires it, order certain matter printed in advance of the regular order, by the issuance of a rush order.

RECORD OF BILLS.

Secretary and Chief Clerk to Keep Register.

23. The Secretary of the Senate and the Chief Clerk of the Assembly shall keep a register, in which shall be recorded every action taken by the Senate and Assembly on every bill, concurrent or joint resolution or constitutional amendment.

Secretary and Chief Clerk Shall Endorse Bills.

24. The Secretary of the Senate and the Chief Clerk of the Assembly shall endorse on every original bill a statement of any action taken by the Senate and Assembly.

ACTION IN ONE HOUSE ON BILL TRANSMITTED FROM THE OTHER.

Bills Read and Referred to Committee.

25. When a Senate bill has been received by the Assembly or an Assembly bill by the Senate, with a message announcing that the same has passed the Senate or Assembly, such bill shall be read the first time by the Secretary or the Chief Clerk and referred to a standing committee by the presiding officer, unless otherwise ordered by the house.

After a Bill Has Been Passed by the Senate or Assembly.

26. When a bill (if it be a Senate bill) has been received from the Senate by the Assembly, after its passage, or (if it be an Assembly bill) has been received from the Assembly by the Senate after its passage, it shall be taken up by the Senate or Assembly, as the case may be, under the regular order of business ("Senate messages" or "Assembly messages"), read the first time, unless otherwise ordered by the house, and shall then be assigned to the proper committee, unless otherwise ordered, who shall act upon the same as soon as practicable, and report the same back to the Senate or Assembly forthwith, and the chairman of each committee is charged with observance of this rule.

Special File.

27. On the second day after the close of the recess provided for in section 2, article IV of the constitution, the Senate and Assembly shall each adopt and provide a special file upon which shall be placed: In the Senate, only Assembly bills that have passed the Assembly; and in the Assembly, only Senate bills that have passed the Senate. Such special file shall be taken up at two o'clock p.m. of each day in the Assembly and at two o'clock and thirty minutes p.m. of each day in the Senate and be considered at least one hour and a half after being so taken up unless its consideration shall be completed in a lesser period of time. This rule shall not be suspended in either house except by a three-fourths vote of such house.

REPORTS FROM ONE HOUSE TO THE OTHER AS TO ACTION ON BILL.

Bill or Resolution in One House, Rejected in the Other, Requires Notice.

28. When a bill or resolution which shall have passed one house is rejected by the other, notice thereof shall be given immediately to the house in which the same shall have passed.

Each House to Transmit Papers.

29. Each house shall transmit to the other papers on which any bill or resolution shall be founded.

Notices to Be in Writing Under Proper Signatures.

30. Notice of the action of either house to the other shall be in writing and under the signature of the Secretary of the Senate or the Chief Clerk of the house from which such notice is to be conveyed.

Secretary, Chief Clerk, etc., to Dispatch Messages.

31. Messages shall be sent to the other house by an officer or attache to be designated by the Secretary, if it be a Senate message, or by the Chief Clerk, if it be an Assembly message.

Messages Must Be Announced by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

32. When a message shall be sent from either house it shall be announced at the door by the Sergeant-at-Arms, and shall be respectfully communicated to the presiding officer by the person by whom it may be sent.

PASSAGE AND ENROLLING OF BILLS.

Passage of Bills Taking Effect Immediately.

33. Each house shall act in the usual course upon all bills that may be made to take effect immediately, under the provisions of section 1, article IV of the constitution.

Passage of Urgency Provisions in Bills.

34. Upon the third reading of an act which is an urgency measure within the meaning of section 1, article IV of the State constitution, the presiding officer shall direct that the section of said act setting forth the facts constituting the necessity for such urgency (which shall be known as the urgency section) be then read and put to vote. The question shall be thus stated: "Shall this section, setting forth the urgency features of this bill, be passed?" If upon such final vote two-thirds of all the members elected to the house in which the vote is being taken shall not vote in the affirmative, no further action shall be taken on the bill; but, in case an identical bill without such an emergency clause be again introduced into such house, such bill shall be placed on file without reference to any committee.

Passage of Bills Preceding Final Adjournment.

35. No Senate bill shall be passed by the Senate and no Assembly bill shall be passed by the Assembly within seven days of the time set for adjournment sine die of the two houses of the Legislature, unless permission to vote on such bill shall be granted by a three-fourths vote of the house of its origin after being recommended by the presiding officer thereof.

Enrollment of Bill After Passage.

36. After a bill shall have passed both houses, it shall be duly enrolled after being carefully compared, by the engrossing and enrolling clerk and committee of the house in which it originated, with the engrossed bill, as passed in the two houses. It shall then receive the signatures provided for in joint rule 37, and be presented to the Governor of the State.

Enrolling Committee to Present Bills to Governor.

37. After a bill shall have been thus passed in each house, it shall be presented by the engrossing and enrolling committee of the house in which it originated to the Governor of the State for his approval (it being first endorsed by the presiding officers of the two houses, and by the Secretary of the Senate and the Chief Clerk of the Assembly). The said committee shall report the day of presentation to the Governor, which time shall be carefully entered on the Journal of the house in which the bill originated.

AMENDMENTS AND CONFERENCES.

Amendments to Amended Bills Must Be Attached.

38. Whenever a bill or resolution which shall have been passed in one house shall be amended in the other, it shall immediately be reprinted as amended by the house making such amendment or amendments. Such amendment or amendments shall be attached to the bill or resolution so amended, and endorsed "adopted," and such amendment or amendments, if concurred in by the house in which such bill or resolution originated, shall be endorsed "concurred in," and such endorsement shall be signed by the Secretary or Assistant Secretary of the Senate, or the Chief Clerk or Assistant Clerk of the Assembly, as the case may be; provided, however, that an amendment to the title of a bill adopted after the passage of such bill shall not necessitate reprinting, but such amendment must be concurred in by the house in which such bill originated.

To Concur or Refuse to Concur in Amendments.

39. In case the Senate amend and pass an Assembly bill, or the Assembly amend and pass a Senate bill, the Senate (if it be a Senate Bill) or the Assembly (if it be an Assembly bill) must either "concur" or "refuse to concur" in the amendments. If the Senate concur (if it be a Senate bill), or the Assembly concur (if it be an Assembly bill), the Secretary or Chief Clerk shall notify the house making the amendments and the bill shall be ordered to enrollment.

When Senate or Assembly Refuse to Concur.

40. If the Senate refuse to concur (if it be a Senate bill), or the Assembly refuse to concur (if it be an Assembly bill), the Secretary or the Chief Clerk shall notify the house making the amendments of such refusal, and ask that they recede from their amendments. If they refuse to recede, the presiding officer shall appoint a committee of three (3) on conference and the Secretary or the Chief Clerk shall immediately notify the other house of the action taken and request the appointment of a like committee. Two of the members comprising such committee from each house shall be selected from those voting with the majority on the point about which the difference has arisen, and the other member from each house of such committee shall be selected from the minority, in the event there is a minority vote. The first Senator named on the free conference committee shall act as chairman of the committee from the Senate, and the first Assemblyman named on such committee shall act as chairman of the committee from the House, and the chairman thus selected shall arrange the time and place of all meetings and prepare or direct the preparation of reports. The Committee on Free Conference shall report to both the Senate and Assembly.

Committee on Free Conference.

41. In every case of an amendment of a bill agreed to in one house and dissented from in the other, if either house shall request a conference and appoint a committee to confer, the other house shall appoint a like committee; and such committee shall meet at a convenient hour, to be agreed upon by the respective chairmen of the committees.

Report of Committee on Free Conference.

42. The report of the Committee on Free Conference shall not be subject to amendment, and if either house refuse to adopt such report the conferees may be discharged and other conferees appointed.

It shall require the affirmative vote of not less than four of the members constituting the committee to agree upon a report. No member who has served on a Committee on Free Conference shall be appointed a member of another Committee on Free Conference on the same bill.

When Conference Committee Report Is in Order.

43. The presentation of the report of a Committee on Free Conference shall always be in order, except when the Journal is being read or a question of order or a motion to adjourn is pending, or during roll call, and, when received, the question of proceeding to the consideration of the report, if raised, shall be immediately passed upon, and shall be determined without debate.

Miscellaneous Provisions.

44. The Committee on Joint Rules shall be empowered to compile a list of suggestions as to the form of bills and resolutions prepared for introduction into the Legislature.

poration in advocating or attempting to defeat any measure pending in either branch of the Legislature, that he is not employed in any executive, administrative or legislative department of the State government and will not become so employed while accepting the privileges of a press representative.

(b) It shall be the duty of the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the Assembly to assign one or more rooms for the exclusive use of correspondents during the legislative session, which room shall be known as the press room. The press room shall be under the control of the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and Grounds; provided, that all rules and regulations shall be approved by the President of the Senate and Speaker of the Assembly.

Adjournment.

46. Adjournment for the constitutional recess and adjournment sine die shall be made only by concurrent resolution; and the resolution for adjournment sine die shall be passed by both houses at least fourteen days before the date of such adjournment.

Joint Address to Governor.

47. When the Senate and Assembly shall judge it proper to make a joint address to the Governor, it shall be presented to him in his audience chamber by the President of the Senate in the presence of the Speaker of the Assembly and a select committee of six members from each house appointed by the respective presiding officers.

Dispensing With Joint Rules.

48. No joint rule shall be dispensed with except by a vote of two-thirds of each house; and joint rules 27 and 35 can be dispensed with only in the manner provided for in said joint rules. If either house shall violate a joint rule a question of order may be raised in the other house and decided in the same manner as in the case of the violation of the rules of such house; and if it shall be decided that the joint rules have been violated, the bill involving such violations shall be returned to the house in which it originated, without further action. Or, at the option of such house, the President or Speaker may direct the Secretary or the Chief Clerk to mark the section or sections in conflict with the rules as nonconcurring in or negated.

URGENCY CLAUSE.

Sec. 4. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, and shall take effect immediately. The following is a statement of the facts constituting such urgency: Many school districts within the State of California are without sufficient money with which to purchase school lots, for building or purchasing one or more school buildings or making alterations or additions to same or restoring or rebuilding school buildings damaged, injured or destroyed by fire or other public calamity, for insuring school buildings, for supplying school buildings with furniture or necessary apparatus, for improving school grounds, for liquidating any indebtedness already incurred for said purposes or refunding any valid outstanding indebtedness of such district evidenced by bonds or warrants thereof. Many school districts have within the last two years voted bonds for raising money for such purposes and the proceedings in many of such bond elections were irregular but complying with all the provisions of this act, and by reason of such minor irregularities and defects in such proceedings, not jurisdictional, such bonds can not now be sold. The population of many of these districts has increased so rapidly that the present school facilities of such districts are unable to meet the needs of the great increase of pupils in such districts and it is necessary and urgent that such bonds and the proceedings thereunder be validated at an early date in order that said school buildings, lots, equipment and facilities may be purchased or built before the opening of the next school year which in many instances would be impossible if this act did not go into effect immediately but was required to wait until 90 days after adjournment of this Legislature.

Urgency clause read.

The question being on the adoption of the urgency clause.

The roll was called, and the urgency clause adopted by the following vote:

AYES—Senators Allen, Baker, Breed, Bush, Christian, Crittenden, Deuel, Duval, Edwards, Evans, Fellom, Harper, Hays, Inman, Maloney, McCormack, Mixter, Moran, Nelson, Rich, Riley, Schottky, Sharkey, Slater, Tubbs, Wagy, Williams, and Young—28.

REPORT OF JOINT COMMITTEE ON JOINT HIGHWAY LAWS.

The following report was received, and on motion of Senator Fellom, ordered printed in the Journal:

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, October 1, 1930.

Hon. C. C. Young, Governor,
State of California,
Sacramento, California.

DEAR SIR: Your joint committee of the Senate and Assembly appointed pursuant to Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 41 of the forty-eighth session of the Legislature of the State of California (Statutes 1929, chapter 73) for the purpose of studying joint highway laws of the State of California and making recommendations concerning any changes therein, and to make such recommendations for the financing of joint highway districts, and directed to report back and transmit its report to yourself not later than the first day of October, 1930, reports as follows:

This committee has conducted public hearings over a period of several months in various cities of the State of California, and after entertaining the views of those persons interested in the problems under consideration of this committee, and to the engineers and attorneys at law who have made an intense study of the Joint Highway District Act, and its administration, has arrived at the following conclusion, and desires to make the following recommendations:

LEGISLATIVE RECOMMENDATIONS.

It is recommended that the statutory provision for the creation, organization, and government of joint highway districts (Statutes 1917, chapter 52, as amended) be amended so that the following results are obtained:

1. That the title to the above act be amended to comply with section 24 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California. That is, that the title be made sufficiently broad to cover the provisions of the act.

2. That in the organization of a joint highway district the organization of a district be accomplished immediately, rather than being a preliminary organization as now provided with a permanent organization to follow.

3. That counties be enabled to contribute to the cost of the improvement undertaken by the joint highway district in a less restricted manner.

4. That the provisions of the act relating to the levying of an assessment upon real property within the district be redrafted to provide for the necessary machinery therefor, and so drafted as to become an optional method of financing the cost of the improvement contemplated by a joint highway district.

5. That the provisions for the issue of revenue bonds in the existing act be amended to provide for the issuance of a bond that will be a general obligation of the district or be a lien upon an unpaid assessment list in each county. That this provision of the act be amended to set up adequate machinery to enable the district or the counties constituting the district to properly incur a bonded indebtedness.

6. That the powers of the board of directors of a joint highway district be enlarged to include a provision that the board of directors may pass a resolution that will be conclusive evidence in any condemnation suit brought by said board of:

- a. The public necessity for the proposed improvement.

- b. That the property is necessary, therefore, and

- c. That such proposed public improvement is planned or located in a manner that will be most compatible with the greatest public good and the least private injury.

That the board of directors may meet any place within the State of California; that the board of directors may establish a contingent fund out of which any preliminary expenses may be paid.

FINANCIAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

Your committee in its study to ascertain a method of financing joint highway districts, and after obtaining the views of various State and county officials in the matter, recommends that a direct appropriation be made from the general fund of the State of California for the purpose of enabling the State of California to participate in the cost of improvements to be made by joint highway districts. It is recommended that any such appropriation be sufficient to permit the State of California to assume a fair participation in joint highway district ventures and that said appropriation be a recurrent appropriation, or that a definite policy be adopted of making a biennial appropriation so that the construction and maintenance of public highways, under the methods provided for by the Joint Highway District Act, may progress in an orderly and systematic manner.

Your committee has caused to be compiled statutes of the several states of the United States similar in intent to the Joint Highway District Act which your committee files herewith for your information.

Your committee desires at this time to acknowledge the splendid cooperation in its labors, and in the various cities throughout the State, of many public officials and private citizens interested in this work, and also to particularly acknowledge the valuable help, advice and cooperation of Mr. Fred B. Wood, Legislative Counsel Bureau, C. C. Carlton and Richard Lazarus, of the Department of Public Works, Mr. Ben Blow, of the National Automobile Club, Mr. John B. Piatt, of Santa Rosa, J. Allen Davis, of the Automobile Club of Southern California, C. C. Cottrell, of the California State Automobile Association, Mary R. Schwab, attorney at law, Donald C. Young, attorney at law, of San Francisco, California, Carl F. Mow, Redding, California, the chairman of the Joint Highway District Study Committee and the California State Chamber of Commerce.

Signed this first day of October, 1930.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

The following report of the special committee, appointed by the President of the Senate for the purpose of considering the contest of election of Charles F. Preciado vs. Andrew R. Schottky presented the following report:

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR THE PURPOSE OF CONSIDERING THE CONTEST OF CHARLES F. PRECIADO, CONTESTANT, AND ANDREW R. SCHOTTKY, CONTESTEE.

To the Senate of the State of California.

The special committee appointed, pursuant to resolution of the Senate adopted January 8, 1931, to hear the contest in the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District, submit the following report:

The committee met on January 12, 1931, to organize, and voted to request the Senate to pass a resolution authorizing them to proceed, which resolution was passed on the thirteenth day of January, 1931. The committee again met on January 15, 1931, after having notified the respective parties to the contest of the time of meeting. At this meeting, the contestant was represented by his attorney, Stephen Galvin, and the contestee was represented by his attorney, Hugh K. Lamdrun, and after hearing the statements of the respective parties and reading the depositions which had theretofore been transmitted to the President of the Senate through the Secretary of State, granted, at the request of the attorney for the contestant, further time in which to produce additional evidence in support of the contest. The committee adjourned until January 22, at one o'clock and thirty minutes p.m., at which time the parties appeared in person and by counsel and evidence was introduced on behalf of both the contestant and contestee, after the conclusion of which a statement was made by Mr. E. G. Adams of Livingston, and argument made by respective counsel, the matter was submitted.

The committee, after hearing and considering the evidence, arguments and statements, finds that the evidence is insufficient to sustain the charges as set out in the statement of contest and there is not sufficient evidence to justify a recount of the votes cast in the said senatorial district, and that said contest be dismissed; and

The committee further finds that Andrew R. Schottky was duly elected at the general election held on November 4, 1930, as State Senator in the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District and recommends that costs and expenses be allowed as shown in the annexed statement.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Senator Carter, arising to a question of personal privilege, and on admission of Senator Tubbs that he was the author of the statement published in the Sausalito News of date of January 23, 1931, as follows:

"T. T. TALKS

Corporate Interests Rule.

Labor Gets Slighted.

Two Votes Against Vets.

Dr. Briggs on the Job.

Swing Makes Good Whip.

½ Avocado 90c—Poor Ad.

By State Senator TALLANT TUBBS. (Written especially for the Sausalito News.)

The Senate and Assembly committees, as appointed by Lieutenant Governor Merriam and Speaker Levey, show beyond a doubt that the corporate interests are in a better position so far as the Legislature is concerned than at any time since Governor Hiram Johnson forced the Southern Pacific out of politics.

In the Senate, Henry Carter of Los Angeles is chairman of the important Public Utilities Committee; Carter is a reactionary and for years has listened to the whisperings of the corporations. A glance at the personnel of this committee shows that Labor and The People will not fare well in any matters heard by the committee.

Lieutenant Governor Merriam is closer to the capitalistic leaders of Los Angeles than he is to any other leaders, except those from Iowa clubs, and he has indeed paid off through the selection of the Senate committees whatever campaign obligations he was under to Mr. Harry Chandler of the Los Angeles Times."

made the following statement:

"In this statement that I am a reactionary I have no quarrel with the author of this article. My public record for 20 years in this Legislature is an answer for my public acts, and for which I make no apology to him nor to the people of California, but a State Senator who will publicly broadcast a statement of this character concerning his associates and the officer presiding over this body, the Lieutenant Governor of the State, who was so recently elected by a tremendous majority of the people, is not deserving of recognition or entitled to association with the decent members of this Senate. He is not only not deserving of recognition, but should be ostracized from all association with his associates. 'It is a dirty bird that befouls its own nest.'

In my opinion, decency requires that Senator Tubbs owes an apology to the President, and to the members of this Senate."

INTRODUCTION OF GOVERNOR JAMES ROLPH, JR.

Governor James Rolph, Jr., was then presented to the Senate by Hon. Frank F. Merriam, Lieutenant Governor.

ADDRESS BY GOVERNOR JAMES ROLPH, JR.

Governor James Rolph, Jr., proceeded to address the Senate as follows:

Mr. Lieutenant Governor, Gentlemen of the Senate, and my fellow Californians here present.

I thank you, Mr. Lieutenant Governor, for the friendly manner in which you have just presented me to the members of the Senate, and I thank you, gentlemen of the Senate, for the warmth of this reception which you have given to me.

I have come this morning to pay my respects to you before you recess this afternoon and leave the State Capitol. Most of you have done me the honor of calling upon me in the Governor's chambers during the past eighteen days that you have been domiciled here in Sacramento. It has been a great pleasure to me to have met you, to have discussed problems with you, and to have become better acquainted with you, because after all we are the personal representatives of the people. We are here to do official business, and we are here to promote harmony, and we are here to do things for the people of our State.

I have come to return the compliments which you have paid to me. I have come to show by my presence that I am striving to work with you. I have come to show you that I want to work with you. The fact of my returning your calls to me and my knowledge that you have been in legislative activity here shows that I am interested and have kept a keen eye on all that you are doing here. I am endeavoring to cooperate with you to the fullest extent.

Here under our representative form of government are the representatives of the people. Here are men, not territories. Here are men who represent their constituents in every part of our great State.

It is not the purpose of the Governor to interfere with the problems which you have been elected to carry into effect. It is not the purpose of the Governor to interfere with the formation of your committees, or to interfere with your work; but at all time it is the highest aim of the Chief Executive to work with you.

You come from the cities and the villages, and the hamlets, and the farms, and every part of our great State. You bring here the thoughts which are foremost in the minds of the people; you bring here the ideas of laws you want, and above all you have been elected to represent the whole State of California.

You have noticed that I have not endeavored in any way, shape or form to interfere, or to show, as has been done in other states and elsewhere, that the Governor's hand is shown in the activities of the Senate or the Assembly.

I have had no experience as the chief executive of a State, but the principles which I have followed in the handling of a great city will stand me in good stead, and will give me knowledge of how to work with the Legislature and how to show my proper respects for the members of the Legislature. Therefore you have seen no politics in this administration. You have seen a Governor whose principle is to work with you, to cooperate with you for the purpose to which I have been elected.

I think it might be well to express my idea of the work which has been done during the past eighteen days. Owing to the vastness of the crowds which came to the inaugural, the first held in thirty years, an event which thrilled the great State, which brought into being and into the very thoughts of the people from every part of our State, that we had a State Capitol, that we had a great dome upon this building, built in 1869, the year in which I was born. It brought focus on the fact that their senators and representatives travel from every part of the State, and men came to see this great building in which you are domiciled.

The people saw the life of California; they saw the pioneers and the oxen; they saw the real life portrayed here; they saw a fine community; they saw the hospitality from this community here in Sacramento. And we must not forget the kind work of the Inaugural Committee in welcoming the coming of the new Governor, the welcome that came from all the people of California. It did not cost the taxpayers a cent. It was the free and voluntary giving of the people of this wonderful California city, and it was an event which brought us closer together, an event which will long linger in our minds.

So before bidding you a recess, a refreshing recess, and a welcome back within thirty days' time, I have jotted down just a few ideas that I would like to bring to your minds as you leave and for you to give some serious thought to while away.

I have tried to bring to you in my inaugural address many problems requiring attention and you have acted promptly. You have brought to this Legislature the good will of the communities of the State. No politics have been encouraged. The Governor and the upper house have worked in harmony and unity. You have enacted into laws the wishes and the demands of the people by reassuring them through the passage of desirable bills.

You have passed emergency bills to the total of $5,160,000 to eliminate crowding in the institutions and in the State schools, and to assist in relieving unemployment. Deficiency bills to complete projects under way totaling approximately $1,025,000 have been passed. You have expedited legislation. The biennial budget was presented to you earlier than ever before in the history of the State. Every single item in my inaugural address for proposed legislation has been taken care of by the introduction of bills or by administrative action.

We have been working in harmony with the Legislative Tax Committee. Bills to correct the administrative defects of the gas tax and the corporation franchise tax and to make adjustments of the tax on companies producing oil and gas have been proposed.

The emergency bills and the deficiency appropriations together with the recommended budget appropriations will call for an expenditure of approximately $9,400,000 out of the $30,000,000 surplus. You have started the buildings provided for in the emergency appropriation and they are on their way to relieve the unemployed. Architects are being engaged from the districts where the buildings are to be erected at the regular fee of the American Institute of Architecture. The State Architect is unable to cope with the situation; we want the work started immediately where you, by emergency measures, have decided that the work should be carried on, and unemployment taken care of in all parts of California.

There are a number of bills for the improvement of our tax system. It is not the policy of the administration to make any radical changes in our tax system or levy new taxes. A bill to create a permanent fact-finding Tax Research Bureau has been introduced. This is a body we have never had before.

A series of bills has been introduced providing that officers, boards and commissions now appointed by the Governor for specific terms, and heretofore not subject to the direct control of the Governor, have been introduced. This is for the purpose of making the tenure of these offices at the pleasure of the Governor, so that he may be able to carry into effect his policies and be responsible for them. The final bills for this purpose will be introduced today. They are not for the purpose of disturbing or upsetting any properly functioning office or department, but they are for the purpose of providing an opportunity to consider these matters specifically and to take the action which seems to be desirable.

In other words, these bills will be before you for consideration and debate during this recess for determining how these matters should be handled. When you return in thirty days we can discuss what is best to be done.

One bill provides that the chief of the Division of Oil and Gas shall be appointed by, and hold office at the pleasure of the Governor. The chief of this division shall be a man experienced in this industry. The present law does not provide specifically for an experienced and qualified man to administer this great industry, an industry of a value of $321,000,000 at the well. This division is now under the supervision of the Director of Natural Resources. It is difficult to find a Director of Natural Resources that knows oil and gas, fish and game, forestry and Mining, and other natural resources. It is difficult to get hold of a good man for the chief of this division because he will not take a second place.

With 25 men representing the oil industry in Washington endeavoring to bring before Congress that there should be a tariff upon the import of oils into the United States, so California oils, and other oils in the United States, can have an opportunity to compete with oils from Mesopotamia, from Siberia, from Egypt and from other places where oil is being produced with low wages. We should have a chief of this division as an expert there with them.

And I am one for having a tariff that will keep outside goods from the United States if they can be produced at home. It is the policy of the Republican party to take care of the manufacturers of goods of the United States. Foreign oil is coming in here in competition with American oils.

The oil industry of California has sent these 25 men to Washington and I gave them credentials representing the State of California. This is as far as I could go with their problem.

The chief of the Division of Oil and Gas should be a man who knows something about oil. He should be familiar with the problems of the larger oil companies and the independent companies. He should be a man who comes from the oil industry of our State.

The same condition exists with mines. There should be a mining man appointed who would have charge of the Division of Mines, not appointed by the Director of Natural Resources—an appointee of the Governor—but a mining man himself, appointed by the Governor.

You are all aware that the mining industry of our State has been neglected; it has languished. The cost of producing gold does not give the miner a decent or a living wage. The price of gold is fixed at $20.67 a fine ounce. It has not changed. This is a situation which every Governor in the past and every President of the United States has always brought out in his inaugural address. Bills have been prepared to give relief to the industry. We have been instrumental in sending mining men to Washington, but we should have a mining man in charge of the Division of Mines and he should be responsible to the Governor.

What has the Fish and Game Commission, or the catching of fish, to do with the important problem of oil, or the important problem of the mining industry? Therefore I have respectfully suggested that something be done to take out of the Department of Natural Resources the question of oil and gas and the question of mining.

We need an urgency bill to provide funds to finish the State Building in Los Angeles. There is a shortage there of nearly $200,000 from the previous administration, brought about by the changing of the plans. This emergency measure will be before you today. We want to go ahead and finish up this building which is on its way. I was there looking at it on Tuesday of this week, and we should stop at nothing to go ahead with this building problem which you have worked so unitedly to send on its way.

In my inaugural message I made many suggestions to you and bills have been introduced here that will take care of, and open up the way for a discussion of, these matters when you reconvene here thirty days hence.

I have here before me a measure which really requires your serious thought. The foremost thought among our people—the problem of unemployment. Men and women are starving. We know that by the fact that the President of the United States has called for a contribution of $10,000,000 for the starving people. Cities of California have been assessed according to Red Cross calculations to help out this emergency of the people throughout the United States. I think that Congress should make this appropriation. If Congress could expend $253,000,000 in the experimentation of building wooden ships during the war and then get less than $2,000,000 for them, surely the saving of human lives throughout the United States calls for a similar response.

The drop in the stock market cost $35,000,000,000 according to the best calculations from the Carnegie Institute and from other statistics. The drop in other commodities cost $10,000,000,000, or a total of $45,000,000,000 from October, 1929, to December, 1930.

Surely we are going to overcome these difficulties of ours, because we overcame the war; and surely we will emerge from this crisis before long, and I hope soon. We are going to have a great period of prosperity. The profits of the railroads are increasing. You can read every day that more goods are being shipped. Captain Dollar told me the other day that his ships that six months ago were going out half full are now going out full from the piers of San Francisco. And the same thing applies to Los Angeles.

We must have faith, we must have hope, but you can't overtax the people—you can't make appeals for more taxes from the people. I know one city that appealed for $125,000, and thus far only $10,000 has been contributed. Congress ought to make an appropriation of $10,000,000 and thus tide us over the situation caused by the drought and the economic depression, and the pleas of the hungry and the pleas of the needy.

You are meeting the emergency with building, building, building, and we are going ahead providing relief for the unemployed. Here is a communication from Mr. F. W. Wood of the Legislative Counsel Bureau, a plea by the Archbishop Hanna, chairman of the Commission on Immigration and Housing asking for aid for the unemployed. (Reads letters from Wood and Archbishop Hanna.)

Here is a message presented to me from the State Unemployment Committee. (Reads message from O. K. Cushing, northern division; Harry J. Bauer, southern division; and Will J. French, general chairman.)

Mr. Lieutenant Governor, I have brought with me this proposed bill for introduction which I wish to leave with you with the recommendation that it comes from the Governor. If we can appoint a fact-finding body for taxes, why can not we also appoint a fact-finding body for unemployment, to find out what is wrong and the causes of unemployment. The rapidity with which you have taken up this great problem, a problem that comes upon us once in a decade, or once in a quarter of a century. This suggested plan comes from men who work for no compensation—men like Archbishop Hanna, men like Louis G. Block, men like the Jewish rabbi, who are well thinking men, who give their lives and their time and attention to help us solve these problems.

When I said there was a loss of $45,000,000,000 in this economic depression I said nothing about the taking of men's and women's lives, and I said nothing about the distress and poverty that has come from the mortgaging of homes, the schooling that has been taken away from children.

The relief suggested here is the manifestation of right thinking men elected to handle these problems; to do it quickly is far better than to linger over it. These are fine men that are at the head of this unemployment commission.

I do not want to detain you longer. I am happy, of course, and the proudest man to be the Governor of this great State of California. I may make mistakes, but I am trying to do the best I can. I am here to thank you again for the calls you paid, and I hope you will come often to call upon the Governor—the doors are always open. You will always find the Governor ready with a willing hand. I want to make a record of working with the Legislature, the bodies elected by the people. I am not a politician, but a builder. The man who is a success is the man who does things and gets things done, and the man who builds. I will make the dome of this great State Capitol just as famous throughout the United States as I have tried to make the dome of my native city of San Francisco.

Mr. Lieutenant Governor, it has been a very great pleasure to have had the opportunity of working with you. I admire your way, I like the way you do things, and I am always happy and pleased when you and Mrs. Merriam call, and the kindly cooperation you have shown me.

I wish you all a very happy, refreshing recess. I know they come from Alpine and El Centro and Alturas to say that this is the finest Senate that the State of California ever had.

Mr. Lieutenant Governor and members of the Senate, I forgot something, and if I may be pardoned for addressing you the second time—I have been invited to open the first Midwinter Imperial Valley County Fair at El Centro. I understand the governor of Lower California, the governor of Nevada and Governor Hunt of Arizona have been invited to attend. If I go, and they are there, I feel that I should return those calls. If Governor Hunt does not come there and the time permits I would like to go to Arizona and see if it is not possible that he and I come to some understanding about the Boulder Dam project. I feel that there should be cooperation between the governor of Arizona and the Governor of California. I, of course, wish to cooperate at all times with the Senate and the Assembly and I would like to have permission to leave the State, if the occasion arises. I may have to go to Mexicali, for the purpose of returning the call only. I make this explanation to you, Mr. Lieutenant Governor, for you might be the Governor of California for the brief time that I am absent.

RECONVENED.

At twelve o'clock and thirty minutes p.m., the Senate reconvened. Lieutenant Governor Frank F. Merriam, President of the Senate, in the chair.

Secretary Joseph A. Beek at the desk.

COMMUNICATION.

The following report was received, and on motion of Senator Fellom, ordered printed in the Journal:

REPORT OF STATE UNEMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE TO GOVERNOR JAMES ROLPH, JR.

DEAR GOVERNOR ROLPH: Unemployment is the most serious evil of the times. The service of the man or woman who works for wages is the most perishable thing that can be bought or sold. It can not be conserved, and, if not disposed of, is lost with every passing minute. Such loss is irreparable to the individual directly concerned and represents moreover corresponding waste and lasting harm to the community, where it produces a floating and discontented population, weakened family ties, deterioration of individual character, cheap and insanitary living places, slums, pauperization and crime. The worst of its results is that in a period of depression the first to suffer are those least able to protect themselves, who must earn today what they eat today and who if they can not work must perish.

The continued existence of this evil is a challenge to our civilization, and the utmost efforts of organized society should be immediately directed to its removal.

Temporary relief measures are necessary until remedies are found and applied, but though running into millions of dollars they are mere palliatives, and regardless of the amounts expended in such efforts the problem will continue to confront us. So from every view such measures are both costly and inefficient.

The State will fall far short of its duty if it does not initiate, without further delay, measures designed for the permanent solution of this oldest and worst of evils.

Unemployment has been classified as cyclical, seasonal, technological and chronic. Recurring periods of business depression with their incidental increase of unemployment; seasonal fluctuations in demand for labor; the constant and increasing displacement of the man by the machine and the residue of idleness that can not be attributed to any of these causes, all contribute to the problem. The facts regarding these causes, their respective effects and the proper methods of dealing with them are not sufficiently known or understood to permit of the formulation of definite remedies. There is no reliable information as to the numbers of unemployed and the causes of unemployment; the extent to which unemployment could be diminished if industry were better coordinated; the extent to which seasonal unemployment might be alleviated by deferring until slack times work that could be advantageously postponed; the extent to which public work could be so timed as to relieve unemployment; the means of dealing with the problem of displacement of man by machine; in short, there is no definite information available upon any of the many points that must be considered if the problem is to be successfully attacked.

We do know, however, that effective remedies can be applied. Much has been accomplished by private employers in the regularization of employment in various ways, such as stimulating consumer and dealer during off seasons; scheduling production so that employment will be fairly evenly distributed; developing side line and filler products; and using a flexible working day rather than alternately hiring and laying off workers.

The State should be prepared to assist employers with information and expert advice in putting such measures and others into effect.

The importance of such work need not be stressed. Regularization is simply better distribution. It will reduce unemployment, minimize the need for relief work, steady production, increase sales and profits and stabilize business activity.

To obtain the necessary information will involve the study of the State industries and the extent and reasons for their employment fluctuations; the possibility of stabilization of employment within industries and between industries. It will require also the accumulation of reliable information concerning employment opportunities, types of unemployed, migratory labor, foreign labor and kindred subjects. The public employment offices should be strengthened and the whole subject of supervision and regulation of private employment agencies requires careful and detailed study.

It is obvious that there will remain much unemployment that can not be cured by regularization. The State must find means of relieving those who can not be placed in gainful employment through remedial measures. Some way must be found to provide for the wage earner, means to carry him over periods when through no fault of his he can not get work. Some private employers have established funds to meet such emergencies. This phase of the subject requires careful study.

It is clearly the duty of the State to foster and develop the interest and cooperation of its citizens in determining and maintaining adequate machinery to solve these problems.

The committee recommends the establishment of a nonsalaried commission to study the question of unemployment; to formulate measures for its solution; to inform the public and stimulate interest in the subject; that the commission be empowered to employ a staff of established experience, ability and reputation; and that not less than $50,000 be appropriated to cover the expense. Also, that the necessary legislation be enacted immediately as an emergency measure.

STATE UNEMPLOYMENT COMMITTEE.

HARRY J. BAUER, Chairman Southern Group.
WILL J. FRENCH, General Chairman.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

January 23, 1931.

*To His Excellency, Hon. James Rolph, Jr.,
Governor of the State of California, and
The Members of the Forty-ninth Session of the Legislature.*

SIR: In accordance with Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 20, the Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation has the honor to transmit herewith its report.

Upon the basis of the committee's study of the tax system of California it is recommended:

Recommendation No. I.

A. That for the present the existing system of State taxation involving "Separation of Sources" be retained.

B. That the Legislature be empowered to make such further classifications and subclassifications of utility groups taxable upon their gross receipts for State purposes as may be necessary in order to achieve a more equitable distribution of the tax burden.

C. That the State Board of Equalization extend its studies with respect to the average tax burden on common property and the tax burden on utilities in order that more accurate comparisons between the tax burden on common property and the property of utility groups may be ascertained.

Recommendation No. II.

A. That a research department, consisting of technical experts in the fields of economics, valuation procedure and taxation, be created within the State Board of Equalization to operate under the coordinate control of the Governor, the Director of Finance and the State Board of Equalization, the function of which shall be to gather facts concerning all matters appertaining to revenue and taxation and submit such facts and recommendations thereon to the Legislature.

B. That the name of the State Board of Equalization be changed to "State Tax and Equalization Board."

Recommendation No. III.

That the constitution be amended to eliminate the requirement that the counties contribute an amount equal to the contribution of the State for elementary schools and a sum twice the amount contributed by the State for the support of high schools.

Recommendation No. IV.

That the board of supervisors of the county wherein school districts are located be empowered to review and revise the budgets of school districts.

Recommendation No. V.

That the research bureau, herein referred to, give consideration to devising ways and means of relieving the present excessive tax burden borne by homes, farms and all other real estate taxed locally.

Among other things attention is directed to the following suggestions which this committee believes will aid materially in accomplishing the above:

- (a) Proper tax limitation methods;
- (b) Transference to the State of certain general governmental functions now performed locally;
- (c) Determination of proper sources of new revenue;
- (d) Correction of certain abuses connected with special assessments.

* Appointed as member of Assembly, elected as Senator from Sixth District November 6, 1930.

Recommendation No. VI.

That the Legislature of the State take appropriate action designed to secure an amendment to section 5219 of the revised Statutes of the United States so that the State will be permitted greater latitude in the taxation of national banks.

Recommendation No. VII.

That the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act be so amended that the tax base will be increased by providing that the allowance for depletion in the case of oil and gas wells shall be based upon the provisions of the Federal Revenue Act of 1928 and other amendments to improve the administration of the act be made.

Respectfully submitted.

INTRODUCTION.

Due to the impoverished condition of the finances of this committee, caused by a failure of the appropriation made for it, it would have been difficult, indeed, to have compiled this report without material assistance from many sources. To accomplish this, many individuals and groups have generously assisted the committee in its labors of investigation. To these the committee desires to express grateful acknowledgment for the valuable assistance extended.

The committee is particularly indebted to the assessors of the State and their legislative committee; the offices of the State Board of Equalization; the Controller; the State Banking Department and Railroad Commission.

Individuals who have been more than responsive to the request of the committee for counsel and assistance and devoted to the committee's work a generous portion of their time and service, can not go unmentioned. These are:

Dixwell L. Pierce, Secretary of the State Board of Equalization; Fred B. Wood, Legislative Counsel; Assessor Russell L. Wolden, and his executive secretary, Harold Boyd, San Francisco; A. G. Mott, chief engineer, California Railroad Commission; Lester S. Ready, consulting engineer of the Railroad Commission; J. A. Crumb, statistician, State Banking Department; Von T. Ellsworth, research director; Lowell Miller, attorney, and Anthony Bledsoe, statistician, all of the staff of the California Farm Bureau Federation; Edward F. Treadwell of the California Constitutional Commission; Professor Carl Plehn, University of California; Professor Roger Traynor, University of California, and Vincent K. Butler, of the California Bar.

The resolution creating the Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation directs that the following program be carried forward, namely:

(1) An investigation and report of the 1927-29 California Tax Commission's several recommendations;

(2) An independent investigation and report of the entire system of local and general taxation of the State and the relative burden borne by all property in proportion to its value.

The 1927-29 California Tax Commission, under the direction of Dr. Robert Murray Haig of Columbia University, made a searching investigation into the present system of taxation submitting its recommendations in a report filed with Governor C. C. Young, March 5, 1929. This report proposed a complete revision of the existing tax structure of the State with these general ends in view:¹

(1) To bring about a more fair and equitable distribution of the tax burden;

(2) To collect from the corporations and public utilities doing business within the State a full and just contribution, but one which will not be unduly repressive or competitively disadvantageous;

(3) To remove real estate from its present exposed position where increased expenditures are almost inevitably translated into increased taxes on real property, resulting in unduly heavy burdens particularly on the farmers and small home owners;

(4) To exact a reasonable contribution from persons resident within the borders of the State without imposing burdens which will make residence in the State unattractive; and

(5) To promote the interest of the citizens of the State in exercising an intelligent control over the expenditures of the State and all of its political subdivisions, and to enable that control to be exercised without undertaxing special groups of taxpayers.

¹ Final report of the California Tax Commission submitted to the Governor of California, March 5, 1929, Sacramento, California State Printing Office, 1929, XXIV, 317 pages. Hereafter this document will be referred to as the 1929 report.

Hereafter this commission will be referred to as the 1927 commission or simply "the commission."² From the exhaustive analysis which it made of the tax system of the State, the 1927 commission became convinced that the present tax system, which was established in 1910, has outlived its usefulness and should be abandoned. The 1927 commission criticizes the present system in the following language:³

"Its faults are serious and fundamental. It discriminates against certain localities and favors others by the manner in which it withdraws property for State taxation which should properly be subject to local tax levies. It supplies the State with revenues in amounts determined by factors quite unrelated to its fiscal needs. The problem of adjusting the rates of the gross receipts taxes on public utilities so as to equalize their burden with the burden on common property is difficult, if not impossible to solve, and is provocative of disputes pregnant with unfortunate political consequences. It is impossible to adjust the rates on gross receipts so as to achieve a tolerable degree of equity as between company and company. Its advantages of simplicity and fiscal productivity are purchased at too high a price.

"The commission favors the gradual transformation of the present tax system, which is essentially an impersonal objective property tax, into a system consisting of three main divisions as follows: (1) An objective property tax of more restricted scope than the present property tax, imposed where the property is located, to serve primarily as a source of local revenue; (2) a comprehensive business tax, measured by net income arising from business carried on within the borders of the State, to serve chiefly as a source of State revenue; and (3) a personal contribution from each person resident within the State, apportioned according to ability to pay, the yield being divided between the State and the localities. Such a system would comprehend no measures which have not been thoroughly tested by experience in other states."

The 1927 commission proposed ten recommendations to make effectual their tax reform program. These recommendations with the commission's accompanying summarized comments follow:⁴

"First. That the operative real estate of all public utilities be valued by the State and then returned to the counties to be added to the local tax rolls and subjected to the same tax rates as are imposed upon the real estate of corporations and individuals. This step will eliminate the necessity of computing a rate to be imposed on public utilities because the rate will be determined automatically when the local property rates are struck. It will remove the cause for complaint arising from the counties which now suffer from the withdrawal of the operative property of the public utilities. It will almost completely solve the problem of the exemption of publicly-owned public utilities. These advantages will be gained at the cost of a considerable but not unreasonable increase in administrative difficulty. There must be a State assessment of the utility property returned, a State determination of the percentage of full value at which the utility property shall be added to the local rolls, and a distribution of the utility property to the various taxing districts of the State.

"Second. That a franchise tax be imposed by the State on all public utilities measured by their net income in the same manner and at the same rate as the similar tax on banks and other corporations. The effect of this action will be to establish ultimately a uniform business franchise tax on all corporations, the public utility corporations being treated exactly as other corporations. Another effect will be to strengthen materially the legal position of the new tax on banks.

"Third. That the State levy a direct tax on property in general, including the real estate of the public utilities, to make good any deficiencies in revenue which may arise after the adjustments herein recommended are made. Such a direct State tax will tend to increase the interest of the ordinary citizen and property owner in State expenditures. It will supply the State with an elastic element in its revenue system which will be of substantial assistance in scientific budgeting. Together with the step suggested in the first recommendation, it will give the State the opportunity to perform a badly needed service in supervising the local assessment of property. The commission estimates that such direct tax will be sufficiently light to make possible a reduction in the tax on ordinary real estate. Further substantial reductions in real estate taxes will be possible through the adoption of the fourth and sixth recommendations.

"Fourth. That the personal property taxes of corporations now paid to the localities and then offset against the new franchise tax be abolished (suitable compensation being made to the localities for the loss of revenue involved) and that the rate of this franchise tax, applying to all corporations, banks and public utilities, be then increased from 4 per cent to 5 per cent, in case the experience during the next three years indicates that such an increase is desirable. The acceptance of this recommendation will result in the elimination of an important part of the present personal property tax, a part of that tax which has proven incapable of fair application. It will simplify the task of the local assessor and enable him to perform the remainder of his work more satisfactorily. It will simplify the administration of the new franchise tax. It will place the ordinary business corporation on an exact equality with the banks and with the public utilities, assuming that the first and second recommendations relating to changes in the public utility taxes are adopted. Because of the very liberal definition of income, even with the rate of 5 per cent, California will compare favorably with other states with respect to the weight of its taxes on business.

"Fifth. That the taxes on insurance companies be modified (1) through the reduction of the ratio of the gross-premiums tax from 26 per cent to 2.25 per cent; (2) through the elimination of the privilege of offsetting real estate taxes against the gross-premium tax; and (3) through provisions designed to prevent evasion of the gross-premiums tax through reinsurance. The present taxes on insurance companies appear to be relatively heavy as compared with those imposed in other states and as compared with the taxes on other businesses in California. The present arrangement for a real estate offset results in the entire exemption of some companies from the gross receipts tax and is out of harmony with the general system of taxation which the commission is suggesting. It is not feasible to use net income as the measure of a tax upon insurance companies. The situation will be adjusted in the best manner at present possible by the adoption of the steps outlined.

"Sixth. That the people of the State be given an opportunity to record clearly their desire regarding the substitution of a personal income tax for the present tax on intangible personal property and such other classes of personal property as it may prove desirable to eliminate from the tax base. Viewed as a property tax the present tax on intangibles has no logical foundation. Viewed as a measure of personal taxpaying ability, it is without merit. If the people of the State desire an adequate and fair personal tax, they should establish a personal income tax. Such action should certainly be accompanied by the abolition of the property tax on intangibles and perhaps by the abolition of such other remnants of taxes on personal property as will remain after the adoption of the second, fourth and seventh recommendations. There is at present a constitutional provision of long standing authorizing the Legislature to impose an income tax, but a constitutional change would be necessary to abolish any part of the personal property tax. It appears to the commission that the present constitutional power to impose an income tax should not be exercised until the constitution has been changed so as to make a suitable adjustment in the personal property tax.

"Seventh. That the present local personal property taxes on motor vehicles be abolished and that the present State license tax of $3 be increased sufficiently to reimburse the counties for the loss of revenue involved. The local tax on motor vehicles is difficult and expensive to administer and it is widely evaded. The State license fee, imposed as a condition to the issuance of plates, is cheap to administer and impossible to evade. After the increase, the fees will still compare favorably with those charged in other states.

"Eighth. That sufficient authority be granted the Legislature to equalize the taxation of motor carriers. That inequity will still exist in spite of the adoption of the Wagy measure seems clear, but the commission has been unable to secure the data essential to the formulation of definite recommendations of bases and rates. It suggests that this problem be given further study during the next two years.

"Ninth. That the rates and exemptions of the inheritance tax be adjusted so as to reduce the burden falling on shares of widows and so as to reduce certain high rates which in operation are seldom imposed, but which nevertheless give a false appearance of severity to the law. The acceptance of this recommendation will remove the ground for much of the complaint against the inheritance tax and will place California in substantially as favorable a position to attract residents as that of any state.

"Tenth. That the elective State Board of Equalization be abolished and that in its place a permanent Professional Tax Commission be established, consisting of three members appointed by the Governor, with powers to administer the State taxes, to value the real estate of the public utilities for return to the localities, to determine the degree of undervaluation in the assessments of the various counties and to supervise and assist the local assessors. The adoption of this suggestion will provide California with the form of State tax administration which has been proved satisfactory by the experience of other states. The commission considers that recommendation fundamental and desires to condition its other recommendation for changes in the tax system upon its acceptance."

In addition to the above ten recommendations which form the basis of the 1927 commission's general report, it issued a special report¹ on August 10, 1928, analyzing the bank tax problem and related subjects and urging that a special session of the Legislature be called to consider an amendment to the constitution. The members of the commission were convinced that certain litigation and court decisions had placed in jeopardy State revenue estimated to be in excess of $22,000,000 and that emergency action was imperative. The Governor and the Legislature acted upon the advice of the commission and submitted the constitutional amendment to the electorate, and at the November 6, 1928, election the people authorized a new plan of taxing banks, corporate franchises, securities and solvent credits, which method was duly enacted into law by the Legislature of 1929.

The Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation is charged with the duty of analyzing various aspects of this recent legislation, as well as the ten recommendations set forth above.

In stating the main objectives of the problem which confronts the Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation, some current history in tax reform efforts has been mentioned.

A review of the earlier history of tax reform in California and a brief description of the present State system of taxation will make the sections of this report which follow more readily understood.

An additional reason for inserting this history is that the committee has been impressed by the fact that many well informed persons have confused ideas regarding the State taxation system, holding the opinion that local and State taxes have no relation to each other. However, the State and local methods under the systems of raising revenue are closely related and should be studied together.

HISTORY OF THE SYSTEM OF TAXATION IN CALIFORNIA.

Taxation prior to 1909.

Tax history in California for the past 50 years is divided into two major periods of approximately equal duration. Following the adoption of the present constitution of the State in 1879, there ensued an era during which the general property tax, established in that document as the basic source of public revenues, remained practically unchanged. This era came to a close in 1905 when general dissatisfaction with the operation of the system culminated in the creation of a Commission on Revenue and Taxation.² With minor changes and additions the labors of this commission continues to form the basis for the present revenue system.

Economic conditions prevailing in 1879 were free from many of the complexities which became prevalent twenty years later. When the constitution was adopted California was essentially a rural state with only the beginnings of population and industrial development. Except for the railroads, public utility operations as they are now known were scarcely conceived. The entire business and financial structure was comparatively simple. In such an era the general property tax, administered by local officials with a small measure of State supervision, seemed adequate. Provision was made for the central assessment of the roadbed, rolling stock, rails, rights of way and franchises of railroads operating in more than one county.³ These valuations were fixed by the State Board of Equalization and apportioned on a mileage basis among the several counties. Aside from this, all values, both for State and local tax purposes, were fixed by county and municipal assessors. Inasmuch as the State tax rate was applicable to valuations fixed by county assessors, power to raise or lower county assessment rolls as a whole was vested in the State Board of Equalization in an effort to prevent a low tax base in some counties at the expense of others in the application of a common State rate.

With the passing of the years it came to be generally recognized that the old system of taxation was failing to meet the requirements of fair and adequate public finance. Consequently, there was widespread interest in the work of the Commission on Revenue and Taxation, which held its organization meeting in the office of the Governor on May 27, 1905. In accordance with the provisions of an act of the thirty-sixth session of the Legislature meeting that year, the Senate and Assembly had appointed a joint committee composed of Senator J. B. Curtin and M. L. Ward, and Assemblymen H. S. G. McCarty and E. F. Treadwell. By the terms of the statute creating the commission, Governor Geo. C. Pardee was its ex officio chairman and was authorized to appoint an expert in taxation and public finance "to sit with said committee, and with said committee to constitute a Commission Upon the Revision and Reform of the System of Revenue and Taxation in Force in This State." Pursuant to this authorization the Governor appointed Carl C. Plehn as expert and at the organization of the commission the latter was elected its secretary.⁴

Ten meetings were held by this commission at various places in the State. Recognizing the value of stimulating the public interest and understanding of tax problems, in August, 1906, the commission published a preliminary report of 71 pages which was submitted to the members of the Legislature, sent to the newspapers and to all persons interested in the work of the commission. Effort was made to afford the several interests affected by the studies of the commission full and complete hearing.

From the very beginning of its work, the 1905 Commission on Revenue and Taxation announced a decision "not to search for or try to investigate untried or novel methods of taxation."¹ It seemed the consensus of opinion among the members of the commission that its recommendations should all be based upon "good American precedents."

In a summary of its findings the commission pointed out what it regarded as the principal faults in the old system and outlined the remedies recommended for their correction. At the outset, the view was expressed that the system then in force did not meet the demands made upon it because it had become antiquated and had not been revised to keep pace with the changing conditions. The commission's arraignment of the revenue system of that day contained these significant observations:

"It is full of inequalities, which impose a handicap upon the growth of the State, a handicap which only the vigor and inexhaustible energy of our people can carry.

"These inequalities twist and distort our industries and prohibit a symmetrical development of our resources. They place an undue burden upon agriculture especially; the foundation of our wealth, the one industry which most fully exploits the great natural resources of the State."²

Pointing out that the chief tax in the revenue system, called a general property tax, had in fact become a real estate tax, the commission said that only from 15 to 18 per cent of the entire taxes were levied upon personal property with the result that the amount of personal property on the tax rolls in 1905 was hardly larger than it was in 1872. It was further developed that money and credits escaped taxation almost entirely as did national banks, while State commercial and savings banks were taxed in a haphazard and unfair fashion.³

Further fault was found by the commission with the failure of equalization under the existing system and "the constant piling up of tax on tax on the same base." It was pointed out that if a city had a rate of $1.00 which might be "reasonable enough, there often came on top of that a county tax of another dollar, a few special school taxes or a newer tax or a tax for bonds until the effects of any inequalities in the original assessment would be multiplied anywhere from two to fivefold. It was found that counties with relatively undeveloped resources often had high tax rates on relatively high valuations, while some of the richest counties enjoyed low tax rates on low valuations. It was felt that the addition of a State tax to these merely intensified inequalities which were almost unbearable in the first place."⁴

Objection was made to the taking of revenue derivable by taxation from large general organizations like the railroads which, in the view of the commission, belonged by right to the people of the State at large and distributing it "most inequitably among the local divisions of the State which have no proper claim to it whatsoever." It was said that under the old system equitable adjustment of the burden of taxation between different classes of corporations was impossible and that in general the system was "a school for perjury" putting a penalty on honesty and paying high premiums for dishonesty.⁵

To remedy these serious faults the Commission on Revenue and Taxation recommended as the first step in reform separation of State and local taxation as to sources of revenue. It was believed that this would take the burden of State taxation from real estate and save the owners of real estate about $4,000,000 annually. Further advantages were found in the establishment of home rule in matters of local taxation and the abolition of any necessity for equalization between counties, thus curing the evils which State equalization failed to reach. The commission felt also that the new system would open the way for "a proper classification of the subjects of State taxation with a greater approximation to equality than is possible, without it."⁶

The final report of the commission was filed in December, 1906, and contained about 300 pages. It is a remarkably thoughtful and complete document and, despite modern trends in taxation which tend to discount anything not of recent origin, is still regarded as one of the most authentic and scholarly analyses ever made of the tax problems in an American state.

Following the presentation of this report the Legislature convening in 1907 acted favorably upon a proposed amendment to the constitution designed to carry out the recommendations of the commission. This amendment was voted upon by the people in 1908 and of the 202,081 votes cast upon the proposition, 87,977 were in favor of its adoption and 114,104 were against it. Four defects were pointed out and were said to have been the controlling factors in the defeat of the amendment. There were (1) the failure to provide the way for meeting any deficit which might occur in State revenues without again amending the constitution; (2) indefiniteness as to whether or not utilities would be exempt from payment of their share of bond taxes on indebtedness created prior to the adoption of the system of "separation of sources"; (3) omission to provide that a deficiency ad valorem tax would apply to property taxed for State purposes as well as to property taxed locally, and (4) failure to afford a means for changing any of the rates for State purposes in the event that it should later be discovered that they required adjustment. However, defeat of the proposition was not regarded as indicative of public satisfaction with the existing system or of absolute condemnation of the plan proposed as a substitute therefor.¹

Consequently, when the Legislature met in 1909 provision was made for the continuance of the Commission on Revenue and Taxation in order that its proposal might be revised to correct the defects believed to have been responsible for the initial defeat. Believing that the main work of the commission had been completed, Governor Pardee sponsored an amendment whereby the membership of the committee was reduced to three. As so reorganized that body consisted of Governor Pardee, as chairman, Senator J. B. Curtin and Professor Carl C. Plehn.² In September, 1910, the commission filed a report consisting of 77 pages and containing, among other things, a series of tables showing what the actual effect of the adoption of the proposed system of taxation would have been for the years 1905, 1908 and 1909. An amendment designed to meet the defects which were regarded as fatal to the plan as first submitted was endorsed by the Legislature and was placed upon the ballot for the consideration of the people at the general election in November, 1910. Basically, its objective was the same as the plan first submitted by the commission. It provided for the taxation of public utilities, such as railroads, gas and electric companies and telephone and telegraph companies, upon the basis of their gross receipts from operations. Special taxes were also provided for bank shares, insurance companies and corporate franchises. All these revenues were to go to the support of the State government, which would not be required to resort to a general property tax under normal conditions. Thus, a separation or segregation of sources of State and local revenues would be accomplished.

This proposition became known as Amendment No. 1. It was adopted by a substantial majority and forms the basis for the present tax system of California. Under it, revenues for State purposes have since been derived from sources other than the general property tax, the tax from which has been confined exclusively to local purposes, with the exception of a small tax for a few years levied to defray part of the expenses of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915.³

After the new system had been in force for some five years the Legislature convening in 1915 authorized another investigation of the general subject of taxation⁴ and Governor Johnson appointed as members of the State Tax Commission to make that study, Clyde L. Seavey, E. A. Dickson and Leo C. Gates. William V. Cowan acted as secretary of this body and in January, 1917, a report containing 280 pages was transmitted to the Governor.⁵ This report was preceded by an investigation covering a period of one year and four months comprehending the following salient features as listed by the commission:

A. Report upon all matters covering the subject of revenue and taxation in the State.

B. Report on the burden borne by general property and corporation property.

C. Report upon losses of revenue sustained by counties caused by the withdrawal of railroad property from general taxation.⁶

A large portion of the report of this body is devoted to a criticism of Amendment No. 1. Apparently, all that the Commission could concede in its favor was it had accomplished one specific thing—the separation of State and local revenues—and that it was an improvement over the old system so far as the separation of assessment of public utility property and franchises was concerned. Complaint was made that with the original rates the system would have resulted in financial paralysis of the State; that it had not brought about equality either as between the corporations and the people or as between the various classes of corporations; that it had not tended to correct the evil of undervaluation by counties; that it had not lightened the burden upon real property; that the provision requiring a two-thirds vote of each branch of the Legislature to increase rates was too stringent and that Amendment No. 1 had generally complicated the tax system by compelling "an altogether unnecessary dual method of fixing tax rates on the property of public utilities—first, a rate according to property value and then a corresponding rate upon gross receipts.”¹

Concluding its observations with reference to the operation of the tax system the State Tax Commission suggested remedies which it said could be grouped in two main headings, thus:

First. Changes in the statutory law which permanently and substantially will strengthen tax administration, either under present constitutional provisions or under amendments which may in the future be made to the constitution.

Second. Changes in the constitution necessary to eliminate present defective provisions, and to allow the development of a permanent and sound taxation body.²

Need for budgetary control of public expenditures was stressed and full value assessment of property was advocated. There was also advocacy of a personal income tax which it was said should be levied in part as a substitute for the tax on personal property in the form of household furniture, workmen's tools and farm machinery, and as a means of reducing the burden on other forms of property locally taxed. Urgent haste in adopting such a plan was suggested, the commission assigning as its reason the novel proposition that “California should inaugurate this form of taxation before the source has been dried up because of the application of the federal income tax.”³ Abandonment of the system of taxation for which provision was made by Amendment No. 1 and substitution thereof of one of three alternatives were proposed by the Commission. These alternatives were described as follows:

First. Change the system back to the basis of assessment and taxation of property ad situs, all taxable property to be levied against for State and local purposes, but retaining central assessment of public utilities, franchises and other liquid forms of property and a central control of all assessments, leaving to the State the separate sources of revenues such as inheritance, license and franchise taxes, and giving to the counties and cities an income tax in place of a tax on certain types of personality.

Second. Adopt a true separation of State and local revenue, leaving the tangible property for taxation in the locality where it is situated, necessitating a central assessment of the physical property of public utilities and the central control of all assessment for proper equalization, leaving to the State the income tax and other forms of special taxes and fees.

Third. Eliminate the present restriction of the constitution giving the Legislature freedom of action in dealing with the entire revenue system.⁴

The third proposal was in fact previously attempted by a constitutional amendment which was defeated at a special election in October, 1915, but notwithstanding this the Commission expressed a definite preference for it. By an overwhelming vote the people had apparently indicated an unwillingness to leave the matter of taxation wholly in the hands of the Legislature, and since then no Legislature has seen fit to submit to the people an amendment designed to accomplish the purpose of this proposal.

No legislative action followed any of the recommendations of the 1927 Tax Commission, and there was an interval of ten years before the creation of another tax investigating body was authorized. In the meantime certain adjustments of the rates of taxation on utilities and others taxed under the plan of Amendment No. 1 were effected and the State Board of Equalization undertook the taxation of automotive carriers on a gross receipts basis comparable to that employed with reference to other transportation agencies. The automotive carrier tax was begun under a legislative act of 1923 and has continued since then with its application restricted to common carriers operative over regular routes or between fixed termini under a constitutional amendment adopted in 1926.⁵

There may be mentioned as the most significant development in the interim, the inauguration of the gasoline tax in 1923, the administration of which has been placed in the hands of the State Board of Equalization in conjunction with its other duties. This tax has produced a constantly increasing flow of revenue for road purposes. Because of its almost ideal distribution of the tax burden it has achieved a well deserved popularity.

In 1927, following a suggestion in the inaugural message of Governor C. C. Young, the Legislature authorized the creation of the California Tax Commission to make findings and conclusions concerning revenue matters. This body was expected to report its “recommendations as to necessary changes in the existing system of taxation” so that they would be available at the next legislative session. The Governor was authorized to appoint the Commission without limitation as to constituency or number.

The first meeting of the California Tax Commission was held in October, 1927. The Director of Research came to California in February, 1928, and during the month of March following, a series of public hearings was held at various places throughout the State.

As an emergency measure designed to meet difficulties in bank taxation arising out of federal restrictions on the power to tax national banks, the commission recommended in August, 1928, the immediate abandonment of the bank share and corporate franchise taxes then in force and the substitution of a method according to or measured by net income. A provision of the preferential tax on intangibles was included in the proposal which was endorsed at a special legislative session called in September, 1928, for that purpose. The constitutional amendment covering these changes was adopted by the people at the general election in the following November, and in 1929 legislation was passed to carry the new plan into effect. Its operation is discussed in detail elsewhere in this report. On March 5, 1929, the Commission filed its final report containing ten major recommendations of a far-reaching character with reference to the entire revenue system of the State.

The present Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation was thereupon created to analyze these recommendations of the Martin Commission of 1927, and to consider tax problems generally for the purpose of future report at the 1931 session.
